(ARA) - It's one thing to live in a well-kept home, but it is also a healthy place to live? While your home may look sparkling clean to the eye, there are a number of invisible factors that can seriously affect the health of your entire family, and even contribute to a heart attack or stroke. Chief among them is the quality of the air your family breathes while indoors.

Up to 72 trillion microscopic irritants, or allergens, find their way into your home every day. They include dust, pollen, pet hair and dander, dust mites, mildew, lint, fungus, tobacco smoke, cooking grease and bacteria. Many of these particles are so small that your nose and throat can't filter them out and they can get deep into your lungs.

The Environmental Protection Agency, American Lung Association and American Heart Association all agree that exposure to airborne particles impairs breathing and increases the risk of asthma attack, stroke, heart attack and other serious illnesses. These fine particles enter your home through doors, windows or small openings in frames, walls and roofs. They stem from various sources outside including fossil fuel burning in vehicles and manufacturing plants, and from activities inside such as smoking or cooking.

No matter how hard you scrub and dust, your family can still breathe in tiny little particles that can aggravate allergies and asthma, and even affect the heart. However, it is possible to have a cleaner, healthier and comfier home. American Standard Heating & Air Conditioning has compiled a list of simple steps to help your family breathe easier.

1. Clean your home's air. Start with the basics by installing an effective and proven whole-home air cleaner. For example, studies show that the American Standard AccuClean(TM) whole-home air filtration system may help prevent an asthma attack, heart attack or stroke. With the highest clean air delivery rate in the industry, its patented air cleaning technology eliminates allergens and particles you don't want in your home, such as dust, pollen, bacteria, pet dander, mold spores, smoke and the common flu virus.

2. Control humidity.

Keep a relative humidity of 30 to 50 percent for optimal comfort and to control irritants like mildew. Controlling your household humidity can also kill dust mites, one of the most common allergens. Having a humidifier or variable-speed fan technology as part of your HVAC system can help you take control of your humidity.

3. Repair damages.

Have your HVAC system components, including furnaces, flues and chimneys, inspected before each heating and cooling season to repair any damages, holes or cracks. In addition to repairing your equipment, a certified HVAC dealer can inspect and clean your system's parts and pieces, ensuring they perform at optimal efficiency. It's not just your HVAC system -- it is equally important to maintain the other components of your home that impact indoor air quality including the roof, foundation and insulation.

By taking these simple steps you can ensure that you and your family won't be breathing indoor air full of contaminants and, ultimately, you'll all breathe easier. For more information on how to breathe easier at home or to locate an American Standard Heating & Air Conditioning dealer near you, visit www.american-standardair.com.

Save Money With Sophisticated Sun Control

(ARA) - Do you ever wish you could create a more comfortable home environment while also having a positive impact on the environment? This can be your reality with motorized awnings and window coverings. Window covering and awning motorization has many benefits, one of which is reducing heat gain and loss -- which creates a more energy efficient home.

By providing shade to windows and patio doors, interior temperatures can be significantly reduced, which will ultimately help to reduce cooling costs. According to an energy study conducted by the Professional Awning Manufacturers Association, more energy is lost through glass doors and windows than through any other part of the home. On a hot day, more energy comes through one square foot of glass than through an entire insulated wall. Solar radiation through glass is responsible for approximately 20 percent of the load on an air conditioner.

The exceptional insulating benefits of awnings and window coverings are enhanced with motorization that is so easy to use, you'll find yourself using them more frequently. At the press of a button, shades can raise or lower and awnings can extend or retract to meet your needs. Control options are compatible with both interior window coverings and awnings and can be used together or separately. They include handheld remotes, wireless wall switches and timers that you can program to operate shades at predefined times or sensors that can automatically lower shades and extend awnings when the sun reaches its strongest intensity. There is also a wind sensor for an awning that automatically retracts it upon detecting wind generated movements, so your investment is always protected.

In addition to their energy efficiency, motorized awnings are also a great addition to your home for other reasons. They make your deck or patio a more enjoyable area that extends your living space. You can turn your outdoors into a comfortable space that you'll use time and again with family and friends without the worry of intense sun or other weather factors. Having this available is even more important in today's economic climate because you can spend more time at home instead of incurring the cost of a vacation.

Automated window treatments also offer additional benefits beyond saving energy. Motorization provides a safe and easy solution for accessing window treatments that are hard-to-reach, whether they are in a high foyer or even above a bathtub or sink. They also allow you to reduce harsh glare when viewing television or computer screens, without interrupting your activity. Also, because they eliminate dangling cords, you create a safer environment for small children or pets.

Incorporating motorized window coverings and awnings into your home offers the best of both worlds by combining luxury with performance. "Automated retractable awnings and window coverings enhance the beauty of your home. Both come in a wide variety of decorative colors and designs which will give your home added value and create a space that you'll always enjoy. You have the pleasure of knowing that you're improving your quality of life while also reducing energy consumption," says Tracy Christmann, marketing manager for Somfy Systems, Inc.

To learn more about how you can bring your home to life with an automated retractable awning or window coverings contact Somfy at (877) 43-SOMFY to receive a free information kit. Visit them on the Web at www.somfysystems.com.

THIS IS A HAMMER

By Samantha Mazzotta

The ABCs of Handsaws

Q: I tried using the handsaw my dad gave me to cut a piece of wood, but it's the most useless thing I've ever had. It sawed about half an inch and then stuck, and I can't get it out. What's a better kind of saw to get? — Felicity in Columbus, Ohio

A: Handsaws require a bit of patience and practice to really get the hang of. And while the majority of do-it-yourselfers eventually invest in power saws to handle cutting jobs, learning to use a handsaw properly is still important. You'll learn a lot about proper cutting angles and some of the characteristics of different woods. Plus, it builds character, or so my dad used to say.

The type of handsaw to keep in your toolkit at all times is one marked "general purpose." This type of saw allows you to cut wood either along the grain or against the grain. (A "cross-cut" saw is designed to cut only against the grain.) The blade should be a little more than 2 feet long, with 8 to 10 teeth per inch (this will all be noted on the label). A good steel blade -- one that's not too floppy -- and a sturdy wooden handle are essential.

To properly saw a piece of wood, mark it with a line that indicates the spot and direction you want to cut. Clamp the wood to a sturdy surface (a workbench or between two sawhorses). Line up the saw with the mark and begin slowly sawing back and forth, smoothly but firmly. As it cuts into the wood, angle the saw at about 60 degrees vertically -- try to maintain that angle.

You will be able to feel whether the saw is cutting smoothly or not; don't fight or jiggle the saw side to side -- concentrate on a smooth back-and-forth movement using the entire length of the saw blade. Don't push the saw downward to force the cutting to move faster -- this is one sure way to snag the saw teeth in the wood.

As you near the end of the cut, be especially cautious. The wood will get wobbly and you'll need to hold one side steady to keep the last bit from splintering; plus, the instant the saw gets all the way through, it will fall downward and angle right back toward you. So don't saw too furiously at this stage.

Again, be patient as you saw. If your arm gets tired, take a break, then back at it. Don't let frustration get the best of you. The only way to get better at this is to keep doing it.

HOME TIP: A saw blade should be kept sharp, so look for a saw file at your home-improvement store (directions on how to use it should come with the file).

First-Time Homebuyer Workshop May 18, 20

Neighborhood Housing Services and South Shore Savings Bank will co-host a first-time homebuyer workshop Monday, May 18 from 5 to 9 p.m. and Wednesday, May 20 from 5 to 9 p.m.

The workshop will be held at South Shore Savings Bank, 1584 Main St., Weymouth.

Open to all, regardless of income, these seminars are educational and recommended for all potential first time homebuyers. Participants will have the opportunity to speak with a lender to discuss many mortgage options.

Also covered at the workshop will be the legal aspects of buying a home, importance of home and lead inspections and other information. This workshop is a prerequisite for first time homebuyer mortgage and grant programs. Attendance at both sessions is necessary to receive your home buying certificate.

There is a $15 fee per person. Call 617-770-2227, ext. 31.

Neighborhood Housing Services Offers Low Interest Loans

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore is offering no and low interest loans for housing rehabilitation for qualified Quincy homeowners.

Funds may be used for many home rehabilitation projects, including roofs, windows, heating systems, stairs, siding and more.

Over the past two decades, Neighborhood Housing Services has made low interest loans and grants to more than 450 eligible families in both single and multi-family homes throughout the city. NHS is a neighborhood-based affordable housing non-profit agency that also offers first-time buyer education/assistance.

Eligible homeowners must meet low and moderate income guidelines (up to $66,150 for a family of four).

Loans are available at eight 0 or 3%, depending on income and are payable up to 15 years. A portion of the loan may be a grant.

Additional funds are available for de-leading.

For more information, call Janice Tucker at 617-2227 ext. 22.

Seek Medical Gear To Loan

The Council on Aging is seeking donations of medical equipment that is no longer needed by the current owner but can be loaned to someone else.

The present highest priority is given to bath transfer seats. Call 617-376-1506.

(ARA) - Spring -- for many it's synonymous with warmer days, greener landscapes ... and a more plentiful housing market. Just as daffodils start popping up in neighborhoods across the country, so too will "for sale" signs adorn lawns across the country.

But given the current economy, does this mean that it's a good time to buy for first-time homebuyers? For Eric Wright, assistant director of admissions at Brown Mackie College - Louisville, who has more than 12 years of experience in the mortgage industry, the answer is yes. "It is probably the best time to buy or refinance ever," he says. "It is a buyer's market, and interest rates are the lowest they have been in history. Also, homebuyers can receive an $8,000 tax credit this year if they purchase a home by Dec. 1, 2009."

Formerly a broker, banker and lender dealing with residential and commercial loans, Wright currently helps mainly friends and family members in meeting their financial needs.

In addition to the low interest rates most mortgage lenders are currently offering, the affordability of homes is rising. The National Association of Realtors Housing Affordability Index reported a 13.6 percentage point increase to 166.8 in January, which according to the association, signifies a new record high. In simple terms, this means that a single family earning nearly $60,000 annually could afford a home that costs $283,400 with a 20 percent down payment.

A year ago, a single family with the same earnings and down payment could afford a $263,300 home.

Low interest rates. Check. Affordable pricing. Check. That's all grand, but how do you know if buying now is a good time for you? "If you are first-time homebuyer who is planning on purchasing a home in the near future, the best advice I can give is to evaluate your financial situation," says Wright. "Pull a credit report on yourself, calculate all your debt, know your liquid assets and have reserves, and expect a few extra monthly bills like homeowner dues, waste management and water."

Wright also conveyed that it's important to know your debt-to-income ratio, as this is how an underwriter will determine your income qualifications. To get this number, add up your entire monthly outgoing bills and divide the total by your monthly gross income. The key is to be under 45 percent.

Next step? Shop around. Wright advises to get at least three to five offers from lenders to compare interest rates and fees, and emphasized that you should never pay any application fees. He also says that it's important to know what documents lenders require to help facilitate the approval process, including:

- A full month of pay stubs
- W-2s for the past two years (If you're self employed, you'll need to provide your tax returns in full.)
- Two months of bank statements

• Two months of statements related to your 401(k), savings or any other liquid savings account

• If currently renting, proof of rental payments and landlord's contact information

The Federal Housing Administration insures loan products that benefit first-time home buyers -- many of which offer down payments as low as 3.5 percent of the purchase price. After meeting FHA credit qualifications, borrowers are eligible for 97 percent financing. The upfront mortgage insurance premium can be financed into the mortgage upfront. For more information on FHA programs, visit: www.hud.gov/buying/index.cfm.

Take a Volunteer Vacation

With budget cutbacks across every segment of society, more and more public programs will be depending on volunteers to keep projects going. If sitting beachside or sleeping in a hammock isn't for you, consider taking a volunteer vacation this summer.

On a volunteer vacation, you won't be paid for your work. In fact, you'll be responsible for your own transportation to the site and may pay for your food and lodging while there. Lodging can vary from a sleeping bag on the ground to a shelter or a motel, and you might be cooking your own food, depending on the program. Still, a volunteer vacation can be a way to help others, and some of your expenses might be tax deductible.

Charity Guide (www.charityguide.org) has an extensive section on volunteer vacations. You can volunteer at a camp for children with special needs, conduct environmental research, track whales during migration, help to rehab rescued animals at wildlife sanctuaries, act as photojournalist in any number of worthy causes or help preserve historic trains and railroads, among dozens of choices.

The American Hiking Society (www.americanhiking.org) concentrates on building and maintaining trails across the country. Put together a crew and sign up for a week-long project.

Wilderness Volunteers (www.wildernessvolunteers.org) is a nonprofit that promotes volunteer service in wild lands and public parks. Read the information carefully to gauge your fitness level before signing up.

By working with Habitat for Humanity (www.habitat.org) you could have the opportunity to help build a home for a local family.

Check Volunteer Match (www.volunteermatch.org) for the most up-to-the-minute volunteer needs. This is the site to check if you have time off and want to volunteer locally for a day or a week, but can't afford to go away.

Do your research before you pick a program. Many projects are ongoing, and you might not see a lot of progress during the time you're there -- you'll be picking up where a previous group of volunteers left off.

You don't necessarily need to travel overseas to find work that needs to be done. There's plenty of need right here. You might even find work to be done in your own town or state, and not have the expense of leaving home.

NQ/Quincy Baseball Tournament a Success

Raiders Drop Championship Game To Oliver Ames

By SEAN BRENNAN

Mother Nature, the springtime version, finally made her appearance in Quincy late last week, and the timing couldn't have been better.

The annual North Quincy/Quincy Baseball Tournament, a four-team event featuring Milton, Oliver Ames, Quincy and North Quincy High Schools, was delayed two days due to rainy weather, but when it finally kicked off Thursday at Adams Field, good baseball was played.

North Quincy met Quincy in the first-round (an 8-0 Red Raider victory) on Thursday, while Oliver Ames squared off against Milton (Oliver Ames won). The tournament's second day saw Quincy drop the consolation game to Milton, 12-4, and North fall in defeat in the championship game, 12-9, to Oliver Ames.

Not necessarily the final outcomes the two Quincy teams were looking for, but win or lose, the tournament was a certifiable success.

"It was a good event with great baseball played both days," said NQ head coach John Fidalgo. "The weather was perfect and it finally felt like we were playing in conditions that are suitable for baseball. All four teams played hard and the fans seemed to enjoy the competition. It was a success."

For North Quincy, the tournament began with a big win over archrival Quincy. The Red Raiders had lost to the Presidents on April 15, 4-2, so this game was a chance for the team to enact some revenge, and behind the pitching of senior Joe Edgerly (complete game, two-hitter), that is exactly what happened.

Facing Quincy junior Kevin Keith for the second time in a week, North opened the scoring in the third inning. John Ainsley (three RBI) drove in the game's first runs with a clutch one-out, two-run single. The Raiders continued their offensive assault as Matt Jay (two hits, two runs), Lamonte Toombs (three hits, RBI), Paul Rear-don (hit), Matt Rodriguez (hit, two runs) and Danny Russell (two hits) battered Quincy pitching.

The win over Quincy matched North's win total from all of last year (nine) with eleven games still to be played.

"Keith shut us down the last time we saw him (a complete game shutout) but this time around we got to him," said Fidalgo about his team's performance at the plate. "We showed better patience at the plate, but sometimes even the best pitchers don't have their best stuff. He is a great kid and a very talented pitcher, but we just got to him in this game."

"But Joe pitched great for us. He one-upped Quincy in this game and our offense gave him enough to work with. It was a nice win because we did not play well or hit the last time we played them."

With their win over Quincy secured, North Quincy earned the right to go up against Oliver Ames, one of the better teams in Eastern Massachusetts, in the championship game. The Raiders battled for seven innings, but in the end, Oliver Ames won 12-9.

The Raiders fell behind the eight ball early, trailing 7-0 entering the second inning, but a seven-run rally in the bottom of the frame, tied the contest at 7-7. Oliver Ames would score five more times against the Raiders' bullpen, and a late-game rally by the Raiders fell just short.

NQ's John Ainsley and Matt Jay finished the title game with three RBI each.

"The championship was a good game, but we just came up a little short," added Fidalgo. "Oliver Ames jumped out to an early lead, but we fought back to tie it. Unfortunately they added on in the late innings and we just ran out of outs."

"It was obviously not the outcome we were looking for but they are a very strong team, one of the best in the area, and we played with them most of the game. Overall the tournament was a lot of fun."

The Raiders begin the second-half of their schedule this week with games against Whitman-Hanson High School (today, Wednesday at 3:30 p.m., Adams Field) and on the road Friday versus Duxbury HS.

"We have been playing good baseball so far this season," added Fidalgo. "We have already matched our win total from last season and need just three more wins to qualify for the post-season."

"It has all come down to our great senior leadership and guys stepping it up de-

12th Annual Lions Run/ Walk A Success

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy Lions Club 12th Annual Run/Walk for Sight took place last Saturday, under clear skies, at Pageant Field. Over 200 participants, including those that took part in either the children's 1K race or the adult 5K run/walk, helped to raise $10,000 to benefit eye research and the Club's community service activities, including providing free eye exams and free eye glasses for local residents in need, the offering of free vision and health screenings and providing college scholarships to local high school students.

It was a beautiful day of local community activism and weather, for a great cause.

"This event brought out the best in people and brought them together to help our mission for helping the visually impaired," said Joe Reardon, President Quincy Lions Club. "The weather was beautiful and we raised a lot of money to help our cause."

"We would like to thank all the participants and all of our sponsors and especially our chairperson Loretta McTiernan. It was a successful day."

The Quincy Lions Club will continue in its efforts to raise awareness for their cause with "An Evening with Bill Brett," a local celebrated photographer, who will be talking about his new book Boston: A Year

The event costs $30 and tickets and additional information may be obtained by visiting www.quincylionsclub.org or by calling 617-328-1384.

"This is just another way for us to raise awareness and money for the cause," added Reardon. "It should be an enjoyable night for everyone."

Now back to the Lions Club Run/Walk. The following are the results for the top runners at Saturday's race.

Men's 19-29

Luke Dodge, Quincy: 18:50, first-place; Matt Schiller: 19:05, second-place; Scott Pettingell: 20:42, third-place; Suranjit Tilakawardane: 21:26, fourth-place; Ben Johnson: 23:38, fifth-place; Chris Cassani: 24:06, sixth-place; Gregory Kirschner, Quincy: 25:06, seventh-place; Scott Hays: 26:22, eighth-place; Jared Howard: 27:28, ninth-place and Tommy Leung: 27:38, tenth-place.

fensively. When we play defense, our pitching can just throw it up there and let the team get outs. Our offense has been solid, and if we continue to get better in all three phases, we should have a strong finish to the year."

The Quincy Presidents (3-5 overall) ended the tournament with a 0-2 record. In the consolation game, the Presidents dropped a 12-4 decision to Milton High School. Quincy's Colin McCarthy finished with two RBI.

The Presidents will host Randolph High School on Friday at 3:30 p.m. at Adams Field.

Notes: The Raiders currently have a .308 team batting average... Ainsley is hitting .329 and junior Ryan Louis leads all regulars with a .426 batting average...

THE RAIDERS RYAN LOUIS drives the ball into the outfield against Quincy on April 15 at Adams Field. NQ lost 4-2 but defeated Quincy, 8-0, in the first-round of the NQ/Quincy Baseball Tournament last week.

Joe Edgerly (three wins) helped the Raider pitching staff post a respectable team ERA of 4.43.

Morrisette Legion Tryouts Begin This Weekend

Tryouts for the Morrisette Post #294 American Legion baseball team will start on Saturday and Sunday (May 2-3), at 12 noon, at O'Rourke Field on Quarry Street, West Quincy.

Residents of Quincy, born on or after January 1, 1990 are eligible to tryout for this year's team.

Morrisette will be one of ten teams competing in Zone 6. Along with Morrisette, teams from Quincy, Milton, Braintree, Weymouth, Holbrook, Cohasset, West Roxbury, Jamaica Plain and Stoughton will be vying for the Zone 6 title.

Each team will play 22 games, beginning on June

3 and concluding July 10, with Zone, Sectional and State playoffs to follow the regular season. This year's State Tournament will be held at Pope Park, Acushnet, MA on July 25.

Tryouts will continue at O'Rourke Field on Saturdays and Sundays through the month of May.

Protecting Your Lips: The Forgotten Cancer

Don't just give lip service to a severely peeling or flaking mouth.

Oncologists say a few weeks of those symptoms could indicate lip cancer.

"Lip cancer is a disease we don't talk about, yet it's a real danger, especially for people who get lots of sun exposure," said Dr. Paul Harari, head and neck oncologist at the University of Wisconsin Paul P. Carbone Comprehensive Cancer Center (UWCCC).

The National Cancer Institute (NCI) reports that there are 23,000 new oral-cancer cases each year. The NCI says 5,400 people die each year from oral cancer. Harari says lip cancer represents only a fraction of new cases each year because the disease is not accurately reported. In addition, few people think about protecting their lips from sun.

Harari says people don't realize that they should spread sunscreen on their lips as well as on their face and body when out in the sun. He recommends sunscreen with 30 SPF or more.

"The bottom lip is more likely than the upper lip to develop cancer because it gets more sun," Harari said. "Cancer on the upper lip is rare and can be more lethal than cancer of the lower lip."

People living in warm climates are at greater risk of getting lip cancer, technically identified as skin cancer. Harari says smokers, people who chew tobacco and spend a lot of time in the sun have an even higher risk.

Symptoms of lip cancer include:

- an irritated area that can look and feel like chapped lips or a cold sore
- crusty patches on the lips
- bleeding
- lip pain.

Harari says anyone with symptoms that last more than three or four weeks should see a doctor. He says when a lip malignancy is caught early, the cure rate is 90 percent or more. Harari believes early detection has improved over the last few years.

"For the past 10 years or so, dentists have been doing routine oral-cancer screenings for their patients. That has accounted for an improvement in early detection," said Harari.

Harari estimates that every year, UW oncologists see a dozen patients who have been referred from dentists following an oral screening.

Free oral-cancer screenings will be held all over the U.S. during Oral, Head and Neck Cancer Awareness Week from April 21-May 3, 2009. For more information on head and neck cancer, go to: <http://www.uwhealth.org/comprehensivecancer-center/headandneckcancer/10340>.

Food Allergy Safety 101

(ARA) - With the number of children with life-threatening food allergies on the rise, practicing food allergy safety is more important than ever. From closely reading labels to understanding hidden allergens and food manufacturing processes, there is a lot that can be done to keep children free of allergic reactions.

According to the Center for Disease Control (CDC), four out of every 100 children under age 17 -- or three million children -- have a food allergy. The recent CDC study, "Food Allergy Among U.S. Children: Trends in Prevalence and Hospitalizations," also shows an 18 percent increase in children with food allergies since 1997. And the number of children hospitalized for food allergies jumped from 2,600 in the late 1990's to 9,500 annually in recent years.

These babies and children have immune systems that attack specific foods as if they were viruses or unwanted bacteria, causing painful -- and sometimes life-threatening -- allergic reactions.

Preventing an allergic reaction sounds simple: Avoid the food that is causing the trouble. But it is more difficult than it sounds. When browsing the grocery store shelves or formula aisle at the pharmacy, it is not always clear what exact ingredients a product contains or if it is manufactured in an entirely allergen-free facility.

Avoiding allergic foods -- even in small amounts -- is also more important than many people understand.

"A food allergy reaction is serious," says Registered Dietician Steven Yannicelli, director of science and education for Nutricia North America. "In severe cases, children may experience life-threatening anaphylaxis, which prevents them from breathing and can be fatal if not treated immediately. Other symptoms, like diarrhea and vomiting, are less severe but can still have dramatic negative effects on a child's health and well-being."

Here are several tips to protect children from coming in contact with foods allergens.

Labeling

• Read all food labels carefully to ensure they do not contain allergens.

• Only purchase foods and formulas with clearly labeled ingredients.

• Research foods and ingredients before food shopping or dining out.

• Avoid foods with ingredient names you do not recognize until you have researched them carefully.

Hidden Allergens

• Watch out for alternate names for allergens. For example, milk often shows up on labels as "casein" or "whey." There are other hidden ingredients that may indicate casein or whey, so be careful.

• Check ingredients in every food and formula. Allergens can show up in unexpected places like salad dressing and nutrition bars.

Manufacturing Facility

• Understand the environment in which the foods and formulas you give your child are manufactured.

• For the most peace of mind, purchase products manufactured in 100 percent allergen-free environments. For example, many food manufacturers put "manufactured in a peanut-free facility" on food labels. However, many manufacturers of formulas do not. Make sure you ask your doctor about formulas manufactured in a 100 percent dairy-free environment.

No Cure for Heartburn, but Medicines
Can Help

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: In 2004, I had a scope put down my throat and into my stomach. The doctor said I had a hiatal hernia and signs of acid reflux. He put me on Prilosec. It stops my heartburn very well. I have been on it ever since. If I miss two doses, the heartburn returns. Is it safe to take this medicine for long periods of time? -- L.K.

ANSWER: Prilosec (omeprazole), Aciphex, Protonix, Nexium and Prevacid are proton-pump inhibitors, the strongest medicines for decreasing stomach acid production. The manufacturers of these medicines suggest a four-to-eight-week course of medicine. The medicines don't cure heartburn. They suppress it as long as a person takes them. So what's a person to do when heartburn returns after a course of therapy? Another kind of medicine, like Zantac, can be used. Common antacids often work. Avoiding foods that stimulate acid production is another way to control symptoms.

However, if acid reflux is severe, then the proton-pump medicines are the best. Evidence suggests that long-term use might make a person more apt to have a hip fracture. That danger can be partially offset by taking calcium and vitamin D. Many people remain on these medicines for extended periods. You have to make this decision for yourself.

The booklet on hiatal hernia, acid reflux and heartburn focuses primarily on the common heartburn problem and its treatment. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I would like to know about the side aches I get when I walk or run. Why do they occur? Do I walk them off or take a break until they go away? -- E.H.

ANSWER: What you call side aches, others call side stitches. Everyone gets them. Some feel they are spasms of the diaphragm -- the large, thin muscle that serves as a partition between the chest and abdominal cavities and the muscle that is the principal breathing muscle. Or they might be due to too much food or fluid in the digestive tract. Some believe a decreased blood flow to the diaphragm is the cause. In truth, no one knows.

One way to get rid of them is to raise both your arms overhead while taking a deep breath. Then lower your arms while exhaling and simultaneously contracting your abdominal muscles. Another favored treatment is to bend the knee on the side of the pain while pressing your fingers into the painful area.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have what doctors call black hairy tongue. Can you tell me about it? -- Anon.

ANSWER: Black hairy tongue, aside from its looks, is an innocent condition that comes from the elongation of tongue papillae, tiny projections from the tongue's surface. Gently brushing the tongue three times a day with toothpaste, baking soda or 3 percent hydrogen peroxide can usually get rid of it. If it's not gone in a month, return to the dentist or doctor for a follow-up exam.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

DENTISTRY
for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

BONE DRUG MAY SPUR JAW DAMAGE

While it has been known for some time that injections of the class of antioestrogens drugs known as bisphosphonates might trigger jawbone decay after certain dental procedures, the pill forms of these same drugs have now been shown to have the same side effect. According to recent research, oral treatment with alendronate (Fosamax) for as little as a year was found to increase the risk for jawbone disease after a tooth extraction or other dental procedure. Analysis of the medical records of patients who had taken alendronate pills showed the four percent displayed active jawbone decay, or osteonecrosis. The cases, which were related to tooth extractions and denture-related ulcers, should prompt greater care and awareness of this potential problem.

We provide complete, quality dental care for all your oral health needs. You can feel confident that a professional and dedicated staff performs all services, and you'll find our staff to be both friendly and knowledgeable as well. We examine the oral cavity, the mouth. How are the teeth? Is there gum disease? How do the teeth fit together? Are there signs of infection, cancer, or other disease? We invite you to call 617-479-6220 to schedule your next appointment. We are dedicated to your oral health and offer a variety of procedures to help achieve a beautiful smile. Our office is located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. In light of the potential for bisphosphonates to cause jawbone disease, dental patients should be sure to make their dentist aware that they are taking these drugs.

Men's Group At Union Congregational Church

The Men's Group at Union Congregational Church, 136 Rawson Rd., Wollaston, will be studying the apostle Paul's Letter to the Philippians at its Sunday 7 p.m. meetings.

For the next four weeks, the group, under the leadership of Pastor John Swanson, will read and reflect on the timeless truth of God's Word as is revealed in this letter to the church at Philippi in ancient Greece.

Special attention will be given to Paul's definition of community, the marks of the Christian life and the serenity of the believer in the face of life's trial and tribulations.

The Men's Group of Union Congregational Church meets every Sunday evening at the church from the Sunday after Labor Day until the Sunday before Father's Day.

All men of the church as well as the community are invited to attend.

For more information, call the church office at 617-479-6661.

United Methodist To Host Volunteer Teacher Program

Last year, Somer O'Brien, organist and choir director at Quincy Community United Methodist Church, took a six-month sabbatical from her musical duties and volunteered to teach in the jungles of Ecuador.

The church strongly supported O'Brien's volunteerism, and took up a collection of art supplies for her to use while teaching. During the months O'Brien was in Ecuador, many at the church avidly followed her adventures by e-mail and downloaded her incredible photographs.

Upon her return, the United Methodist Women, one of the church's three women's groups, asked O'Brien to share her sabbatical with the church and community. She agreed to do so.

On Wednesday, May 20, at 7:30 p.m., O'Brien will present a program about her months in Ecuador. Refreshments will be served, and everyone is invited to attend this informative evening.

The church is located at 40 Beale St. in Wollaston. For more information, call the church office at 617-773-3319.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK*SCOTT DEWARE

Most families will some day be confronted with pre-post death arrangements for some one they loved. Today making decisions in advance of need is becoming more and more common among those who believe that pre-planning eases the post-death experience for survivors. Here are some definitions which could help you decide what to do.

DEWARE FUNERAL HOME PRE-PLANNING - "Pre-planning means the obtaining of information for consideration and discussion as to a funeral or alternate to it by an individual, a family or another group. PRE-ARRANGING - "Pre-arranging" means the setting forth in some detail the preferences of an individual, family or group. Usually pre-arrangements provide guidance to the survivors. PRE-FINANCING - "Pre-financing" means the making available of funds in such forms as insurance, bank accounts and trust accounts in which management and benefits of the funds are reserved to the person who creates them to defray the costs involved in a pre-arranged funeral or alternate type of services. PRE-PAYMENT - "Pre-Payment" means the payment of funds and relinquishing of the control thereof to another party in exchange for an agreement that the receiving party will provide a specified type of funeral whenever the need arises, subject to state law...

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might need to do a bit more investigating before making a career move. You do best when you come armed with the facts. A personal matter still needs tending to.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your creativity plus your good business sense once more combine to give you an important advantage in a difficult workplace situation. An ally proves his or her loyalty.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Avoid rushing into something just because it offers a break from your usual routine. Take things a step at a time to be sure you're moving in the right direction.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Bouncing back from a disappointing incident isn't easy, but you should find a welcome turn of events emerging. Spend the weekend with someone special.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) An incomplete project needs your attention before someone else takes it over and uses it to his or her advantage. There'll be lots of time for fun and games once you get it done.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Doubts involving a potential career change need to be resolved quickly so they don't get in the way when you feel you're finally ready to make the big move.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Looking to blame someone for a workplace problem could backfire if it turns out you've got the wrong "culprit." Best to get more facts before acting on your assumptions.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Patience might still be called for until you're sure you finally have the full story that eluded you up till now. A trusted associate could offer valuable guidance.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Look into your recent behavior to see if you could have caused the coolness you might now be sensing from a loved one. If so, apologize and set things straight.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Easing up on your social activities allows you to focus more of your energies on a long-neglected personal matter. You can get back into party mode by the weekend.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A dispute with a colleague can be resolved peacefully once you both agree to be more flexible about the positions you've taken and allow for more open-minded discussions.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Volunteering to take on added responsibilities could be a risky way to impress the powers-that-be. Do it only if you're sure you won't be swept away by the extra workload.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your sense of self-awareness allows you to make bold moves with confidence.

Health Department, City On Alert For Swine Flu

health emergency in Massachusetts.

"It means the government can move medication from the strategic national stockpile," said Scheele.

The Bay State has received 200,000 anti-viral courses of treatment as well as a shipment of masks and gowns but they have not been distributed to the cities and towns.

"Masks instill fear," said Scheele. "They are only used in nursing homes and hospitals. Our job now is to get education out to the people. We preach the same thing we do for seasonal flu --- wash your hands and stay home if you're sick."

The State DPH issued a "fact sheet" containing the following information:

"The most common symptoms of swine flu, like seasonal flu, are fever, cough and sore throat and can include body aches, headache, chills and fatigue. Some people have diarrhea and vomiting.

"People sick with any type of flu should make sure to drink enough fluids, get plenty of rest, eat healthy foods, wash hands frequently and stay home to avoid spreading the flu to other people. The kinds of drugs used to treat seasonal flu, called anti-virals, can also be used to treat swine flu.

"If you have symptoms of influenza as described above, and especially if you have recently traveled to an area where there have been human cases of swine flu, contact your health care provider who will decide what kind of testing and treatment is right for you.

"If you think you might have swine flu and you need to see your health care provider, you should call ahead and let them know you might have the flu. That way, precautions can be taken to avoid the spread of flu to others.

"If you have recently traveled in an area affected by swine flu, be watchful for any flu-like symptoms. Stay home to avoid exposing others and contact your healthcare provider; your healthcare provider will decide what testing and treatment is right for you.

"You can protect yourself and others from swine flu the same way you can protect yourself from seasonal flu. Avoid holding, hugging, kissing or shaking hands with anyone who has a cold of the flu. Wash your hands often with soap and warm water, or use an alcohol-based sanitizer. Avoid touching your nose, mouth or eyes. Clean things that are touched often like door handles, telephones, etc.

"All people with swine flu who are not hospitalized and their household and other close contacts will need to stay home to prevent spread of illness to other people.

"Things people who have swine flu and who are cared for at home should do include:

- Check with their healthcare provider about any special care they might need if they are pregnant or have a health condition such as diabetes, heart disease, asthma or emphysema.

- Check with their healthcare provider about whether they should take antiviral medications.

- Stay home for at least seven days after onset of illness or until free of symptoms (including fever) for 24 hours, whichever is longer.

Help With Simple Wills Monthly

Atty. Ed Conroy will be at the Council on Aging office, 83 Saratoga St., North Quincy, every third Friday of the month to assist the elderly with a free explanation of simple wills.

Call 617-376-1506 for an appointment.

- Get plenty of rest.
- Drink clear fluids (such as water, broth, sports drinks, electrolyte beverages for infants) to keep from being dehydrated.

- Cover coughs and sneezes. Clean hands with soap and water or an alcohol-based hand rub often and especially after using tissues and after coughing or sneezing into hands.

- Never cough in the direction of someone else.

- Avoid close contact with others --- do not go to work or school while ill.

- Be watchful for emergency warning signs that might indicate you need to seek medical attention

- Get medical care right away if the sick person at home has difficulty breathing or chest pain, has purple or blue discoloration of the lips, is vomiting and unable to keep liquids down, has signs of dehydration such as dizziness when standing, absence of urination, or in infants, a lack of tears when they cry or has seizures, is less responsive or becomes confused.

And don't be afraid to eat properly handled and cooked pork and pork products. Swine flu viruses are not spread by food but by coughing or sneezing or touching something infected with the virus.

Friendly Visitors Sought At COA

The Quincy Council on Aging is seeking volunteers to call on the elderly who live alone and would welcome a friendly visitor.

The COA is also seeking seniors who live alone and would like a friendly visit themselves.

Call the COA at 617-376-1508 and ask to speak with Lena Trough, the friendly visitor coordinator.

The Council is mandated by law to do background checks on all volunteers.

Dr. Mustaque Chachar Joins QMC Medical Staff

Quincy resident Mustaque A. Chachar, MD, has joined the medical staff of Quincy Medical Center.

Dr. Chachar, a neurologist with special interest in sleep medicine, recently completed a fellowship in sleep medicine at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center/Harvard Medical School.

Prior to that, he completed an internship in internal medicine at Brookdale Hospital & Medical Center in New York and residency in neurology at Emory University in Atlanta, GA. and is involved with ongoing research projects.

Dr. Chachar earned several academic awards in medical school at Liaquat Medical College in Hyderabad, Pakistan. He completed his residency in internal medicine and surgery at Liaquat University of Medical & Health Sciences in Pakistan before moving to the United States.

Quincy Medical Center, a 196-bed acute care community-teaching hospital, provides quality, personalized and comprehensive medical and surgical services to patients throughout the South Shore. A private, nonprofit hospital, QMC has played a vital role in the community since 1890, serving the needs of its diverse patient population without exception.

QMC is a clinical and academic affiliate of Boston University School of Medicine and Boston Medical Center.

Barry Felippin Graduates Army Unit Station

Army National Guard Pfc. Barry Felippin has graduated from One Station Unit Training (OSUT) at Fort Knox, Ky., which consisted of basic military training and advanced individual training (AIT).

The first nine weeks of initial entry training, or basic combat training, the trainee received instruction in drill and ceremony, weapons, rifle marksmanship qualification, bayonet combat, chemical warfare, field training and tactical exercises, marches, military courtesy, military justice, physical fitness, first aid, and Army history, traditions, and core values.

During AIT, the soldier completed the seven-week cavalry scout course. The training included subjects and instructions to operate, maintain and fire M2/M3 Bradley fighting vehicles; call and adjust fire on enemy targets, recognize friendly and threat vehicles; conduct reconnaissance and security missions, perform foot patrols, conduct land navigation, locate and neutralize mines; and operate and maintain scout vehicles.

He is the son of Luis Felippin of Framingham and Angela Buckley of Squantum.

The private is a 2008 graduate of Framingham High School.

Quincy Montessori Students Participate In Model United Nations

Six Upper Elementary students from the Montessori School of Quincy participated in the Montessori Model United Nations in New York City in March.

Some 600 Montessori students from ages 9-14 and from five countries participated. The students met children and adults from other countries, read speeches, wrote resolutions, debated during regular and moderated caucuses, and most importantly, made compromises.

They traveled by Amtrak train and the NYC subway, toured the real UN building, and sat in an actual UN conference room for their final meeting. They also visited Brooklyn where they saw the Statue of Liberty.

Many important resolutions were passed by the 4th to 6th graders at the Montessori Model United Nations with the help of Montessori School Of Quincy's Upper Elementary students. They were instrumental in passing the following resolutions representing Brazil as a sponsor or signatory:

- Empower Women and Achieving Millennium Development Goals 1 and 3
- Fair Trade Policies to Defeat Inequality Worldwide
- Global Management of Water and other Resources
- Sustainable Development and the Use of Renewable and Alternative Energy

The staff, families and friends of the Montessori School of Quincy congratulate the Upper L students.

C-Mart Denied By 7-1 Vote Council Rejects Asian Supermarket

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City Council Monday rejected a Special Permit for a C-Mart Supermarket on Hayward Street in North Quincy by a 7-1 vote after citing potential traffic problems associated with the plan.

C-Mart Supermarket, Inc., which focuses on an Asian clientele had hoped to open a 23,000 sq. ft. supermarket with 91 parking spaces at the former Boston Gear Works.

Monday's vote culminated months of discussion beginning last fall with neighborhood meetings and then council sessions at which 500-600 persons filled North Quincy High School's auditorium.

Over 100 residents and business leaders voiced their opinion at various meetings. 2,300 signed petitions favoring the plan and 200 signed petitions opposing the plan and countless e-mails supported both sides.

"It's been a long nine months," said Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro, citing the "extraordinary turnout on both sides of the issue" at council sessions.

Gutro and Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee represent the districts adjoining the site. McNamee filed the motion opposing the super-

To Seek Public's Input Before Final Decision

Phelan Exploring Mayoral Run

Former three-term Mayor William Phelan announced Tuesday he has formed an exploratory mayoral campaign committee to seek the public's input before making a final decision to challenge incumbent Mayor Tom Koch this fall.

Phelan said he will spend the next month or so reaching out to the people of Quincy, and asking one question: "Are you happy with the current administration, or do you believe we can do better?"

Phelan, 49, said he wants to hear from Quincy residents as he goes door to door, by phone at 617-786-9300 or his new website taxpayerstophelan.com.

In announcing the formation of his exploratory campaign committee, Phelan said he will be knocking

Kelly Won't Seek Re-election In Ward 1

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Saying the time is right, Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly announced Tuesday he will not seek re-election this fall.

"I want to thank my constituents for the privilege of serving them for these many years. I think it's the right time to step down," Kelly told the Sun before going to press. He said he intends to stay active in the community, noting his long time involvement in the Quincy Evergreen program. He will also finish out his current term - his ninth - this year.

Kelly was first elected Ward 1 councillor in 1973. He finished second to the late Paul Harold in a four-way preliminary election. However, Kelly defeated

Abigail Adams Cairn To Be Rededicated July 11

Mayor Thomas Koch, Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi and the Quincy Historical Society announced Tuesday that a new time capsule will be buried inside the renovated Abigail Adams Cairn during a ceremony on July 11, the birthday of John Quincy Adams.

And officials are asking for your help. Any member of the public with an idea of what to bury inside the time capsule should email Chris Walker of the Mayor's staff at cwalker@ci.quincy.ma.us.

"We uncovered a historical treasure through the renovation and we want to leave something just as significant for a future generation to discover," said Koch. "I wish to thank Councillor Raymondi and the Historical Society for all their hard work on this."

The time capsule, which contained newspapers and other artifacts dating back more than 100 years, was found during emergency reconstruction of the Cairn last year. Koch, working with Raymondi, secured funding for the project after inspections showed visible cracks in the Cairn and large open spaces in the structure where stones had fallen.

Restoration experts were brought in to completely dismantle the Cairn and rebuild it using the same Quincy granite and memorial stones that built the original.

"This was originally a public safety and aesthetic project to preserve an important piece of Quincy history, and it has turned to bear much more history than anyone would've thought," said Raymondi. "I am greatly looking forward to rededicating a place that is so important to our community's heritage."

The Cairn was erected atop Penns Hill in 1896 to mark the location where Abigail Adams took John Quincy Adams to watch the Battle of Bunker Hill across Boston Harbor in 1775. The scene was immortalized in last year's HBO mini-series "John Adams."

Officials are hoping for a "major public celebration" to re-dedicate the Cairn and expect to release more details in coming weeks. Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, Executive Director of the Quincy Historical Society, said a rededication on John Quincy Adams' birthday makes perfect sense, considering his connection to the site.

Symposium On Substance Abuse May 12 At Quincy Marriott

Mayor Thomas P. Koch and the Quincy Drug Task Force will host a symposium on substance abuse on Tuesday, May 12 from 6-8 p.m. at the Quincy Marriott.

"We find time and time again that people are not aware of the scope of the substance abuse problem and that they are unprepared to find help in the event that a family member or friend has fallen victim to drugs," Koch said.

Michael Botticelli from the Substance Abuse Division of the Department of Public Health, Dr. Lee Ellenberg from the MASBIRT program at the Quincy Medical Center and Judge Mark Coven from the Quincy District Court will all make presentations and participate in a roundtable discussion. The event will focus on bringing greater attention to the most current techniques used to combat substance abuse occurring in Quincy.

"Many programs exist in Quincy that provide counseling and treatment for drug abusers," Koch added. "The information and discussion next Tuesday will shed light on the dangers of substance abuse but also the local programs in operation that can help people cope with the dangers of substance abuse."

Cleaner, Greener Success

This year's Cleaner, Greener Quincy was a huge success, Mayor Thomas Koch announced Tuesday.

The annual citywide beautification event, that joins together residents, youth groups and volunteers from local businesses to spruce up public spaces, continues to be successful and grow year after year.

This year, over 2,000 volunteers worked together with city work crews from the Department of Public Works and the Park Department to clean up debris from public schools, playgrounds, parks, beaches, marshes and open spaces. This year, volunteers and city crews removed up to 35 tons of debris from over 50 locations throughout the city.

Following the event, Koch hosted a volunteer appreciation cookout at Pageant Field where he thanked all the volunteers for joining together, beautifying our city and strengthening our community.

The mayor also expressed his appreciation for Hannaford Supermarkets for sponsoring the cookout and for State Street Corporation for sponsoring in part this year's Cleaner, Greener Quincy event.

At the Mayor's appreciation cookout all volunteers received a free commemorative Cleaner, Greener Quincy t-shirt.

Help Combat Graffiti

The graffiti battle can't be won without residents' help, according to Commissioner Larry Prendeville, Department of Public Works, who is once again asking for public tips.

Mayor's FY 2010 Budget To Be Presented Monday

Mayor Thomas Koch will present the 2010 municipal budget to City Council Monday at 7 p.m. Koch is expected to offer a brief summary of the proposed finances which will be accepted and then assigned to the Finance Committee for analysis and recommendations.

Prendeville calls graffiti an open invitation to loiterers, litterers, and criminals, but agrees the struggle is never-ending.

In order to cut down on graffiti, Prendeville established a call line at 617-376-1959 for residents to report the date of their call, all incidents and specific locations. Residents should report incidents on all property, from postal boxes, street signs to buildings and sidewalks, according to Prendeville.

New York Resident Had Disease

Swine Flu Comes And Goes At Quincy Medical Center

By TOM HENSHAW

The swine flu showed up in Quincy last week --- but it didn't stay long enough to be counted against the city.

The man who checked into Quincy Medical Center Sunday, April 26, with flu-like symptoms was actually a resident of New York who was confirmed to have the latest dread disease.

He was treated for his mild case and sent home.

Meanwhile, all those at Quincy Medical center who came in contact with him were treated as a precaution until the seven-day incubation period expired Monday.

The staff at QMC handles those who suspect they might have swine flu swiftly and efficiently as one Brain-tree man who underwent the procedure will attest.

Taken to the Center by ambulance, a surgical mask was tied over his nose and mouth, blood taken from his arm and DNA from his nostrils and examined. He was cleared in three hours.

The city's defenses against swine flu were outlined in a meeting called by Mayor Tom Koch Tuesday, April 28, with department heads and other concerned organizations.

They included the Police, Fire, Health, School and Emergency Departments, Fallon Ambulance, Easy Care Ambulance, South Cove Community Center, Manet Health Center, Quincy Mental Health Center and Quincy Access Television.

"We met to go over a coordinated response," said Health Commissioner Andrew Scheele. "We discussed precautions, made sure there were gloves and masks in all the police cars and got fact checks out to the homes."

As of 3 p.m. Tuesday, there were 34 confirmed cases of swine flu in Massachusetts and no deaths.

Across the United States there were 403 confirmed cases in 38 states with one death, that of a boy from Mexico who had just arrived in Houston for treatment.

Scheele said the seasonal flu averages 30,000 deaths a year, mostly among the elderly and the very young.

"This flu is much milder," he said. "Most people are treated and released."

But, if you suspect you have the swine flu, Scheele's simple advice is still in force:

- Wash your hands.
- Stay home in a room by yourself.
- If you have trouble breathing, go to the hospital.

Koch, Challenger Among Nine Residents Pulling Papers

A total of nine residents -- including two for mayor -- took out nomination papers Tuesday for this fall's city election, according to the Quincy Election Department.

Incumbent Mayor Tom Koch, 46, of 249 Newbury Ave., took out papers for re-election to a second two-year term. Also taking out papers for mayor was Christopher Clark, 43, of 359 East Squantum St.

Taking out papers for Ward 1 city councillor were Martin Aikens, 56, of 81 Mears Ave., and Margaret Laforest, 34, of 236 Rock Island Rd. Incumbent Leo Kelly, serving his ninth term on the council, told The Sun that he would not be seeking re-election this fall.

Two Ward 4 residents took out papers for ward councillor: Michael O'Connell, 62, of 35 Ridgewood Ln., and Brian Palmucci, 31, of 138 Willard St. Incumbent councillor Jay Davis is also running for re-election.

The only other residents to take out papers on the first day the papers were available were present city councillors. They are Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, 55, of 19 Small St. and Councillors at-Large Joseph Finn, age 53, of 15 Williams St. and Michael McFarland, 55, of 140 Summit Ave.

Nomination papers, with at least 50 certified signatures, must be returned to City Hall by Tuesday, Aug. 14 at 5 p.m.

Election dates are Tuesday, Sept. 22 if there is a preliminary election for mayor, school committee and/or city councillor; and Tuesday, Nov. 3 for the final city election.

The case for consolidating your mortgage and equity line into one loan right now

You had a great rate on your mortgage and didn't want to touch that. But there was something you needed or wanted money for. And adjustable home equity line rates were low-low-low. So you took one out. Now that line keeps adjusting up-up-up. You're feeling the squeeze and suffering with the squeeze. You are not alone. If you're worrying about where rates are going next and simply want to have the same mortgage payment every single month, consider consolidating your original mortgage and that home equity line into one new, locked-in fixed-rate 30-year loan while those rates are still near historic lows. Come see us and we'll help you figure out if consolidating is right for you. Or call Richard Coleman or Angela Blanchard at 617-471-0750.

Koch-Phelan Part II

It's apparently on.

And it should be a doozy.

The pieces are falling into place for a mayoral rematch between incumbent Tom Koch and the man he defeated two years, William Phelan.

On Tuesday, Phelan announced he has set up an exploratory committee which will determine the feasibility of running for mayor this fall.

Political observers believe it's not a question of IF but rather WHEN Phelan will officially declare his candidacy for the city's highest elective office.

If (or when) he does, Phelan will not only be chasing Koch, he'll be chasing history.

A Phelan-Koch mayoral rematch would mark only the third time in the city's history that an incumbent mayor who had been defeated for re-election subsequently ran against the mayor who defeated him in the next election. But in those two prior occasions, the former incumbent could not defeat the sitting mayor.

So, Phelan would be trying to accomplish a political first if he challenges Koch: win back the mayor's office against the candidate who unseated him two years ago.

The last time this scenario played out in Quincy politics was three quarters of a century ago.

In the 1932 election, Mayor Thomas J. McGrath, seeking a fourth term, was defeated by Charles A. Ross whom he had defeated twice (in 1926 and 1928). Ross's margin of victory was 1,710 votes.

In 1934, McGrath, seeking to regain the mayoralty he lost in 1932, was once again defeated by Ross. Ross's victory margin was 1,914 votes.

The other political parallel occurred during the elections of 1916 and 1918.

In 1916, Mayor Gustav Bates was defeated by then City Council President Joseph Whiton. Whiton, with 3,131 votes, to Bates' 2,962 votes, won by 169 votes. Bates ran again in 1918 and was once again defeated by Whiton, losing by 1,011 votes.

Let's fast forward to the election of 2007.

Then Mayor William Phelan, was seeking a fourth two-year term. He was first elected in 2001 when he defeated incumbent Mayor James Sheets by a scant 17 votes -- the closest mayoral election in Quincy history. Phelan was re-elected in 2003 (with opposition) and 2005 (when he was unopposed).

In January, 2007, the table was set early for what turned out to be an epic mayor's race. That's when Koch, the longtime executive director of the city's Park, Forestry and Cemetery Department, resigned that post to challenge Phelan. At the end of a long and hotly contested campaign, Koch emerged victorious by a margin of 2,051 votes. He was inaugurated as the city's 33rd mayor in January, 2008.

Scanning the numbers from the city's Summary Report for the 2007 municipal election certain figures jump out.

For instance, the citywide voter turnout was only 44.5 percent. Of Quincy's 53,540 registered voters, only 23,586 voters when to the polls.

The actual number of votes cast in the mayor's race broke down this way: 12,672 for Koch, 10,621 for Phelan.

It stands to reason that Koch-Phelan Part II would trigger a higher turnout at the polls. City Clerk Joseph Shea agrees. "If there is a rematch, I can see turnout rising to 52 to 55 percent," he said.

Of course it's anyone's guess which candidate would benefit from a significantly higher turnout in the city election set for Tuesday, Nov. 3. And it would be naive to think that every Koch vote would go Koch's way this time around; and the same for Phelan.

And of course, there's always a chance a third candidate could jump into the mayor's race. That would set up Quincy's first mayoral preliminary election since 2003. That year, Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton and Quincy businessman Harvey Kurtzman challenged Phelan who was seeking a second term. Phelan defeated Newton in the general election.

Looking at the 2007 mayor's race by ward, Koch won five wards while Phelan won one.

In Koch's win column were Ward 2 (by 456 votes), Ward 3 (373 votes), Ward 4 (539 votes), Ward 5 (302 votes) and Ward 6 (396 votes). Phelan carried Ward 1 but only by 15 votes.

Next match up those ward totals with the voter turnout for those individual wards.

In Ward 1, the turnout was 53.20 percent -- the highest in the city. In that election, Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly was unopposed. This year, the seat is open since Kelly announced Tuesday he is not seeking re-election. Will turnout in Ward 1 be higher this fall with a competitive race for an open seat? At least two candidates have announced their intentions to seek Kelly's seat: first-time candidates Martin Aikens and Margaret Laforest.

The ward with the second highest turnout two years ago was Ward 6 where Koch defeated Phelan by nearly 400 votes. The turnout was 49.26 percent. Incumbent Councillor Brian McNamee turned aside a challenge by Jimmy Liang. It is unclear whether McNamee will face opposition but there's been speculation former Police Chief Robert Crowley, a Squantum resident, could make a bid for the seat.

Two years ago, Ward 4 had the dubious distinction of the lowest voter turnout: only 35.60 percent. Koch defeated Phelan there by 539 votes. However, this year should be different since incumbent Councillor Jay Davis, who was unopposed for the third time in 2007, has at least one challenger: Brian Palmucci. Turnout should be higher in Ward 4 with a competitive contest for councillor.

In the three other wards, the turnout was 36.86 percent in Ward 2; 43.86 percent in Ward 3 and 45.79 percent in Ward 5. The rumor mill on potential challengers for incumbent councillors Dan Raymondi (Ward 2), Kevin Coughlin (Ward 3) and Doug Gutro (Ward 5) has been quiet.

There's also been some telephone polling regarding a potential Koch-Phelan race. Perhaps just another sign that the city should see a competitive mayor's race this fall. But will it be history making? That won't be known until Nov. 3.

Koch, who will officially launch his re-election bid Thursday, May 14, won't comment on hypothetical opponents. But, as he's said before, the mayor's seat is the people's office. And he said he welcomes the opportunity to stake his record against any potential challenger.

A mayoral rematch between Koch and Phelan will be a spirited campaign. Hopefully the candidates will engage in frank, straight-forward and fair discussions about issues and each other's record while in the office. Voters deserve to have a clear understanding of the candidates' platforms by election day.

The city is at a cross-roads on many issues, including downtown development, providing services with reduced revenues, and prioritizing other necessary and long-awaited projects.

Koch and Phelan -- by contrasting and comparing their respective records -- can now tell the electorate why they deserve to lead the city -- again.

Scenes From Yesterday

SHORE SCENE AT SQUANTUM, MASS.

THIS IS A 1920 POSTCARD shore scene along Dorchester Street when Squantum was still a summer day trip destination. On the left was the Friberg Grocery Store on the corner of Trevor Street. Alfred and Hilma Friberg operated this store for almost 40 years from 1915 into the 1950s. Beginning in 1897, electric trolleys ran along this street from the Atlantic railroad depot bringing visitors to Squantum Park for its cool breezes and panoramic views of Boston Harbor. Just out of sight on the left on Shoreham Street was the Squantum Inn that opened in 1898 and quickly became famous for its locally caught shore dinners. In the top center behind the tree can be seen the large cupola on the top of the old Pratt Estate on Parke Avenue. That house became Lee's Inn, also a popular shore side restaurant. This view was from a boathouse on the end of the pier that at the time extended out into Dorchester Bay for the excursion steamboats that came over from Marine Park in South Boston. Quincy Needs A Well-Crafted Wind Ordinance

Wind power is an affordable, domestic, zero emission form of energy.

That's the basic reason why Quincy should adopt a zoning ordinance to properly handle applications to build wind turbines in Quincy.

But there are other reasons. In the federal stimulus package, there are strong financial incentives for renewable energy.

And there are strong incentives at the state level too. Many of those are particularly targeted to community scale projects. So we can either take advantage of this window of opportunity or watch dozens of other communities jump in line ahead of us.

With a well-crafted wind ordinance, Quincy can take a first important step towards reducing its reliance on fossil fuels and becoming part of the green economy.

Without a wind ordinance, we may see good projects go before the Zoning Board of Appeals and be denied. Or we may see bad projects be approved.

This is not a matter to put off any longer. On May 11, a Monday, the City Council will hold a public hearing on a proposed wind ordinance. It's at 6:30 p.m. in the Council Chamber.

People who are interested should take this opportunity to be heard and seen.

Get Involved To Make A Positive Difference

I read in the local papers that the city officials are PROUDLY saying that the work is about to start on the ill-advised cross-town connector.

Our property taxes have gone up 30% since the council agreed to this project. The city is tearing down revenue producing buildings, to put in a non-revenue producing road. The connector will bypass Quincy Center, to empty into Southern Artery, which is already over capacity.

We taxpayers will not see relief on our taxes for at least ten years because of this project. Our city officials remind me of the scarecrow in the Wizard of Oz. If they only had a brain!

Hunger Marches Here Denounce City

By FRANK MCCAULEY

Hunger marchers from Southwestern Massachusetts bound for Boston for their May Day demonstration, marched into Quincy, munched their open-air buffet lunches at Merrymount Park, reiterated their demands, preached their oft-repeated gospel of bosses versus workers and marched right out again, stirring scarcely a ripple on the placid surface of a beautiful Sunday afternoon.

Along the line of march, they booed Quincy municipal officials and paused long enough in front of City Hall to pay their respects to Mayor Charles A. Ross and Welfare Commissioner Ronald Broberg in raucous "razzberries."

There were just 70 in the crusade, mainly from Fall River, New Bedford and Norwood.

MAYOR GIVES GARDEN PLANS FOR JOBLESS

Mayor Charles A. Ross announced that a gardening plan similar to that, which was popular in the World War, would be implemented in Quincy. The mayor said that any land owned by the city in tax titles and suitable for gardening purposes, would be made available for the unemployed so they could raise foodstuffs.

Anyone interested in this means of aiding himself or herself can make arrangements by getting in touch with the mayor's office. Those who are hard-pressed to buy groceries can raise whatever vegetables they see fit on the land and can have the crops for their own use.

ADAMS PREDICTS SHIPYARD JOBS

Disclosing that in his view the Constitution of the United States has almost broken down and party government a proven failure, Honorable Charles Francis Adams, former Secretary of the Navy and Mayor of Quincy (1896-1897), said that it was the task of educational institutions to provide educational leadership.

Mr. Adams predicted that if Congress presses the huge naval construction bill, that the Fore River Shipyard would get its share of contracts. The Navy has always been pleased with the work done at Fore River, Adams said.

'Power Of Forgiveness' Film Screening At Library May 11

The award-winning documentary film "The Power of Forgiveness" will be shown Monday, May 11 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

To forgive someone can be simple. But this simple act can have powerful consequences - and may lead to a personal and spiritual transformation.

From Ground Zero to Northern Ireland to the Amish countryside, "The Power of Forgiveness" explores this important concept, and reveals how forgiveness can transform your life.

Directed by documentary filmmaker Martin Doblmeier, the film combines seven character-driven stories about the most dramatic transgressions imaginable and those that are more commonplace. Among its subjects, the film features families of victims from the tragedy of 9/11 and forgiveness education in Northern Ireland, where unforgiveness has been a way of life for generations.

"The Power of Forgiveness" also includes stories and interviews with people from many faith traditions as well as doctors, psychologists and psychotherapists who present the measurable benefits of forgiveness and the hidden costs of unforgiveness.

Winner of the Sun Valley Film Festival Best Documentary Award, "The Power of Forgiveness" aired on national public television in March 2008.

The film will last 78 minutes, followed by an informal discussion led by Diane Costagliola, Adjunct Instructor of English at Simmons College and a member of the library staff.

This film is being shown in conjunction with a reading and discussion series Let's Talk About It: Love & Forgiveness in the Presence of the Enemy. Funding was made possible through a grant provided by the American Library Association and the Fetzer Institute.

For more information, call 617-376-1301 or visit thomascranelibrary.org.

The Quincy Teen Mothers will hold their 18th annual Boston Harbor Boat Cruise Thursday, June 18, the three-hour cruise on "The Fred Nolan" leaving Marina Bay at 7 p.m. and returning at 10 p.m.

The cruise will feature music and dancing by DJ

"Musical Menu" Kathy and Brian McCluskey as well as a silent auction and over $5,000 in prizes.

Tickets at $30 can be purchased from Janice Walsh at 617-984-8704 or Kathy McCluskey at 617-471-7695. Checks should be made payable to Quincy Teen Mothers Program, 18 Spear St., Quincy 002169.

USS Constitution's Navy Colorguard,
Navy Band Brass Quintet To Make Appearances

Quincy Point To Celebrate Maritime History, Community Pride Saturday

On May 8th and May 9th, 2009 The community of Quincy Point/Fore River Shipyard will holding its First Annual Maritime festival "Making Waves in Quincy Point" Friday, May 8 and Saturday, May 9.

This event will be a two day affair starting on Friday evening, followed daytime celebration on Saturday.

The festival will "kick-off" on Friday evening at The Inn at Bay Point in Quincy Point.

There will be a celebration of shipbuilding history and strong Celtic roots with an evening of Celtic and Maritime Music. A silent auction will be held during the evening, the proceeds from this auction will be used to benefit the Quincy Point Music Academy Scholarship Fund.

The Quincy Point Music Academy is a non-profit community school devoted to fostering the musical interests of its students regardless of economic or social background, gender or age.

Auction items include: baseballs signed by Red Sox Captain Jason Varitek and outfielder Rocco Baldelli, tickets to a New England Revolution game, Boston Pops Baseball CD autographed by Keith Lockhart and numerous gift certificates from local businesses.

Festivities will continue on Saturday, May 9th. A procession of St. Brendan the Navigator will parade down Washington Street. St. Brendan is the patron saint of sailors.

The procession will start at 12:30 p.m. from Quincy Point Congregational Church and 12:40 p.m. from St. Joseph's Church. The group will be lead by the Great Highland Bagpiper, Matthew MacArthur of Quincy.

The procession will stop at the side of the rotary to dedicate the anchor from the USS Des Moines, the sister ship to the USS Salem. The dedication will be in honor of the individuals who were part of the shipbuilding industry and the people who served the U.S. in the vessels that came from this historical shipyard.

Onward to the USS Salem where the music starts at 1:30 p.m. by the US Navy Band Brass Quintet.

The official "Salute to Shipbuilders and Sailors" will begin at 2 pm.

The purpose of this community salute is tri-fold: to thank those who worked at the shipyard, to thank those who served in the Navy and to celebrate life in Quincy Point through its history.

Joe Hajjar, ambassador of Harbor Express will lift up the experience of the Shipbuilder.

Father Vincent Doolan of St. Joseph's Church will perform a "Blessing of the Fleet."

Part of the ceremony will spotlight the people of the WWII era. Bob Bosworth and Don DeCristofaro, will both speak about their fathers who served our country as part of the "Greatest Generation."

A community chorus will accompany the US Navy Band Brass Quintet in song. The USS Constitution Colorguard will also join the observance.

At the USS Salem there will also be some family friendly activities and a Ship's store.

For tickets to the Inn at Bay Point "kick-off" party or to donate an item for the silent auction, call Janice O'Donnell or Peggy Ann Murray at the Quincy Point Congregational Church Office @ 617-773-6424 or email at office@qpcc.org.

Evening With Bill Brett May 19

Noted photographer and author Bill Brett will share photos from his new book, Boston: A Year in the Life," at a cocktail reception and book signing Tuesday, May 19 from 5:30 to 8 p.m. at the Best West Adams Inn, 29 Hancock St., Quincy.

In addition to a photo presentation and question and answer session with Brett, the event will feature a cash bar, hors d'oeuvres and a raffle with numerous prizes including a pair of Red Sox tickets and restaurant gift certificates.

Tickets are $30 each, with proceeds benefiting the Quincy Lions Club. For tickets, call 617-328-1384.

Foreign Film Screening Tonight

The award-winning Belgian film Eldorado will be shown tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

In the film, Yvan and Elie are two loners who wander aimlessly through their lives. Yvan is a quick-tempered 40-year-old vintage car dealer while Elie is a young burglar and ex-junkie.

One day Yvan catches Elie trying to rob him. In stead of beating him up, he becomes strangely attached to him and agrees to drive him home to his parents in his old Chevrolet. Yvan and Elie are both nostalgic about lost relationships, which is what leads them to undertake a bizarre journey through a region that is as spectacular as it is crazy. Both are trying to find the pieces of a puzzle that they want to put back together, but it might be too late.

The film won Best European Film, Director's Fortnight, at the Cannes Film Festival. In French with English subtitles, 80 minutes.

Although not subject to rating by the Motion Picture Association of America, the film is not recommended for ages under 17 without parental permission.

For more information, call 617-376-1301 or visit thomascranelibrary.org.

Mad Science Registration Underway

Registration has begun for the Mad Science of Greater Boston workshop on polymers and related scientific concepts for kids ages 4-8 at the Thomas Crane Public Library.

The workshop will be held Saturday, May 23, at 10 a.m. in the Children's Room at the Main Library, 40 Washington St. Registration is required and is limited to Quincy residents.

Participants will witness a demonstration of Mad Science Putty's amazing properties; explore the properties of this and another polymer called Slime and make their own slime.

The program is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Storyteller At Crane Library Saturday

Storyteller Diane Kane will be at the Thomas Crane Public Library Saturday, May 9, at 10 a.m. with stories and music for children ages 4 and younger, accompanied by an adult.

No registration is required but space is limited to first 125 people after which the doors to the meeting room will be closed.

Harold in the final election by 64 votes.

Kelly won successful re-election bids in 1975 and 1977 by topping preliminary elections and the general election. He won his fourth and fifth terms in 1979 and 1981, defeating Dave MacMillan in the final election both years. He was unopposed for his sixth term in 1983.

In January 1984, Kelly stepped down from his seat to become project manager for the Quincy Housing Authority.

He made a successful comeback for the Ward 1 seat in 2003 by topping a five-candidate field in the preliminary election. In the final election, he defeated Joseph Keegan for a seventh term. He won his eighth and ninth terms without opposition in 2005 and 2007.

The race to succeed Kelly is already on with two declared candidates as of Tuesday: political newcomers Martin Aikens and Margaret LaForest. Aikens is a business agent for IBEW 103 and chairman of the Quincy Zoning Board of Appeals. Laforest, a community activist, is the former president of the Houghs Neck Community Council.

Nomination papers for candidates interested in seeking the offices of mayor, councillor at-large, ward councillor and school committee, were released by the Board of Registrars Tuesday. Deadline to file papers with at least 50 signatures certified by the Board is Tuesday, Aug. 14.

Candidates must also file a statement of candidacy with the City Clerk by Aug. 14.

Best Western Adams Inn Announces New Ownership Team

Robert E. Galligan, CEO and Innkeeper, announces that the Best Western Inn has formed a new ownership team. Quincy real estate developers Sean and Scott Galvin along with Quincy businessman James Mullaney will join the Galligan Family, who has been involved with operating the Best Western Inn for 15 years.

Located at 29 Hancock Street, the Best Western Inn is a 105-room full service property on the banks of the Neponset River. Starting in 1994 a series of renovations and improvements has been made along with recently completed Constitution Pavilion and Suites Function Facility. The Best Western Inn now has a total of four distinct function areas, including the "Gazebo" located over the Neponset River and the full service Adams

Pub and Deck restaurant.

"The new owners are committed to continuing the ongoing improvements to the Best Western Inn and function facilities," said Galligan. "The special skill set each partner brings will ensure that while we service the needs of Best Western International, the Worlds Largest Hotel Chain, we will also focus on the needs of our local clientele."

National Nurses Week To Be Celebrated May 6-12

The focus of National Nurses Week this year is the work of America's 2.9 million registered nurses to save lives and to maintain the health of millions of individuals; National Nurses Week is celebrated annually May 6-12 throughout the United States.

This year, the American Nurses Association has selected "Nurses: Building a Healthy America" as their 2009 theme. Annually, National Nurses Week begins on May 6, marked as RN Recognition Day, and ends on May 12, the birthday of Florence Nightingale, founder of nursing as a modern profession.

Manet Community Health Center, with five sites across the South Shore, including four in Quincy currently employs 34 nurses. Their roles are vital in helping make Manet's mission of providing accessible, quality health care for all possible. Henry Tuttle, Manet CEO said: "Thank you to all of our nurses, both past and present. Your caring, compassionate and outstanding service has helped Manet sustain 30 years of providing accessible, quality care to all those in need."

Manet Community Health Center

Thank you Manet nurses!

Manet would like to recognize the caring, compassionate and outstanding service of our nurses.

Letter Carriers Collecting Food For Local Pantries Saturday

For the sixth time Saturday, May 9, the city of Quincy and the National Association of Letter Carriers are working as one to help local food pantries in the war on hunger.

Residents are urged to leave non-perishable donations by your mailbox for pickup by your letter carrier in their annual food drive.

Volunteers are needed from 3 to 7 p.m. at the Richard Koch Park and Recreation Complex, One Merry-mount Parkway, to sort and box food.

Drivers are also needed to pickup and transport food from the Quincy Center, Wollaston and North Quincy Post Offices to the Koch Complex for sorting.

This is a great opportunity to help the community and for children of all ages to accumulate volunteer hours for school or other activities.

Wollaston's 'Frankie' Remembered By Council

Everybody knew Wollaston's 'Frankie,' but few knew his last name, said Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro Monday when he asked City Council to remember Frank Sablone who died last Friday.

After Gutro spoke, City Council observed a moment of silence for 'Frankie' and dedicated the meeting in his honor.

Gutro described Sablone as a "fixture in Wollaston" who made many, many different friends all over the city and few knew his last name.

"He always said he loved Wollaston so much he wouldn't leave," said Gutro, adding that 'Frankie' came from the North Shore but wouldn't leave Quincy because this was his home.

Memorial tributes for 'Frankie' may be sent to the Italian Home for Children, Jamaica Plain.

Rev. James Hinds Ordained Minister At Age 55

Some 160 persons celebrated as Rev. James Hinds, 55, was ordained a minister recently at First Baptist Church of Wollaston.

Rev. Nick Carter, President of Andover Newton Theological School, officiated at the ceremony during which James Hinds, received the robes of Baptist ministry.

"Going all the way into the ministry was God's idea," said Rev. Hinds of his late vocation. "With the American Baptist denomination, a person is called into the ministry and then ordained."

"I was always deeply involved in the church," said Rev. Hinds who served in many areas of his Wollaston church for some 30 years.

"He did everything for the church from teaching Sunday school to cleanup," said his longtime friend and Quincy neighbor, Victoria Saunders who described the ordination service as full of music and singing and "joyful in a grand sense," full of music, and the voices of some 50 singers.

The congregation celebrating Rev. Hinds' ordination included Rodney Petersen, Executive Director of the Boston Theological Institute, friends, family, local parishioners, former classmates at Andover Newton Theological School and colleagues from Northeastern University.

Saunders cited the special contribution from the Quincy Choral Society which counted Rev. Hinds as a longtime members and active participant

"He served in every capacity," said Rev. Michael Cunningham, pastor of the Wollaston church, who recalled the time his parishioner made the decision to choose full-time ministry

"At one point, he felt that the Lord called him," Rev. Cunningham said of Rev. Hinds who worked in technical and computer support at Northeastern University for 25 years.

Pastor Hinds was over 50-years-old when he opted for religious studies and his wife Ann returned to work. He then began the three-year program at Andover Newton Theological School and completed additional studies for a Masters of Divinity.

"Going all the way into the ministry was God's idea," Rev. Hinds said, adding that he had thought about it over the years. He has described his vocation as a "late inning response to God's call that was not late, but insistent and consistently pushed aside."

Rev. Hinds, also, values the "grace" of First Baptist Church of Wollaston which he said fostered not only his spiritual growth but that of other new leaders, such as Patti Langevin and Eric Gagon.

The new minister has already begun serving as pastor of First Baptist Church of Gardner where he will work to bring the larger community together

"I'd like the congregation to come to know its own story, to know their personal place in that unfolding story and to see how that story can minister to the wider community of Gardner."

As a graduate of Leominster High School, Rev. Hinds is in familiar territory, but he intends to keep close ties with his longtime friends in Quincy market.

Council Rejects Asian Supermarket By 7-1 Vote

After the vote, Christopher Harrington, attorney for C-Mart, said it was too soon to know if the company would challenge the decision.

"No decision has been made," Harrington said Tuesday regarding either an appeal or the future use of the roughly 2 1/4 acre property which is zoned Industrial B.

"My client is obviously disappointed," Harrington said in a prepared statement, citing the council's "narrow focus on possible traffic and parking impacts."

"This project would have provided badly needed new property tax revenues, millions of dollars of economic activity in the North Quincy business district and up to 75 new jobs..."

C-Mart's owner Michael Fang purchased the property in March for $3.1 million. Portions of the building have already been designated for warehouse use as allowed, by right, under current zoning.

Councillors opposing the supermarket cited Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon's reports on the area, existing traffic gridlock in the Hancock Street corridor, and potential hazards on West Squantum Street at Homes Avenue prior to voting against the permit.

"I recommend against approval of the project," said Gillon after describing his findings on Hayward and Hancock Streets, particularly plans for a left turn signal opposite the North Quincy Post Office.

Harrington challenged Gillon's conclusions. He suggested that each time the developer solved one issue "in good faith," Gillon found another problem,

"The target keeps moving."

In addition, Harrington said that councillors were acting on behalf of "people who are parking illegally on the street."

Harrington noted that developers, at their own expense, had produced a plan for off-street parking for the illegally parked cars on Hayward Street, had eliminated a proposed food court and responded to all traffic issues.

Harrington, also, noted that the C-Mart plan adhered to the recommendations made when the Hannaford Supermarket, then Shaw's, was approved. "If the site lines aren't great today, they weren't great then..."

In an April 22 letter to the council, Harrington stated the C-Mart proposal would bring major investment to the city as well as 60 to 70 jobs with a total payroll of $600,000 to $900,000.

"C Mart intends to invest $1.25million in the building and in refrigeration equipment for the grocery store," wrote Harrington, adding the new personal property tax would be $32,500 in addition to new taxes on the real estate.

Observers in the council chambers applauded when Councillor Joseph Finn cast the single vote supporting the permit.

Finn cited the "subjective" traffic analysis used by other councillors in opposing the plan, then said that he preferred using the professional traffic standards in making his decision.

In addition, Finn warned that the "current zoning" of the property, Industrial B, allows considerably "more damaging" projects by right and without special permits.

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro said, "I appreciate C-Mart's interest in Quincy... It's not about how much revenue a project will bring to the city."

Gutro then cited traffic issues along the Hancock corridor as did Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin. "The traffic generated would adversely impact the neighborhood."

In North Quincy and Wollaston, the Asian community accounts for some 30% to 40% of the residents and councillors supported the concept of an Asian supermarket.

Gutro and President Jay Davis, also, echoed Councillor John Keenan's comment, "There is an absolute market for this type of market. This is just not the location. Hancock Street is a dangerous location."

"There is a need for an Asian supermarket in this city," said Davis while Gutro pledged to work with the community to locate an Asian-style market in the right location.

Councillor Michael McFarland also opposed the special permit.

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly was absent from Monday's meeting.

Walgreens Proposed At Former Foley Auto Dealership

The Walgreens chain wants to open an outlet at 324-330 Hancock Street opposite North Quincy High School provided the Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) allows a variance for their delivery area.

The ZBA will open hearings on the variance Tuesday after deadline.

The proposed Walgreens would be located on the site of the former Foley's auto dealership which serviced, sold and leased Chryslers and Plymouths. The company closed several years ago.

According to Building Inspector Jay Duca, Arista Development, LLC, of Norwood, filed an application for a building permit on behalf of Walgreens on Jan. 12. The proposed store would be 9800 sq. ft. and allow 47 regular parking spaces and two handicapped slots.

Arista's application was, subsequently, denied due to insufficient maneuvering space for delivery vehicles.

Walgreens is one of the three largest drug store chains in the United States, offers 25,000 sale items and employs an average of 25-30 people.

New Board Members, Officers Inducted May 19 Quincy Community Action Programs Annual Meeting, Awards Ceremony

The Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) Board of Directors will induct new board members and officers at its Annual Meeting and Awards Ceremony Tuesday, May 19 at 5:30 p.m. at the Tirrell Room, Quincy Lodge of Elks, 254 Quarry St., Quincy.

The meeting is open to the community.

As one of Massachusetts' 25 Community Action Agencies (CAAs), one-third of QCAP's board is comprised of low-income Quincy residents.

These representatives are elected to serve on QCAP's board by low-income residents of the North Quincy/Atlantic, Germantown, Quincy Point and Southwest neighborhoods of the City of Quincy. Residents of these neighborhoods, who are at or below 175% of the poverty level, are encouraged to vote in the QCAP board election.

Voting will take place in Germantown, the Fore River

Clubhouse, the Southwest Community Center at 1 Copeland Street and in North Quincy. Eligible residents may vote by walking in and completing a ballot at the appropriate location now through May 15th.

At the meeting, the Board of Directors will recognize several community members with Extra Mile Community Awards for their dedicated support of QCAP, our clients and the community.

This year's award recipients include Tina Brooks, Undersecretary, MA Department of Housing & Community Development; First Justice Mark S. Coven, Quincy District Court; DLA Piper US LLP and Attorneys Robert J. O'Connor, Jr., Partner and Bryan C. Connolly, Associate and Thayer Academy.

In addition, Anne Leister, Head Start Program Director, will be presented the Lois Craig Employee Award, for her outstanding leadership and exemplary service. Retiring board members Ruth Doyle and Linda Kelly will be gratefully acknowledged for their years of service.

"QCAP is especially honored to recognize significant contributions of our Extra Mile award recipients and employees this year," said QCAP Executive Director Beth Ann Strollo.

"We have much to celebrate despite the difficult times thanks to the extraordinary efforts of many community partners. I encourage the public to join us on May 19th to learn more about these unsung heroes and some of QCAP's accomplishments."

To attend QCAP's 44th Annual Meeting, or for more information on the board election, contact Melinda Alexander at (617) 479-8181 x356.

Leo Kelly Receives Lifetime Achievement Award

As part of Quincy's recent celebration of Community Development Week, Ward 1 Councillor Leo J. Kelly was presented with a Lifetime Achievement Award from Mayor Thomas P. Koch and Planning Director Dennis E. Harrington.

The inscription on the plaque reads:

"This Lifetime Achievement Award is presented to Leo J. Kelly for his unwavering commitment to the Community Development Block Grant program since its inception in 1975.

A champion of Community Development programs for over thirty years, Leo J. Kelly has supported the use of CDBG funding for major projects such as the establishment of the Houghs Neck Community Center and Germantown Neighborhood Center; the creation of the Germantown Boardwalk to the Fore River beachfront; the provision of beach amenities and improvements, and street & sidewalk repair.

As Ward One City Councillor, Leo J. Kelly spearheaded efforts to establish the Manet Community Health Center, and to provide Quincy residents with housing rehabilitation loans and grants to improve the quality of life for our neighbors."

During the award ceremony, Planning Director Harrington said, "He has, over the past 30-plus years as an elected public official, and 40 or more years as a community activist in the Houghs Neck area, has represented people in his community well. They have profited from his work, from his tremendous work ethic, and from his determination to always succeed with respect to bringing forth programs that have long term benefits for the City of Quincy."

"I do recall personally that when the time arose for community health centers, and when it was determined that there would be a regional health center in the Neponset area that served Quincy, that Leo, along with several others, took charge of the situation, and there was born the Manet Community Health Center," said Harrington.

"But for Leo, there would not have been a community health center in the City of Quincy at that time."

Upon receipt of the award, Kelly stated, "I want to say thank you very much to 'HUD' and to the Planning Department. I appreciate very much this award, and I will cherish it with all my heart."

Adelle Montes, Bridget Surette Nominated For Art-All State Program

Two Quincy High School juniors, Adelle Montes and Bridget Surette, have been nominated to interview for the annual Art-All State program, hosted by the Worcester Art Museum.

A high honor, every high school in the state can nominate only two high school juniors to participate in the interview process. The program will be held at the Worcester Art Museum in May and consists of an intensive two-day workshop.

Groups of students are paired with artist mentors and reflect on a museum tour before creating works of art as teams. Students are introduced to many different careers in the arts and learn how to work together to make an "installation"- artwork that creates an environment in the Art Museum's studios.

Enjoying Life at Allerton House

THE ALLERTON WAY

Allerton House at Hancock Park, Quincy, MA
by Kelly Richards

Theresa Webber's children surprised her two years ago when they came to her Dorchester home and simply said that they wanted to take her somewhere.

Webber says, "As it turned out, the final destination of our mystery ride was Allerton House at Hancock Park. After taking a tour and meeting some of the residents and staff, I knew I would love living here." She credits her daughter and three sons for doing their research, knowing her needs and personality, wanting to make life easier, and finding her a perfect home. "It was the first place I looked at," she says. "I didn't need to look any further."

Today, Webber's spacious one-bedroom apartment at Allerton House is decorated with lots of photographs of her children and grandchildren, as well as other personal possessions that she holds dear. "All of my furniture fit right in," says Webber. And my family is close by so I see them all the time. They especially like to come to the special events here. At the Christmas party, they saw me sitting on Santa's lap."

Prior to her move to Allerton House, Webber lived alone. With her children nearby, she could always count on them for help, but at age 82, she continued to carry out the day-to-day tasks that home ownership entails. She says, "I don't have to do anything now - no cooking, no cleaning, no paying the bills, no laundry. All of those things are done for me, and the meals are great. Now I just do what I want to do."

Webber's engaging personality touches everyone she meets. "I believe we all just need to keep going and stay involved," she says. And stay involved she does. You may find her at the Bingo game at Allerton House three or four times a week, joining other residents on a road trip for lunch at a local restaurant, or socializing in the residence's elegant dining room. One of the first friends she made when she moved in now lives at Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group's skilled nursing center in Hingham, and Webber makes it a point to visit her often. "We both enjoy catching up during our visits."

According to Webber, one of the best things about living at Allerton House at Hancock Park is the opportunity to be around truly nice people. "I know everybody here," she says, and "everybody is wonderful. Moving here was the best thing!"

Kelly Richards is the Marketing Director for Allerton House at Hancock Park in Quincy. The 42-apartment assisted living residence is owned and managed by Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group, which is celebrating 60 years of service to seniors. FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Gas Stations

It's that time of year when we inspect gas stations within the city. It's an occasion to confirm signage is being maintained at pump islands, underground tank paper work and testing procedures are up-to-date, and repair facilities are being utilized safely. It's during these one or two visits a year when we attempt to sell safety. After all, it's management that sets the trend throughout the year, while safety pays.

The presence of up-to-date permits and licenses confirms that the property and or tanks are still actively being used and maintained as required by the state's regulations. Particularly as this applies to maintaining underground tanks, frequent testing is required of underground tanks and those test results generate the permits thus permission to continue their use.

Once in place, while meeting the requirements of the regulations, pump islands are established while maintaining proper signage there is important. Those signs remind patrons and employees that engines should be shutoff while fuel is pumped and smoking should not take place within 25 feet of the pumping island. On self-service islands hold open devices on pump nozzles should be disabled as well.

Within the gas station itself, suppression devices and fire extinguishers must be maintained as required. These are potentially proactive tools should there be a small fire at these locations. If small fires can be safely approached by employees prior to a fire getting out of hand, further damage and devastation can be avoided.

We confirm that emergency shutoff devices are adequately marked within the office area. Our concern being, should an employee need to shut down the pumps during an emergency, he or she can do so without hesitation knowing those switches are boldly labeled.

Within repair areas of the station, general house-keeping can reflect management's commitment towards a safe work environment. Waste oil containers should be marked, protected from mechanical damage and the immediate area around them should show no sign of spillage. Acetylene cylinders should be stored upright and out of harms way as well. Casual storage of flammable and combustible liquids must be avoided, while combustibles of any type must be at a minimum.

Fire prevention typically comes down to isolating potential ignition sources from combustibles. This applies to gas stations as well. Whether at the pumps or within the repair shop area, potential ignition sources, cigarettes, torches or sparks, and flammables and combustibles must be separated to avoid the possibility of ignition.

During our visit we attempt to sell management on this view. We then hope the theory is embraced. Safety makes continued operation of a facility possible and helps keep employees healthy.

We hope you agree.

Adams National Park Gets $600,000 In Transport Grants

The Adams National Historical Park has been awarded a $250,000 grant for a transportation study and business plan that supports overland trolleys, waterfront ferry service and public transports.

And $350,000 more is in the pipeline for the design and permitting of a dock and float system at Squantum Point/Adams Landing to receive ferries from the Harbor Islands and serve as a transfer point for visitors to Quincy historical sites.

Funding for the transportation study grant comes from Fiscal 2008 appropriations for the Paul S. Sarbanes Transit in Parks program that funds capital and planning expenses for alternative transportation systems in parks and public lands.

"This type of funding is a welcome and crucial step as part of our effort to reinvent our tourism infrastructure," said Congressman Bill Delahunt, a staunch supporter of the Massachusetts Cultural Coast regional concept of highlighting tourism.

"Improving trolley and ferry access to the Adams National Historical Park, the Boston Harbor Islands and the other local treasures of the Massachusetts Cultural Coast will spur ever larger numbers of people to visit and enjoy the spectacular historic and natural vistas right here in our backyard."

Funding for the dock and float system design has been committed by the Massachusetts Seaport Advisory Council.

"The project is a great example of what we can do when state leadership work in synchronization with our federal delegation," said Lt. Gov. Tim Murray.

"With the (Sarbanes) funds and the Seaport Advisory Council grant we will help make these national parks and the educational a recreational facilities they provide that much more accessible to the residents of the Commonwealth."

Marianne Peak emphasized that "the critical importance of this grant is to work in partnership for an important transportation opportunity for this community and for visitors to a large area of Massachusetts."

"The purpose of this planning effort is to develop alternatives for development of a financially sustainable expanded transportation system for four national parks, including Adams NHP, the Boston Harbor Islands, New Bedford Whaling National Historical Park and Cape Cod National Seashore.

"This study will provide the park with a business plan for transportation serving the visitor and the community."

The study will identify options for a transportation hub at Adams Landing that could also serve as a welcoming education center and develop a strategy to engage parks and partners in the operation of an expanded alternative transportation system.

Presently the Adams NHP operates a successful shuttle service using trolley buses that has not only resulted in increased visitation but helps in managing the boost David McCullough's book and the HBO mini-series and the marketing of Discover Quincy.

Improved intermodal connections would allow visitors, those without cars and school groups improved access.

A Job Well Done

On Tuesday, April 28, at approximately 6:30 p.m., Officer John McIsaac was dispatched to West Quincy on a domestic violence call.

Upon arrival, the officer interviewed a female resident, who had dried blood around her nose and smudged blood along her forearm. She stated that she had an argument with her boyfriend in their bedroom and the incident turned violent when the boyfriend asked her to hand him a tissue.

LT. DAN MINTON

After handing him the tissue, the boyfriend/suspect grew angry, accusing her of not holding the tissue close enough to his nose so that he could blow into the tissue. She told him to hold the tissue himself and upon hearing this, the suspect then punched her in the nose, which resulted in profuse bleeding.

She left the room to tend to her own nose, then returned to show her boyfriend what he did to her, in hopes that she would apologize. The boyfriend then sprang off the bed and forced her into the corner of the room, stood over her and angrily said, "Try to get out of here."

The victim crouched for self-protection, then tried to escape the room, but the suspect kicked her left leg, temporarily staggering her before she was able to flee the residence. The victim then went to a friend's home, who called the police.

According to the friend, this was not the first time the victim fled from her boyfriend after being assaulted. Officer McIsaac also learned that the boyfriend has an alcohol and Oxycontin substance abuse problem.

Officer McIsaac returned to the scene of the crime and arrested the boyfriend, a 42-year-old Quincy resident of the charges of "Domestic Assault and Battery and Assault and Battery with a Dangerous Weapon. (shod foot) The Officer then assisted the victim in obtaining an emergency restraining order.

Nice Work!

On Monday, April 27, at approximately 7:45 a.m., Officers A.J. Carthas and Matt Hockney were dispatched to Woodbine Street for an unknown trouble call. Dispatch informed the officers that there was a language barrier and they were trying to get additional information. Upon arrival, the officers were unable to get anyone to answer the door initially, but after a short delay, a female answered the door. She denied calling the police, said that she just got out of the shower was unaware of any problem.

When asked if anyone else was in the house, she said that her roommates were upstairs and pointed to the stairs. At this time, Dispatch told the Officers that the call was a domestic disturbance between a husband and wife. Once upstairs, the female pointed to the door of the married couple. The door opened and a female emerged, visibly upset and crying. Officer Carthas led this female into the kitchen and asked her what happened.

Officer Hockney went into the bedroom to speak to her husband. The female victim said that she asked her husband to make sure the lights were turned off in the laundry room and he said he would.

Minutes later, she asked him again if he had checked on the lights and it was at this point that the husband became extremely upset. He began yelling at her and then hit her in the head three times with a closed fist. She then showed the officer where her husband hit her. Based on this information, the officers placed the husband, a 24-year-old Quincy resident, under arrest on the charge of "Domestic Assault and Battery."

The wife was offered a restraining order but declined. She was encouraged to re-think her choice and given information explaining her options.

Nice Work!

on doors and meeting in people's living rooms and kitchens "from one end of the city to the other. And I will listen to your ideas, and your complaints and your visions for our city."

"And if you tell me you are happy with the current administration and don't think we can do better, I'll go back to my law practice."

"But if you've had enough, and if you know we can do better, if you are willing to work together to build the kind of organization we will need to beat a well-financed incumbent supported by the power brokers and city hall insiders, then I will be your candidate for mayor of Quincy, and we will launch a campaign to return city hall to the people of Quincy," Phelan said.

The three-term mayor was first elected in 2001 defeating then incumbent James Sheets. He defeated former Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton and local businessman Harvey Kurtzman for a second term in 2003. He was unopposed in 2005.

In 2007, seeking a fourth term, Phelan was defeated by Koch, the former executive director of the Quincy Park, Forestry and Cemetery Department.

Citing his loss in the last election, Phelan said, "Sometimes you learn more by losing an election than by winning. I understand that in my impatience to move the city forward I stepped on a lot of toes and ruffled a lot of feathers. I would be a very different Mayor today."

On Tuesday, Phelan said he was most concerned about what he characterized as Koch's "enormous" property tax increase.

"Mayor Koch has raised property taxes more than $18 million, one of the highest - if not the highest - increases of any city in the state," Phelan said. "He has already raised property taxes more than twice as much in one year as I did in six years as mayor. Tom Koch, has, in fact, raised taxes more than any mayor in Quincy's history, despite being left with $15 million in the city's rainy day account."

In his last two terms in office, Phelan pointed out Quincy had the lowest tax increases of any city in the state, according to the Massachusetts Department of Revenue.

Phelan said that as mayor, he increased school budgets each year by a larger percentage than any other city department. Under Koch, he said schools received the smallest increase of any department.

Phelan also said many residents have approached him about the problems the city faces, and many have urged him to run for mayor. And, he acknowledged he has "thought long and hard about it."

"I think the record also shows that as mayor I always stood up for taxpayers," Phelan said. "I knew that I did not work for the powerful city hall insiders, and so we fought against the culture of entitlement that poisons City Hall. Because I knew that every day my job was to work for the average Quincy family, for the small business owner struggling to make a go of it, for the senior citizen on fixed income trying to hold on to their home and independence."

"And I knew that my job was to fulfill our obligation to give all our children the best education possible," he added.

"Today, I know that I can do a better job as mayor, a better job of protecting those taxpayers, and a better job standing against that culture of entitlement and moving this city forward."

"But I also know absolutely that I cannot do it without the support of the regular working people and senior citizens of Quincy. This election is not about me, or Tom Koch. It's about you, the people of Quincy, and what kind of future you want for this city."

Historian David McCullough To Speak At ENC Commencement

Pulitzer Prize-winning historian David McCullough will be the speaker at Eastern Nazarene College's upcoming spring commencement, announces college President Dr. Corlis McGee.

McCullough will speak at Eastern Nazarene's 87th commencement exercises, to be held on the college's front lawn Saturday May 16 at 2:30 p.m., when approximately 200 graduates will receive associate's, bachelor's and master's degrees.

"We are honored to have such a distinguished historian serve as our commencement speaker," McGee said. "David McCullough has performed an important civic service in helping to satisfy the public's growing appetite for good historical writing."

By making history come alive to countless Americans, he has not only nurtured the public's intellectual curiosity, but also strengthened the fabric of the republic."

DAVID MCCULLOUGH

McCullough's connection to Quincy stems from his historical affection for the city's most famous native son: John Adams. His Pulitzer Prize-winning biography of the nation's second president spawned an award-winning HBO miniseries produced by Tom Hanks, and has been credited with spurring a four-fold increase in the number of tourists who annually visit Quincy's Adams National Historical Park.

A Pittsburgh native and Yale graduate, McCullough was the longtime host of PBS's award-winning history series, American Experience. In addition to John Adams, his books include the bestselling 1776, The Johnstown Flood, Mornings on Horseback - a biography of Theodore Roosevelt - and Truman, for which he also won the Pulitzer Prize. In 2006, he received the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian award.

Eastern Nazarene College (ENC) is a fully accredited liberal arts college. With approximately 1,200 students distributed across its traditional residential undergraduate program as well as adult studies and graduate programs, ENC is known for its success in getting students into top graduate and medical schools, and has a 100 percent acceptance rate for its students into law school. ENC is committed to focusing on the teaching and mentoring of students in a nurturing, spiritually informed and academically supportive environment.

'CookKit Collection' To Help Women Of Darfur

For many people, there's nothing like "Mom's home cooking."

But what if your Mom (or sister, or daughter, or female cousin and female friend), not only did not have the resources with which to cook, but also put her life on the line every time she went out to gather cooking supplies?

For the women of Darfur, this horror is a daily reality.

Since 2003, Africans have been terrorized, driven out of their villages and murdered by the Sudan government. Arab militias, and the Janjaweed. It is estimated that at least 400,000 people are dead, and 2.7 million people have been displaced.

To provide food for their families, the women must sear for firewood outside the refugee camps, where there is no protection.

People at Quincy Community United Methodist Church wanted to know what they - people living half a world away - could do to help. The answer is simple: all it takes is aluminum foil and a cardboard box.

"These two simple, everyday things can literally be life saving," said Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, pastor of the church, "because they can build a solar cooker."

"It's called a 'CookKit' and it's easily assembled by hand. The CookKit converts sunlight into heat, which then cooks food. As a result, women no longer have to leave the safety of the refugee camps to gather firewood, and can feed their families."

The United Methodist Women of Quincy Community United Methodist Church, one of the church's three women's groups, have taken the CookKit as one of their mission projects. They invite everyone to help the women of Darfur by raising money for CookKits.

"The Solar Cooker Project was started by Jewish World Watch," said Merrie Eaton, president of the United Methodist Women.

"Quincy Community United Methodist Church will be among the first United Methodist Churches to participate in this important cause."

A CookKit costs very little: $30 buys 2 cookers for one family (one is used for water, sauce, or vegetables; the other for sorghum, the main food distributed by the World Food Programme); $150 buys 10 cookers for 5 families; $300 buys 20 cookers for 10 families.

The collection will begin Sunday on Mother's Day, and will continue through Sunday, May 24.

"The choice of dates is deliberate," said Dr. Jarek-Glidden. "You can honor your Mom and/or the women in your life by helping to save women's lives in Darfur. I know that's a gift my own Mom will really appreciate."

To contribute to the CookKit Collection, send a gift to Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Quincy, MA 02170. Indicate the gift is for the CookKit collection.

For more information, call the Church Office at 617-773-3319.

Save Money, Complete Your Basement Renovation Fast

(ARA) - With all the uncertainty surrounding today's economy, more people are saving money by enjoying quality time at home. Some are using this time to invest in room or whole-house makeovers to enhance the value of their homes.

One of the most obvious makeover targets is the basement. Now is the perfect time to convert that space into an entertainment venue you will be proud to show off and where you will be able to spend your free time comfortably.

Many of the projects can be completed with the help of your local ARA-member rental store. Renting tools to complete the job can save you money and storage space after the job is finished. Rental stores also offer expert advice on using equipment safely and efficiently.

Begin by deciding what you need to do to make your basement the most comfortable place in your house. Plan a timeline with all the steps, including areas where you may need additional help from a professional.

Here is a list of steps to complete a basement renovation from start to finish:

1. Check to see what building permits may be needed. Every city is different, and you don't want to start any do-it-yourself home project without being certain you have all the necessary permits.

2. Moisture-proof walls and floors. Often, moisture in a basement is a result of poor drainage outside. Rent a skid-steer to correct the grade outside your house. The ground around your house should fall away from the foundation at least 6 inches within the first 10 feet around the perimeter of the home.

3. Frame walls, rooms and ceiling. Renting a pneumatic nailer will make the job move quickly.

4. Rough in electrical, plumbing, cable and telephone connections. This is an area where you may want professional help. If you work on these projects yourself, rent a conduit bender to run wires, and a voltage meter to test your installed wiring.

5. Schedule electrical and plumbing inspections.

6. Install insulation and vapor barrier. This will help keep your basement warm and dry.

7. Install drywall, sand, tape and prime it. Drywall gives a finished look to a space but can be difficult to install. Rent a drywall router or a keyhole saw to cut corners and special angles flawlessly.

8. Add flooring. If you choose carpet, be sure to add enough padding to make it as comfortable as possible. You can rent a carpet stretcher and install the carpet yourself. Or choose hardwood to add warmth to the space. For wood floors, you can rent a pneumatic floor nailer to speed the job along.

9. Paint the walls. Renting a paint sprayer will make the job quick and give you the professional results you want.

10. Install trim, molding and baseboards. Rent a compound miter saw for cutting perfect corners.

11. Put in light fixtures. Follow the manufacturer's instructions. Rent a hole saw to install can lights in the ceiling, expanding the space.

12. Get final inspections and enjoy your new space!

Renting tools from an ARA-member rental store will stretch your budget dollars further, and the expertise of the rental store staff will make doing the project yourself easy.

The pride for your newly finished basement will be yours to own forever. Most everything else? Well, that you can rent! To find your local ARA-member rental store, visit www.RentalHQ.com, the world's largest rental store locator. You can search by geographic location and by the specific type of equipment you are looking to rent.

How To Make A Big Splash With A Small Yard

(ARA) - A baby boomer couple downsizing, a working professional's downtown city condo, and a young family's starter home in a metro suburb -- the trend of people moving to smaller homes with smaller yards continues to grow. If you are one of them, how do you make the most out of your small outdoor green space? With the right tools and strategies, you'll find the possibilities are endless.

"When people move to smaller homes, they want to make the most of the green space they have," says Ashton Ritchie, lawn expert and master gardener for Scotts. "They still want that outdoor retreat after a stressful day."

Ritchie says that smaller yards can be some of the most stunning because they require less time and homeowners can focus more on what they really enjoy. "The difference is with a small green space, it's not an overwhelming full-time job. I've seen many beautiful small yards with intensive gardening and great landscaping."

Here are Ritchie's tips for getting the most out of small outdoor green spaces:

1. Make it your own.

If you want to create an outdoor retreat, a small yard holds many possibilities. Your priority should be deciding how you are going to use your yard. If you enjoy cooking, have much of your space dedicated to a great vegetable and herb garden. If you want to use your space to unwind at the end of the day, create an outdoor room with relaxation elements. If you plan to use your small yard as an additional space for entertainment, incorporate sitting space and tables for overflow from the house.

2. Use contrast to your advantage.

The nice thing about a small lawn is the contrast you can easily achieve in the foliage. Lush green grass is the foundation that contrasts with the colors and textures of other plants. Keep your lawn vibrant and consider planting flowers, shrubbery or an herb garden. The contrast in these elements provides as visual frame that is very appealing.

3. Fertilize for a green and beautiful lawn.

Green grass provides us with a soothing, relaxing feeling. But the No. 1 problem with grass is it ends up malnourished and starves. Therefore it's important to fertilize four to five times a year so you get strong root and top growth.

People with small yards don't want to bother with bulky bags of fertilizer and storage of a spreader. Scotts Turf Builder with Built-in Spreader is a great new solution. The handheld, all-in-one container is simple to use -- simply flip the spout, tilt and shake onto your lawn. The fertilizer strengthens the lawn and promotes a healthy root system. It feeds a lawn up to 1,000 square feet. If you finish and have extra, the small container is easy to store for use next time.

4. Outdoor decor adds appeal.

Consider adding elements to your yard that interject your personal style. For example, adding a water feature is a great idea that is visually appealing plus it adds a water sound that creates a relaxing atmosphere. You could also add a bird feeding station to attract wildlife. If room is very limited, consider a small hummingbird feeder. Be creative and get ideas from your local gardening center.

5. Use space-saving furniture.

Small spaces do not call for big and bulky outdoor furniture. Benches can be a good option because they seat multiple people and also take up less space. Look for pieces that are multifunctional like a bench or table that also opens up to provide storage space. Finally, make sure furniture can withstand temperatures all year long since it probably won't be stored in a different location.

Small yards can provide big beauty with these tips and strategies. Visit www.Scotts.com where you can read Ashton Ritchie's blog and get other ideas for maximizing small green spaces.

Protecting Outdoor Wood Furniture

Q: A friend told me that my new wooden lawn furniture would "cure" best if I just let it sit out in the yard through all four seasons. My dad told me to put waterproof sealant on the furniture. What do you think?

—Cherie in Columbia, Md.

A: Which advice to follow depends mainly on what type of wood from which your lawn furniture is constructed. A durable, usually tropical, hardwood like mahogany or teak should not be treated with anything other than the occasional cleaning with wood soap and water. Furniture made of this material will weather gracefully outside and even handles cold, snowy winters well. The wood often turns gray in a fairly short period, but as long as it's kept clean and out of constantly damp conditions, it will stay serviceable for many years.

Redwood or cedar furniture should be protected with a clear water sealer. These woods also can be painted (with enamel paint) or stained, but most owners only do so to cover a mark or discoloration -- otherwise let the natural wood grain show through the sealer coat. Bring this type of furniture inside for the winter, or at least move to a fairly dry location and cover with a tarp.

Pine furniture also can be coated with water sealer, but painting or staining the wood is an equally good option. Store it indoors through the winter or cover up to reduce weathering problems.

HOME TIP: Cleaning those big outdoor-furniture cushions after a long winter? Scrub them with a large acrylic brush and soapy water, hang on a clothesline or fence, rinse with the garden hose and let dry.

The Hidden Costs of Major Appliances

With budget cutbacks acThe true price of a major appliance is what it costs to take out of the store, plus what it costs to run it once you get it home. Since appliances can account for a hefty portion of your monthly power bill, the lower price of an appliance on sale might not be much of a bargain if you end up paying higher electric bills for the next 10 years.

Before you buy a new major appliance, look at the energy-rating info. Laws require that manufacturers put Energy Guide labels on all major appliances. The labels must include the results of independent laboratory tests and information such as the capacity and estimated annual electrical consumption for a particular model, as well as for comparable models. EnergyStar appliances must additionally be much more efficient than other average models. (For more information, see www.energystar.gov.)

The U.S. Department of Energy has a Web site loaded with energy-saving information. At www.energysavers.gov, click on Appliances and Electronics, and look for Estimating Appliance and Home Electronic Energy Use. Apply the formula to calculate the energy used by your current appliances and electronics, as well as any you intend to buy. Remember to add in your "phantom" loads: appliances that use electricity even when they're turned off. Examples of this are televisions and computers. (To turn them completely off, cut the power via a power strip.) A big question among computer users is whether to turn the computer off during the day or to leave it on. A rule of thumb is to turn off the monitor if you won't use it for 20 minutes, and both the monitor and computer if you won't use them for two hours.

At EERE.Energy.gov, you can download a PDF booklet that covers saving energy, your home's energy use, heating and cooling, windows, lighting, appliances, major appliances shopping guide and more.

Before you buy a major appliance, look online for ratings. If you subscribe to Consumer Reports, you can purchase yearly access to its online database of test results and recommendations. (It's a few dollars less if you already subscribe to the magazine.) You can also buy a one-month subscription if you're not likely to use the service for a whole year.

New Design Trends Help Homeowners Relax, Connect And Reboot

(ARA) - Economic uncertainty. A changing political climate. Decreasing consumer confidence. Americans today have a lot to be anxious about -- and the need for escape is greater than ever. No place is this need more evident than in the home.

According to Judy Riley, Moen's vice president of design, the home is looked to as the primary place for comfort and serenity during times of unrest. "With decreased entertainment budgets and the growing trend toward entertaining in the home, Americans are spending a lot more time indoors," says Riley. "Today's home is for much more than eating and sleeping -- it is an escape from the outside world."

What are the latest trends in the modern escape home? More importantly, how can you transform your home into a safe haven with both style and smarts?

The Hub of the Home

Kitchens have come a long way in the past several years, and they continue to evolve more into the family gathering place than ever before. "The kitchen is the center of connectivity for today's family -- not only physically, but also digitally," says Riley. "The kitchen is where we socialize, check email, surf the Web, watch television and charge everything from the cell phone to the iPod."

With the kitchen as the home's nucleus, it's important to incorporate design elements that fit this specific purpose. Today's kitchen lends itself to a more flexible, open plan than ever before, with ample counter space and wiring to support all of the family's gadgets. It also requires more seating, from high-top bar stools to casual table dining.

As the most frequented space in the house, it's important to incorporate items into your kitchen that fit your family's personality -- items that are both functional and fashionable. Moen's Level kitchen faucet features sleek and contemporary lines that help to make a bold statement at the sink. Plus, the faucet's pull-down wand simplifies everyday tasks, such as filling large pots, pitchers and vases, making your work that much simpler.

Serene and Green

Like the kitchen, today's bathroom is taking on a variety of functions, acting as a setting for both wellness and rejuvenation. Consumers aim to achieve a peaceful environment by staying conscious of their impact on the environment and considering potential energy and cost savings in the bath.

Green has become part of the dialogue for homeowners as they weigh product features and functions, with many seeking to understand a product's impact on the environment before making a purchase. "Although consumers want to do their part to be green, they aren't willing to sacrifice a product's performance to do so," Riley says. "For example, they might want a low-flow showerhead, but not a weak shower experience."

Moen's Envi Eco-Performance showerhead takes both of these desires into consideration. With three unique spray settings and a flow rate of 1.75 gallons per minute (gpm) -- 30 percent less than the industry standard 2.5 gpm -- homeowners can have a guilt-free, superior shower experience every day. Modified spray forms increase the velocity of water streams hitting the body, which allows Envi to treat users to a full, satisfying and relaxing spray -- all while saving water. "Achieving both a greener and more relaxing shower has never been easier," says Riley.

Party Central

Entertaining and dining are coming home this year, and spaces need to be adaptable in order to accommodate multiple functions and different types of get-togethers. Transforming products, such as a dining room table that rises to bar height and expands for entertaining, like the Lexington Zacara Movida Bistro Table, gives an ordinary object a greater purpose. It's suitable for both family meals and celebrations at the lower height with a leaf extension in place, and can also serve well for a wine tasting, cocktail party or a night of poker when set higher and more bistro-like. "Flexibility within the home allows you to create a variety of moods and settings for entertaining," says Riley. "The goal is to be able to easily transition from casual to formal, while maintaining a style and comfort level that's suitable for each occasion."

What will tomorrow bring for your home? By incorporating 2009's best trends into your living space, you can ensure it remains your refuge for years to come.

For more information on Moen's Level kitchen collection or its new Envi Eco-Performance showerhead, call (800) BUY-MOEN or (800) 289-6636.

Defeats Montclair, 43-34

Atlantic MS Wins All-City Basketball Championship

Atlantic Middle School, following an exciting 43-34 victory over Montclair, won the Quincy Recreation Department's All-City Middle School Basketball Championship held last month.

In the finals, Atlantic, coached by long-time QRD supervisor Joe MacRitchie, played a well-balanced game, which saw six players score buckets. Zac Bailey led all scorers with 15 points; Greg Clarke scored eight; Zack McLaren chipped in with eight of his own and Andrew Minton and Exavier Romero both scored two points to help led Atlantic to the championship.

McLaren and Matt McPhail finished the game with strong performances on both the offensive and defensive boards.

Montclair, coached by Dean Zoia, was led offensively by Kevin Pappadopoulos (11 points), Marquis McLendon (nine points), Patrick Verhault (eight points) and Mikey Barden, Dana Grasselli and Tristine Thong (two points each).

Devon Pierce and Joey Gaglione each contributed with key rebounds for Montclair.

Early Round Games

Atlantic def. Bernazzani, 50-24

In early round games of this single-elimination tournament, an event that marks the close of the QRD's winter school gym program, Atlantic defeated Bernazzani, 50-24.

David Cooper and Joe Valentine led Bernazzani with seven points each; Michael Bina scored six points and Kyle Richardson scored four points. Joey Critelli, Ryan Hughes and Benson Chun all played well on offense and defense for Bernazzani.

Montclair def. Merrymount, 51-24

Dan Guavente (ten points), John Yacano and Nolan Flynn (eight points each), Tim Keenan and Stephen Scoloro (six points each) and Mike Haley (four points) all scored for Merrymount while Daniel McLoghney did a great job rebounding.

Larry Luizzo coached the Merrymount team.

Sterling def. Point Webster, 30-27

Pat Denis (14 points), Anthony McDonough (six points) and Max Joseph (six points each) and Alex Roberts and Ronnie Walts (two points each) helped Sterling to a three-point win over Point Webster.

Mike Curtin coached the Sterling MS squad.

Marli Casli (ten points), Peter Cedrone (eight points), Michael Aupperke (three points) and Rich Turpin, Pedro Silva and Michael Tortownsi (two points each) scored for Point Webster.

ster MS.

Ritchie McAllister and Vinnie Pastore coached Point Webster MS.

Snug Harbor def. Squantum, 63-20

Alex Ngan scored 14 points to lead Snug Harbor to a convincing win over Squantum MS. James Lam (13 points), James Lam and Sunny Tran (eight points each), Gerson Lai and Michael Tran (six points each), Viet Doan (four points) and Andrew Schaaf (two points) also scored for Snug Harbor MS.

Paul Carson coached Snug Harbor.

Scott Higgins (seven points), Erik Chan Jones (six points), Matt Deagle (four points) and Kenny Kelly and Zack Dangora (two points each) scored for Squantum.

Mike Curtin coached the Squantum MS team.

Leading up to the championship game, Montclair defeated Sterling, 42-35, and Atlantic defeated Snug Harbor, 44-33, setting up the exciting title game won by Atlantic MS, 43-34.

The QRD All-City Middle School Basketball tournament has been held for more than 45 years and at the conclusion of the annual event Director of Recreation Barry J. Welch presented certificates to the tournament finalists (Montclair) and trophies to the winners (Atlantic).

Tryouts for the Morrisette Post #294 American Legion baseball team will continue on Saturday and Sunday (May 9-10), at 12 noon, at O'Rourke Field on Quarry Street, West Quincy.

Residents of Quincy, born on or after January 1, 1990 are eligible to tryout for this year's team.

Morrisette will be one of ten teams competing in Zone 6. Along with Morrisette, teams from Quincy, Milton, Braintree, Weymouth, Holbrook, Cohasset, West Roxbury, Jamaica Plain and Stoughton will be vying for the Zone 6 title.

Each team will play 22 games, beginning on June 3 and concluding July 10, with Zone, Sectional and State playoffs to follow the regular season. This year's State Tournament will be held at Pope Park, Acushnet, MA on July 25.

Tryouts will continue at O'Rourke Field on Saturdays and Sundays through the month of May.

Raiders One Win From Postseason

The North Quincy Red Raiders (11-4 overall) ended last week by dropping a 4-0 Patriot League contest to Duxbury High School, but with two wins earlier in the week, the Raiders are just one win away from their first state tournament appearance in the last seven years.

One more victory (the team played Hingham HS on Monday) and North Quincy will play a post season game for the first time since 2002.

Against the Dragons from Duxbury, NQ's Danny Russell, pitching in his first varsity game, went 4 1/3 innings, allowing only three runs. John Ainsley, Matt Jay and Russell picked up the team's only hits.

Earlier last week, North Quincy knocked off Whitman-Hanson HS, 2-1, on a game-winning fifth inning RBI single off the bat of Ainsley. With one out in the fifth, senior Matt Rodriguez walked and stole second base. After a fly out accounted for the second out of the frame, Rodriguez moved to third on a passed ball and Ainsley drove him home with a single to right field.

Senior Joe Edgerly was masterful on the hill. He threw six innings, allowed a fourth inning run and struck out two batters. Ben Leahy came on for the seventh and struck out two batters to earn the save.

The Raiders scored the game's first run on a fourth inning Lamonte Toombs RBI double that scored Colin Ryan. Ryan Louis and Greg Nelson played solid defense in the field for North Quincy.

North Quincy improved to 10-3 on the spring with a 7-4 win at Silver Lake HS at the beginning of last week. Louis picked up the win on the mound (six-plus innings, six hits, seven Ks, three earned runs).

At the dish, senior Matt Jay belted a three-run homer and Toombs knocked in two more runs with a single in the top of the seventh inning.

Rodriguez played solid defense behind the plate and finished the game with two hits.

Quincy Babe Ruth Highlights

Morrisette Post 15 def.

Local 4, 15-4

Morrisette Post, behind the solid pitching of Ryan Young and Kevin Jackson, won their season-opener 15-4 over Local 4.

Local 4 jumped out to a quick 4-0 lead before Young settled down and shutout Local 4 for the next five innings. Quincy pitched two solid innings of relief.

Offensively, Jay Maver (four RBI) broke open a close game with a two-run double in the fourth and Josue Ordenez (three hits) and George Whitley (two hits) also produced at the plate. Brian Graselli played a solid game behind the plate.

Nick McGaughey led Local 4 with three hits.

Sons of Italy, 8-7

Granite City scored an electrifying last inning victory over the Sons of Italy,

Granite City tied the game on a Mike Stille RBI hit and Joe Critelli scored the winning run on a wild pitch. Matt Capobianco also has a RBI hit.

Stille pitched a complete game on the hill and was backed by stellar defense from Bob King and Carl Zapata.

Paul Cuniff pitched a great game for Sons of Italy.

Community Health Day At Milton Hospital May 30

Milton Hospital, a clinical affiliate of Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center providing community-based health care, will hold its second annual "Community Health Day" Saturday, May 30, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The family focused event will feature an array of health-focused interactive exhibits, fun demonstrations and activities for all ages.

The "Gallery of Health" will showcase exhibitors from the Milton Hospital family, as well as the local community, covering such health issues as heart disease and skin cancer and providing screenings for cardiac health, blood pressure, glucose levels, lung capacity and physical fitness.

Throughout the day, attendees will be treated to presentations that promote healthy and active lifestyles, including demonstrations from Judy's School of Dance, kickboxing from Fitness Unlimited, karate from Kearney's American Martial Arts, plus Tai Chi, yoga and music therapy workshops. Cedar Hill Health Care Center of Randolph will also be offering Wii demonstrations.

"Sustainable Milton," a program of the Town DPW focusing on green living, will be an exhibitor at the health fair and will be taking orders for rain barrels and compost barrels.

New this year, the hospital will be providing "behind-the-scenes" tours of its new state-of-the-art operating rooms, emergency department, laboratory and endoscopy and radiology departments - a great experience for kids of all ages.

In addition, an interactive exhibit area will feature a tour of a Fallon Ambulance, demonstrations by the Milton Police and a look at Milton Hospital's da Vinci surgical robot.

Children will have fun in a seventy foot super inflatable bouncy house along with face painting, a DJ, a raffle for free enrollment in the safe sitter program and other fun prizes. And, adults will be able to set a good example on how to give back to the community by donating blood at the American Red Cross Blood Donation Bus.

Healthy food options will be provided at affordable prices by Quincy restaurant, Eatin' Healthy in addition to sandwiches, snacks and refreshments from Panera Bread and Sodexo.

"Giving back to the community through education that is fun is a great way to encourage healthy living and proactive learning. We are proud to host our second annual Community Health Day to promote healthy lifestyles for all ages," said Hospital President Joseph Morrissey.

"Between health screenings, demonstrations, giveaways and great food, there is something for everyone at this event. Additionally, we are extremely excited to have the American Red Cross Blood Donation Bus on site for the day providing all participants with the opportunity to give blood and save up to three lives with a single donation."

Community Health Day, sponsored by Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, Boston will take place in the Highland Parking Lot and Highland Lobby at Milton Hospital, 199 Reedsdale Rd., Milton.

Admission is free and the event is open to the public. Rain date is May 31 in case of inclement weather.

What to bring:
Bike helmet - safety checks will be offered
Old cell phones - to be recycled by D.O.V.E.

Books and recent magazines in good condition, collected by our volunteers for hospital patients and visitors

A few dollars for lunch
Sunscreen - it is an outdoor event

Going Back to Work

Perhaps you'd considered your paid-off home to be the nest egg you'd sell and use for retirement funds. Or, maybe you had all your money invested. Because of the state of the economy, you might be thinking now that it will be necessary to go back to work.

If that's the case, here are some Web sites that can help.

- Retirement Jobs (www.RetirementJobs.com) is a free service with a database loaded with jobs for seniors. Put in your ZIP code and a few keywords and click GO. Or click the category links for positions in Sales, Real Estate, Customer Service, Admin/Clerical and more.

While the job bank is free, by signing up for membership, you get more than just access to the job listings. You'll get a free 50-page job seeker's guide (via download) that covers topics such as planning your job search, finding employers friendly to seniors and polishing up your resume. Additionally, with a paid membership you get access to live online career workshops on Tuesday nights.

As girls' volleyball spikes in popularity, a new survey reveals that 50 percent of Wisconsin female volleyball players are now playing the sport year-round—an approach that increases their risk of injury.

Although more than 380,000 girls play high-school volleyball nationwide, research on it is as rare as an underhand serve.

Athletic trainer Tim McGuire, a researcher with the University of Wisconsin Sports Medicine Center, surveyed more than 400 female high-school volleyball players at 18 schools across Wisconsin over the last year. He collected information on the number and type of injuries each athlete suffered, whether or not they used ankle and/or knee braces while playing, and how much time they spent playing the sport in off-season camps and teams.

The results confirmed several surprising facts and trends:

- Fifty percent of players surveyed are playing volleyball year-round, on teams and at camps.

- The most common injury suffered by female volleyball players is an ankle sprain, followed closely by knee sprains and upper leg strains.

- Injuries were most likely to occur near the net while a player was attacking the ball, but most didn't involve a collision with a teammate or opponent.

- More than 30 percent of players reported using an ankle brace, which protects the ankle from injury, but also may distribute pressure and impact to the knees, spine and hips.

- A previous injury, even a mild one, is a strong indicator of future injuries.

The latter point hits home for many of the athletes—more than 75 reported having had cumulative injuries. And even though most of those injuries didn't result in extended loss of playing time, they're still concerning. But it's the increase in single-sport specialization that most concerns McGuire, who notes that constantly subjecting a young athlete's ankles, knees and spines to the impact of frequent jumps on the hardwood floor can cause problems.

"Too many athletes have gotten the message that they can become better volleyball players just by playing more," says McGuire. "But that approach can actually lead to an increase in injuries, when what's more likely needed is an adjustment in technique and some pre-season conditioning."

To McGuire, the results of the study emphasize the need to focus on injury-prevention strategies.

The headache booklet describes the common kinds of headaches and their treatment. Readers can order a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue - No. 901W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My 21-year-old grandson has weighed 130 pounds for the past six years in spite of drinking protein shakes, taking weight-gain pills and eating rich, calorie-laden foods. He is 6 feet 1 inch tall. Why can't he gain weight? His self-esteem is zero because of his appearance. He loves to swim but is ashamed to appear in bathing trunks.

A doctor told him to live with it. Is that the answer? Any help you can give will be appreciated. - D.T.

ANSWER: Your grandson isn't on the lean side. He is truly skinny. If this isn't a family trait, it needs to be looked into more seriously.

Malabsorption syndromes should be considered. These are illnesses where nutrients cannot pass through the intestinal wall into the body. Celiac disease is an example. There are many more. Granted, most of these illnesses have other symptoms but, at times, those other symptoms can be so mild that they're ignored.

Trouble with endocrine glands is another possibility. The thyroid gland, the adrenal glands, the testes and the ovaries have important roles in growth and development.

Genetic illnesses constitute a group of disorders that can manifest with nutritional signs.

I have many pain answers on how to gain weight. Your grandson needs more than pain answers.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

PUTTING UP A GOOD FRONT

Discolored front teeth that do not lend themselves to tooth-whitening procedures may benefit more from porcelain veneers. After a thin layer of the front of the tooth is removed, fingernail-thin shells overlay the front of the teeth, giving them a new facade. Enamel is removed from the front of the tooth only to the extent that it leaves sufficient room to accept the veneer. Aside from selecting a color for the veneers to match natural tooth color, the dentist and the patient may agree to revise the smile by choosing a more suitable tooth shape. Elongated, round, and curvy teeth suggest femininity while square, sharp-edged teeth are more masculine. These factors may come into play with worn or misshapen front teeth.

Your smile is one of the first things people notice about you. A beautiful smile creates a youthful appearance, projects confidence and leaves a lasting impression. We can help you regain that smile. Please call us at 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Help is available through cosmetic dentistry. You will feel more confident when you can freely smile whenever you want. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where you'll find that our staff is knowledgeable, friendly and accommodating. We're confident that you will be pleased with our professionalism and high standards. We offer the services of anesthesiologist with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Porcelain veneers can be expected to last 10 to 15 years.

Marina Bay Rehab Center To Mark Nurse Home Week

The Marina Bay Skilled Nursing and Rehabilitation Center will observe National Nursing Home Week with seven days of fun and festivities for both staff and residents.

The celebration, entitled "Make a Difference in the Lives of Others," will begin Sunday, May 10, with the traditional Mother's Day brunch and live entertainment on every floor.

The official opening ceremony is scheduled for Monday, May 11, with a commendation given by Facility Administrator Rosemary McLaughlin to the staff for their compassionate care to residents throughout the year.

Live entertainment will be provided by Dave Becker and Mayor Thomas Koch is expected to speak to residents gathered in the entertainment area.

A full program of activity is planned throughout the week, including a Trivia Contest, a Staff Spa Day and an Entertainment Day complete with a Pot Luck Luncheon and a Desert Bake Off."

A theme day later in the week will feature Mardi Gras entertainment from the New Orleans Jazz Band.

The highlight of the week will be the Marina Bay Gala Friday, May 15, giving residents a chance to wrap themselves in glamour, party and enjoy live music by the Kadima Band.

The week will conclude with a Country Fair for staff and families Saturday, May 16, from 1:30 to 4 p.m.

Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Surgery
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

ARTHRITIC CONDITION

Arthritis can affect the feet and ankles. It is the inflammation of one or more joints that results in pain, swelling, stiffness, and limited movement. Occurring in men and women of all ages, arthritis is caused by the breakdown of the cartilage that normally protects a joint and allows for smooth movement. Cartilage also absorbs shock when pressure is placed on a joint (such as when walking). Without the usual amount of cartilage, bones rub together (such as when walking). Without the usual amount of cartilage, bones rub together, causing pain, swelling, and stiffness. Broken bones, general "wear and tear" on joints, and infection can all influence arthritis. Exercise is necessary to maintain healthy joints, reduce pain and fatigue, and improve muscle and bone strength. Low-impact aerobic activities are ideal.

Because your feet are the foundation of your entire body, keeping them strong, healthy, and pain-free is fundamental to your well-being. When foot problems do occur, correcting them early on often leads to the correction of problems in other parts of the body. Whether you're dealing with the chronic pain of arthritis or the sudden impact of a fracture, treat your feet to the best of care - call us at 781-986-3668 for a consultation at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221.

P.S. Joints normally contain a lubricant called synovial fluid. In joints with arthritis, this fluid is not produced in adequate amounts.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Motherhood has many faces
Fashioned by the Lord above,
Filling near and distance places
With his handiwork of love.

Some are white, and some are yellow, Some are black, and some are brown, Some are stern, and some are mellow, Granite-hard, or soft as down.

Some are fragile, fair as laces,
Warm and gently mild as May;
Some are lined and worn with traces
Of defeat along life's way.
Some are gay with all the gladness
Of the springtime on the land;
Some are shadowed with a sadness
Only mothers understand.

But like stars above the willow,
Every mother looks the same,
Bending over baby's pillow,
Softly whispering its name. - Maurice J. Ronayne

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19)
You might be tempted to be more assertive when dealing with a job-related matter. But a carefully measured approach works best at getting the cooperation you're looking for.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)
While others urge you to act now, you instinctively recognize that a move at this time is not in your best interests. You should know when to do so by week's end.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
A busy schedule keeps you on the move for much of the week. But things ease up by the time the weekend arrives, allowing you to reconnect with family and friends.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
Travel dominates the week, and despite some delays in getting to where you want to go, the overall experience should prove to be a positive one in many ways.

LEO (July 23 to August 22)
Your Leonine self-confidence comes roaring back after a brief period of doubt and helps you get through a week of demanding challenges and ultimately emerge triumphant.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22)
Virgos who have made a major commitment -- personal or professional -- should be able to tap into a renewed reservoir of self-confidence to help them follow through.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22)
You could soon receive news from a surprising source that could cause you to change your mind about how you had planned to deal with an ongoing job-related problem.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21)
A surprise move of support from a colleague who has never been part of your circle of admirers helps influence others to take a new look at what you've put on the table.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21)
While a bold decision to take an "I know what I'm doing" approach impresses some colleagues, it also raises the risk of causing resentment among others.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19)
A misunderstanding "twixt you and a friend might not be your fault at all, despite what he or she suggests. Talk it out to see at what point the confusion might have started.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18)
Getting into a community operation fulfills the Aquarian's need to help people. It also can lead to new contacts that might one day help you with a project.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20)
A minor problem could delay the start of a long-anticipated trip for two. Use the time to recheck your travel plans. You might find a better way to get where you're going.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are a dedicated romantic who seeks both excitement and stability in your relationships.

BLESSING OF THE ANCHOR - The Rev. Ann Suzedell blesses the anchor of the Quincy-built USS Des Moines, the centerpiece of the Fore River Rotary in Quincy Point. The dedication honored the individuals who were part of the shipbuilding industry and the people who served the United States in the vessels that were built at the former Fore River Shipyard. The blessing was one of the highlights of "Making Waves in Quincy Point," a maritime festival Saturday celebrating Quincy Point pride and maritime history. Among the guests attending the celebration were (behind Rev. Suzedell) Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, school superintendent; his mother, Betty DeCristofaro, wife of the late Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro; and Shane Murphy of Seekonk, first mate of the cargo ship Maersk Alabama which fought off an April 8 attack by pirates off the Somali coast. Murphy, who also worked at the former Quincy shipyard, took charge of the ship when Capt. Richard Phillips was taken hostage by the pirates. Other photos on Page 32.

Ordinance Will Regulate All Wind Turbines In City Committee Clears Way For Wind Power

The Ordinance Committee Monday unanimously approved a wind facilities ordinance to the delight of some 60 to 70 proponents who waved pinwheels about at City Hall and carried signs, "Wind Power Is Here" and "Wind Power is Clean Energy."

The ordinance will regulate all wind turbines erected in the city. Proposed wind turbines of less than 250 feet will require a permit after site plan review; those exceeding 250 feet must qualify for a special permit.

Prior to the Ordinance Committee's vote, wind power supporters lined up, nearly two dozen in all, at the City Council's Public Hearing to urge councillors to move quickly on the wind facilities ordinance submitted by Mayor Thomas Koch and prepared over the past year by the Mayor's Wind Committee.

Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro, chairman of the Ordinance Committee, served on the mayor's committee, as did Ward 3 Coun-

No Layoffs Seen But Some Jobs Unfilled

Koch: No New Taxes In FY10 Budget

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Mayor Thomas Koch promised "no new taxes" Monday when he submitted his 2010 budget proposal to City Council.

At $226.5 million, Koch's proposed budget figure is actually $4.6 million or 2% lower than the bottom line for this year's budget of $231.1 million.

In addition, the proposed budget maintains the current tax levy of $169.16 million. These are the total funds raised through real estate and personal property taxes. Assessments and the tax rate determine the final tax bill.

"People are hurting out there. We want to keep the tax levy the same," Koch said, adding that his proposed budget "protects core services and provides real spending cuts."

At this time, there will be no layoffs, but many job slots will go unfilled, according to Koch who said layoffs could be costly as the city would pay as much as $34,000 per person a year in unemployment expenses.

"We may be back before you to address additional cuts," said Koch who acknowledged the grim financial prospects, "across the state, the nation. It's across the globe."

Koch said, "We owe the residents the best in service. We've made adjustments, knowing that going forward the dollars would not improve."

Under Koch's plan, police, fire and education are level funded while other departments will take a hit.

Koch stressed that fixed

Award Recipients Honored For Distinguished Service In Law

Lincoln, Justice Theme At Quincy Court Law Day

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

Abraham Lincoln and his dedication to justice was the theme of Quincy District Court's 51st Law Day, held last Thursday to honor recipients of awards for distinguished service and outstanding performance in the field of law.

Nearly 200 family-members, public officials, Quincy Court judges, law enforcement officers, educators and political representatives crammed the courtroom to watch the often emotionally-moving presentations.

Koch To Kick-Off Re-Election Bid Tonight

Mayor Thomas Koch was to kick-off his reelection campaign tonight (Thursday) with an introduction by State Rep. Ronald Mariano, who praised the Mayor's ability "to bring people together and lead honestly."

Mariano, who is also a long-time Quincy School Committee member, said he has known Mayor Koch for more than 20 years through a range of leadership positions in the City, adding that he is "proud to work with him regularly on the School Committee and proud to call him a friend."

"In these historic times,

we need a leader who can bring people together and find the answers to our City's challenges. Tom Koch has already shown he is that person, and I know he will continue to be that person as our Mayor," Mariano said.

The Mayor did not disvulge many details of what he expected to tell supporters at the kick-off event at the Quincy Elks, but said that generally he will talk about "an honest record we are proud of, and our vision for Quincy's future."

"I know we will be talking about securing the city's finances, our plans for downtown, our repaired relationships with the state government and a number of other issues we've tackled in the last 18 months," Koch said. "It will be a fun night for the entire family, and I am looking forward to seeing so many old and new friends."

Free First-Time Homebuyer Seminar May 27

The homebuyer tax credit recently signed into law will be the subject at a free first-time homebuyer seminar set for Wednesday, May 27 from 7 to 8 p.m. at the office of Century 21 Abigail Adams, 221 West Squantum St., North Quincy.

The seminar is being offered by Century 21 Abigail Adams Agency in conjunction with Franklin American Mortgage Company's senior mortgage loan officer, Jennifer Lambert.

The homebuyer tax credit is part of the provisions of the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act. The bill provides for up to an $8,000 tax credit that would be available to many first-time homebuyers for the purchase of a principal residence on or after Jan. 1 and before Dec. 1 of this year. The credit does not require repayment.

Those attending the seminar will learn more about who qualifies for the tax credit, which properties are eligible, and how much the credit will be.

For more information on the free seminar, call 617-471-7575.

cost obligations increase each year so even level-funding hurts.

"Level funding is different from level services." The mayor said.

Koch outlined potential reductions in the police department with 11 jobs unfilled and the fire department with a reduction in force of four firefighter positions and two civilian positions.

However, both departments are expected to benefit from federal stimulus programs. One program would pay the salaries of 13 patrol officers for three years with the city picking up the fourth year tab.

The city could retain firefighters under a federal Staffing for Adequate Fire and Emergency Response grant.

Similarly, the school department would be level funded at $81 million but federal stimulus grants are expected to increase the final figure by $4 million.

Despite those federal dollars, Koch said the schools would still face cuts due to fixed obligations.

"We are continuing to work with the teachers' union," said Koch who cited $1.7 million in savings negotiated with city administrators and other union employees who agreed to $1.7 million in raise deferrals.

Koch praised the firefighters as the "first to take the wage deferral," but even with wage deferrals, there will be major reductions.

The library budget will be cut $281,000, the Department of Public Works by $994,000, Parks and Forestry by $186,000, Recreation by $60,000, and Information Technology by $210,000.

Koch plans the purchase of six police cruisers at $300,000 and an increase in the snow and ice budget to $600,000.

In addition, the summer jobs program will be scrapped under Koch's budget which only funds salaries for playground leaders.

Koch described the conservative estimates used in the 2010 budget calculations to reach 2010 revenues of $234,178,751.

This anticipates a $7 million or 15% cut in state aid while growth is estimated at $2.1 million, and local receipts at $19.93 million (down $500,000) with all other local revenue stable at $5.5 million.

Koch credited the council and city employees with a major impact on budget savings and containment. He cited the employees' voluntary raise deferrals and their "landmark agreement to join the state Group Insurance Commission."

According to Koch, joining the state's insurance plan not only saves $6 million in health care costs, but, also, "We'd be looking at $4 million in increases this year."

Koch cited other savings of $400,000 through the city's tri-town trash collection

According to Koch, his administration uncovered and solved numerous financial problems in the past year, ranging from $1.7 million in unfunded employee contracts, $1.7 million unfunded debt payment, $4.1 million in unfunded costs for the Honeywell project as well as millions in misallocation of water and sewer fees.

Grateful Survivor Thanks Firefighters Before Going Home

By LAURA GRIFFIN
 Fire destroyed Terri Knight's life and stole her husband and two infants but she is still alive and grateful to Quincy firefighters.
 When Knight knew she'd be heading back to Oklahoma this week after seven weeks of treatments for her own burns, there was one thing she and her family wanted to do.
 "They wanted to say thank you before returning to Oklahoma," said Knight's attorney Bill Kennedy.
 Knight and her family wanted Quincy's firefighters to know they appreciated the dangers the firefighters faced in the devastating fire on March 25 and the efforts they made to save her and her family.
 So last Saturday, Knight walked into Quincy Fire Department headquarters and met the 30 firefighters of Group 3 who answered the two-alarm fire that Wednesday.
 "It was nice to see her physically walk into the station," said Deputy Chief Gary Smyth, adding that for Knight and the firefighters, "There weren't a lot of words. She did shake every members' hand. She was weak and quiet. Somehow this helped."
 "It was emotional for all of us to see her. I hope it was comforting for her," said Smyth who introduced Knight to Dan Sullivan.
 "During the search and rescue firefighter Dan Sullivan detected a breath and found (Knight) was still alive. He met with her."
 Knight returned to Enid, OK, Tuesday. There, in a city at the edge of the Great Plains, she will try to heal her body and spirit.
 Both Smyth and Kennedy said she has a very close family and community that have helped since the tragedy.
 While Knight was at Massachusetts General Hospital and Spaulding Rehabilitation Center, the Muslim community in Boston took care of her family and provided space in their homes.
 "Terri's own resilience

SURVIVOR THANKS QUINCY Firefighters - Terri Knight holds up a card thanking Quincy firefighters for saving her life and trying to save the lives of her husband and two infants in a fire that swept through her apartment March 25. in surviving when many thought she would not, is undoubtedly a measure of Terry's faith and that of her family," said Kennedy.
 No one doubts that Terri Knight has a long road ahead. She's already recovered from a coma and undergone skin grafts and had to face the tragedy of losing her husband, her one-year-old son Ali and two-month-old son Hussein.
 Someday, she told Kennedy she will return to Quincy.
 "She wants to return to the community where she enjoyed living with her family," Kennedy said.
 After the fire broke out in the Knight's illegal apartment, the city has cracked down on other illegal housing and Kennedy is suing the owners on Knight's behalf.

Hearing Monday On Zoning Changes To Quincy Center District

A City Council public hearing on zoning changes to the Quincy Center district proposed by Mayor Thomas Koch's administration will be held Monday night following the Planning Board's review this week.
 The Planning Board held a hearing on the proposed changes aimed at setting the table for the City's $1 billion redevelopment plans on Wednesday.
 "We continue to move this historic project forward, and I am so proud of all the work we have been able to complete to date," said Koch. "This project will bring Quincy unprecedented private investment and unprecedented new jobs. And these zoning changes are an important part of the equation."

 The changes are largely meant to match the City's zoning code with its Urban Renewal Plan, the plan guiding redevelopment downtown. The changes would allow developers to seek a special permit from the Planning Board to construct buildings as high as 20 stories, compared to the 15 stories allowed by right today.

The changes would also give the Planning Board authority over parking issues and signage in the downtown district in provisions keeping with the overall intent to make the Planning Board the primary permitting-granting authority downtown.

The administration and the team from Street-Works Development are in the middle of a two-month series of public meetings on long-term development plans for Quincy Center. A schedule is available on the City's website at www.ci.quincy.ma.us.

"These meetings have truly been one of the most positive experiences I've had as Mayor," Koch said. "People are enthusiastic. They are informed. And the questions have been serious and challenging."

Son Beams

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Saluting Henry Bosworth: A Proud Quincy Pointer

(I had the honor and privilege of representing my father, Henry Bosworth, at Saturday's "Making Waves in Quincy Point - A Salute to Shipbuilders and Sailors." I want to personally extend my thanks to the Rev. Ann Suzedell, pastor of Quincy Point Congregational Church and the coordinator of Saturday's event, for inviting me to participate. Below is the text of the speech that was given.)

I am indeed honored today to represent my father, Henry Bosworth.

I am sure he would have been thrilled to be a part of such a joyous and festive celebration of Quincy Point Pride.

And I'm positive that he is looking down today and smiling at all of you for your kind remembrance.

I want to thank Rev. Ann Suzedell for the privilege of being a part of today's recognition of the greatest generation.

Yes, my father was proud to be included in that group. He was equally as proud to be known as a Quincy Pointer and a World War II Navy veteran.

And Henry seldom, if ever, missed an opportunity to show his Point Pride.

Most Quincy Sun readers know that my father's last column before his sudden passing on Feb. 7 was about Quincy Point.

Dad enjoyed reminiscing about the old neighborhood, its people and certainly his fond memories that stretched back to the days when he was just a young boy.

That column touched on so many of his fond memories of this area of the city.

Among them:

The Lincoln Theater – the Point's social center – where families could watch wholesome entertainment as little as a dime.

Avalon Beach – with its rafts and clean water waiting for you.

Engine 3 stationed at the Fire Station and a police officer walking his beat – both offering residents a sense of security.

And the stores of the day, including Zack's and Stones and the A & P supermarket.

That column on the Point was the last piece of writing Henry did.

And, although I didn't realize it at the time, it was a simple drive through his beloved Quincy Point that triggered those memories once again.

Two weeks before he died, I called my father on a snowy Sunday.

A relative had passed away and I called my dad to ask if he would like to attend the wake.

I didn't want him to drive his car on snow-slicked streets.

Henry gratefully and enthusiastically accepted my offer to give him a ride.

My wife Amy and I headed out the door and drove from our home in Halifax to my parent's house in Braintree.

We picked Henry up and soon the three of us were headed to the funeral home in East Weymouth.

As we reached Quincy Point, the ride to the funeral home became a trip down memory lane.

Driving down Southern Artery, Henry noted the site of the old Pollard School. The school was one of his favorite Sunbeams topics.

"There's where I went to elementary school," he said to us as soft, fluffy flakes fell, the moment captured like we were inside a giant snow globe.

Actually, pointing out the Pollard School was something each of his children heard driving with dad back in the days when we were just kids.

For me, it became redundant and expected – to the point that I would think to myself – "I bet he mentions the Pollard School two seconds after we get through this next intersection."

Regardless of the number of times we heard the story, no one ever grew tired of hearing Henry's fondness for his old school stomping grounds.

The Pollard School played a significant role in Henry's future. It was there – while still a student – that he decided to make journalism his career.

In fact, he had his first published by-line as a fifth grader writing for the Quincy News, another daily paper in the city at the time.

"From that day on," he wrote, "I knew what I wanted to do."

So, without the Pollard School, there would be no Henry Bosworth the journalist, the editor, the publisher and the founder of The Quincy Sun.

After the wake, we headed back toward Quincy and crossed over the Fore River Bridge. We reached the rotary – the subject of numerous columns about the Granite Ball.

Henry was extremely instrumental in relocating the sphere to its present location in front of City Hall.

I still can recall former Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro – one of Henry's good friends over the years – coming into the office every time Henry advocated moving the ball to City Hall.

"The People of Quincy Point love that ball and want it right where it is, at the rotary," Ted emphasized.

"But the ball belongs where it was originally – in front of City Hall," Henry reasoned.

Today, we know the ball is back at City Hall and an anchor from the USS Des Moines serves as a centerpiece of that rotary.

A fitting nautical memento and tribute to Quincy's great shipbuilding history, Henry wrote in a column dating back more than two years ago.

He would have beamed with pride at the blessing of the anchor today – and consumed by a sense that everything is in its rightful place.

Driving back through the Point, Henry stared at the fences and buildings that once comprised the Fore River Shipyard.

His father worked at the shipyard and as a young boy Henry got the chance to see some of the great Navy warships launched, the thrill of seeing them slide down and hit the water.

Some of the kids grew up to serve on some of them during World War II. Others went to war and served aboard other ships.

Henry was one of them. After graduating Quincy High School in 1942, he enlisted in the Navy and served from December, 1942 to January, 1946.

Most of those years were aboard the destroyer USS Cogswell in the Pacific.

But Henry wasn't the only Bosworth from Quincy Point to serve in the U.S. Navy.

His brother, Richard Bosworth, also enlisted in the Navy during World War II and served aboard another Fletcher destroyer, the USS Knapp in the Philippines.

After the war was over, my Uncle Richie returned home and finished his studies at Quincy High School and graduated in 1947.

A few years later, Uncle Richie rejoined the Navy to fight in the Korean War. He served aboard the USS Hector as a chief petty officer.

So, in many ways, the Bosworth brothers are bonded by the reasons we are here today:

Quincy Pointers who served their country and became members of the Greatest Generation.

Of all the traditions and history that have enriched Quincy Point for generations, I know what Henry would have underscored if he had been here with us today.

He always emphasized that Quincy Point was a "great melting pot" with bounding diversity.

Where many families of different nationalities and religions settled: Italian, Jewish, Irish, Scottish, Syrian, Lebanese, Arab, to name a few.

He was fond of saying: "You respected one another and had no trouble getting along."

Henry felt fortunate to have his roots in Quincy Point.

Quoting his final column, Henry wrote: "It was a wonderful experience growing up there."

"I guess there's a lot to that old saying: 'You can take the boy out of Quincy Point but you can't take Quincy Point out of the boy.'"

Henry Bosworth was a part of the greatest generation because he was part of one of the city's great neighborhoods: Quincy Point.

Thank you again for including his memory in your salute to Quincy Point.

Henry would have been proud.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1909 real photo postcard of the Seal Rock Inn that was perched high on the hill at the corner of Bellevue Road and Bay Street on the east side of Squantum. It overlooked Quincy Bay and a small group of rocks just off the coast that were a favorite spot for harbor seals. In this view, the inn appears decorated for a celebration with flags, bunting and lanterns, perhaps the Fourth of July. Open only in the summer its large windows easily captured the cool ocean breezes. It was built in the middle of the 19th century and was opened over 60 years when it was destroyed by fire a few years after this postcard was mailed. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Ward 1 Council Candidates Praise Leo Kelly's Service

A Letter From Margaret Laforest

Ward One is comprised of neighborhoods known for their community pride and also home to a great leader, Councillor Leo Kelly.

Leo has served on the City Council for 16+ years, including two terms as Council President. He recently received a Lifetime Achievement Award for his support of the Community Development Block Grant program and a standing ovation by the City Council for his decades of service to our city.

It was Leo's leadership that led to "The Crusher," a historic quarry areas being designated as protected open space (this was at a time before many were concerned about the drawbacks of over development). As a result, Houghs Neck has this beautiful parcel preserved, and Leo subsequently secured other properties within Ward One. In addition, Leo was a founding member of Manet Community Health Center, a strong advocate that led to the cleanup of Boston Harbor, the establishment of Nut Island Park, the annual post-holiday Evergreen Recycling Program and serves as chairman of the Beaches and Coastal Commission.

I have worked with Leo on many community projects and consider him a mentor and great friend. I want to thank him for his undying commitment to Quincy, and particularly to Ward One. Leo's tenure has been defined by a passion for the environment and a love for Quincy and I share those values and wish to continue that important work as the Ward One councillor.

Margaret Laforest
236 Rock Island Rd.

A Letter From Martin Aikens

When I heard that Leo Kelly would not be seeking re-election for Ward 1 Councillor, it caused me to take a step back and look at all the good Leo has done for the Ward and the entire City of Quincy over the past 40 years.

I have known Leo for some time now and have counted myself among his supporters since his first run for office in 1973. Leo's dedication to his constituents is unmatched. His commitment to smart, effective community development has made Quincy a better place to live for everyone. Neighborhoods throughout Ward 1 have benefited from Leo's steadfast support of Community Development Block Grants. Ward 1 has been extremely fortunate to have Leo's guidance over the years.

In addition to his day-to-day advocacy on quality of life issues, Leo's special love and attention for the shorelines and beaches that encompass Ward 1 is legendary. Quincy's beaches have had no better friend than Leo Kelly and the beauty of our natural resources are maintained today in large part due to his dedication and efforts.

Although anyone who knows Leo will tell you that this is not the end of his advocacy for the people of Quincy, it does represent the end of a chapter deserving of recognition and appreciation.

Thank you Leo for your years of representing the people of Ward 1 so well and I have no doubt I will see you around the beach.

Transit Bill Faces Test Of Contitutionality

By FRANK McCAULEY

Governor John Volpe's rapid transit bill submitted to the House of Representatives today, despite its defeat in the Senate last week, faces a constitutionality test if it is passed in the legislature.

South Shore area representatives announced that they intend to bring court action if the bill is signed into law. The action to be taken by the towns of Weymouth and Hingham is based on the fact that the towns would be responsible for payment of the bond issue but would have no direct services.

Meanwhile, South Shore representatives, with the exception of Rep. Joseph E. Brett (D-Quincy), have formed a block to oppose the bill when it comes into the House.

Rep. James McIntyre, in an 11th hour try to prevent rapid transit coming to the South Shore, sent a telegram to the governor asking him not to send down any legislation that residents of the South Shore oppose.

COMMUNITIES MAP RAPID TRANSIT FIGHT

The Quincy City Council met in special session to discuss the question of commuter transportation. City Council President William C. Ellis called the special session "for the purpose of discussion and action on the recent vote in the legislature foisting the Rapid Transit bill on Our City of Quincy."

"I called the meeting on short notice because I believe the situation involves an emergency," President Ellis explained.

Quincy State Senators Thomas S. Burgin voted against the Rapid Transit bill while Quincy State Representatives Amelio Della Chiesa, James R. McIntyre and Charles L. Shea also voted "No." The lone state representative to support the legislation was Joseph E. Brett.

(Editor's note: The MBTA "Red" Line came to Quincy Center in 1971 and was extended to South Quincy in September 1983.)

corps of volunteers, as well as the talented artists of the Chinese American Fine Art Society (CAFAS) and the Foundation for Chinese Performing Arts (FCPA). With this very successful first event, we have paved the way for even greater success in the future."

Guests were welcomed to the reception by event co-chairs Wan Wu, PhD, Principal, Kam Man Food and QMC Board Member, and Catherine Tan Chan, PhD, president of the Foundation for Performing Arts and vice chairperson of the Chinese American Fine Arts Society; QMC president and CEO Gary Gibbons, MD, and Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch.

The silent auction, featuring a wide selection of traditional Chinese calligraphy, brush painting and photography by CAFAS artists, sparked much interest with 43 works going to the highest bidders. Funds from the auction, ticket sales and raffles will be used to provide free health education, screenings and publications for the growing Asian community and to enhance Asian services at QMC.

In addition to the auction, guests were able to observe artists demonstrating their calligraphy and brush painting techniques, admire traditional Chinese costumes provided by Grandasia Bridal and Fashions and enjoy traditional Chinese music performed by FCPA musicians. Wine and hors d'oeuvres were provided by China Pearl and Fuji 1546 and all signage for the event was provided by signsandprints.com.

For more information about the event or to learn more about the QMC Hall of Fine Art, contact Lola Tom at ltom@quincymc.org or 617-376-5493.

Obama's Presidential Campaign Photos Topic At Historical Society Meeting May 21

Scout Tufankjian, the journalist who compiled a photographic record of Barack Obama's presidential campaign, will be guest speaker at the Quincy Historical Society's Annual Meeting, Thursday, May 21 at 7:30 p.m. at the Adams Academy, Quincy Center.

Ms. Tufankjian's work has appeared in Newsweek, U.S. News and World Report, and The New York Times.

Her photos have appeared on various shows including the Charlie Rose Show and NBC Nightly News.

Information Sought On Women In The Granite Industry

The Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum is seeking information on women who worked in the granite industry.

The granite industry was dominated by men because of the physical nature and dangers involved in this industry. However, there were women working in this industry in limited numbers.

Women worked in the office support area of this industry as bookkeepers, time keepers, and general office support.

The Quarry Museum is working to create a display of Quincy's granite industry that will include the women of the granite industry. The display will have the option to be moved to different locations within the city.

Anyone who has information on any women who worked in this industry should contact the museum so they may acquire information and possibly a picture to be used in the display.

The museum may be contacted at Quincy Quarry Museum, P.O. Box 69072, Quincy, MA 02269 or call 617-472-8083.

MR. and MRS. John W. Molloy on their wedding day, April 18, 1959 (above left) and at their 50th wedding anniversary celebration (above right).

Mr., Mrs. John W. Molloy Celebrate 50th Anniversary

A luncheon at the Lightkeeper's Residence on Cohasset Harbor was the setting for the 50th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. John Molloy of Merrymount.

They were married on April 18, 1959 at St. Monica's Church in South Boston. Mrs. Molloy is the former Betty Grant.

Members of the bridal party, along with family and friends gathered from Paris, Florida and Connecticut. A video of the Molloy's 50 years together was shared with the guests.

Mr. Molloy, a graduate of Boston Latin, Boston University and Northeastern University, was an educator for 43 years in the Boston Schools, and retired as principal of the Hamilton School in Brighton.

Active in community affairs since his retirement, he is Chairman of the Council on Aging.

Mrs. Molloy graduated from the Msgr. Ryan Memorial High School, Boston State College and Cambridge College. She taught Special Education and elementary classes for 32 years in the Boston Schools.

She is active as membership chairman of the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

They have four sons, Jack and Kathy of Kennebunkport, Maine; Daniel and Susan of Quincy, Michael and Laia of Paris, and Mark and Suzanne of Marshfield. They also have eight grandchildren, Jake, Kelli, Sarah, Luke, Paul, Alex, Marc and James.

They have lived in Merrymount for 48 years.

Mayor Tom Koch greeted the crowd and congratulated the police officers being honored for "what they do for their city, and for putting it on the line everyday."

Norfolk County District Attorney William Keating presented the Robert P. Dana Award for Distinguished Service in Law Enforcement to Quincy police officers Michael Duran, a graduate of North Quincy High and to Thomas Loughlin.

Holbrook Police Officers Joshua Knowlton and Scott Glover, and Braintree Police Officers James Mosesso, Stephen Wallace, Kenneth Murphy, Peter Gillis and Sgt. Jeffrey Smith also received the Dana Award.

Each of these officers was recognized for their duty to public safety in the presence of various dangerous situations involving armed suspects or criminals.

This year marked the 25th anniversary of Dana's passing, the Metropolitan Police officer who was killed in Milton in the line of duty in 1984.

Keating also presented the Timothy J. Spillane Outstanding District Court Prosecutor Award to Nigerian émigré David Omiunu who, Keating said, "Adopted America, adopted the language, and put himself through law school."

"I knew immediately when he came to our office in 2000 that he loved the law, loved justice, and was a minister of justice."

The Alfred P. Malaney Legal Service Award went to Peter J. Muse and was presented by Michael Connolly, President of the Quincy Bar Association.

The Mark S. Charbonnier Award went to Trooper John M. Moran who distinguished himself in the investigation of the shooting of the armored-car guard in Quincy in 2004. His efforts, along with those of Quincy Detective Dennis Mahoney, resulted in extensive jail terms for two of the three criminals who committed the crime.

The Charbonnier Award is named for the officer who lost his life in the line of duty on Rte. 3 in Kingston in 1994 and was presented by Clerk-Magistrate Arthur H. Tobin. Charbonnier's parents attended Thursday's ceremony.

Tobin also presented the Quincy District Court Jason Feldman Outstanding Citizen Award to Quincy Cable Television's Elizabeth Campbell, Executive Director, and to producer Mark Crosby.

DAVID OMIUNU receives the Timothy J. Spillane Outstanding District Court Prosecutor Award from Norfolk County Dist. Atty. William Keating at Quincy District Court's Law Day ceremonies.

Tobin said, "We recognized Quincy Cable TV—each year they assist the court in transmitting the Law Day ceremonies so that the citizens of Quincy can observe the good works of all our public safety officials as they confront issues which police officers face each day of their lives."

Darryl Williams of Milton, who in 1979 was shot and paralyzed in what Tobin referred to as "a horrific act of racism" received the James R. McIntyre Humanitarian Award.

Former Mayor McIntyre's son Charles presented the award to Williams, a wheelchair-bound black man, shot by a group of whites, who is now a motivational speaker advocating compassion and forgiveness.

McIntyre said, "Darryl encourages young people to settle their differences non-violently...he positively affects whoever he comes in contact with. My father would be so proud that a worthy person such as Darryl will accept this honor."

Quincy District Court Clerk Robert Bloom, who was recently honored himself by the Massachusetts Lawyers Weekly, paid tribute to Henry Bosworth, recently-passed founder and publisher of The Quincy Sun. Bloom extended his condolences to the Bosworth family.

"The recipient of the McIntyre Award in 1993 was Henry Bosworth. Under his leadership, The Quincy Sun became the newspaper of record for the city of Quincy," he said. "If it happens in Quincy, whether its politics, government, social events or sports, you will read about it in The Quincy Sun."

"Mr. Bosworth was a skilled reporter...who loved the city of Quincy, its people, and its institutions. He particularly appreciated the Quincy Court and its place in the fabric of the daily life of the city of Quincy."

Carol Queeeney, recently-retired probation officer of the Quincy Drug Court received the Rabbi Jacob Mann Social Justice Award. Tobin stated that Rabbi Mann had attended the Quincy Law Day for forty-eight consecutive years before his passing.

First Justice Mark S. Coven said, "Mann cared about people who came to court. We have never before honored an employee of Quincy District Court."

"For over 25 years Carol has worked with people with substance-abuse problems, trying to assure their recovery. Believing in the power of redemption...she gave people hope, she gave them her dedication, she gave them her friendship."

Coven spoke of the hundreds of people who are now living in recovery and leading lives they might never have hoped to be leading, but for her Queeeney's intervention.

Keynote speaker for the event was retired Supreme Judicial Court Judge John M. Greaney, now professor at Suffolk Law School.

Judge Greaney delivered an interesting and inspiring history lesson about President Lincoln and his understanding of, and fidelity to the principles of The Constitution.

Greaney said, "We celebrate Law Day this year in association with the bicentennial of the birth of Abraham Lincoln, in 1809, with an emphasis on his example."

Greaney was presented with a copy of the Emancipation Proclamation, written in Lincoln's own writing.

The Dennis F. Ryan Student Essay Contest Award, presented by Ryan's son Christopher, went to Tim Regan, a junior at Dedham High School, who also received a $50 certificate to open a bank account at the S-Bank, of Quincy.

STATE TROOPER John M. Moran (left) receives the Mark S. Charbonnier Award named in honor of the trooper who was killed in the line of duty on Route 3 in Kingston in 1994. The award was presented by Sgt. Kenneth Halloran (center) and Clerk Magistrate Arthur Tobin. At right is Tobin's son, Stephen, a state representative and friend of the late trooper.

ALFRED P. MALANEY Award is presented by Michael C. Connolly, Esq. (right) to recipient Peter Muse, Esq.

ROBERT BLOOM, Quincy District Clerk Court, paid tribute to the late Henry Bosworth, founder of The Quincy Sun. "Mr Bosworth loved the city, its people and its institutions," Bloom said.

JOHN GREANEY, retired Supreme Judicial Court Judge and keynote speaker at Law Day, gave an interesting and inspiring history lesson about President Lincoln and the principles of the Constitution.

RABBI SHMUEL BRONSTEIN, of the Hingham-Quincy Chabad, Quincy, gives the benediction at the Quincy District Court's Law Day ceremonies.

MARK S. COVEN, First Justice of Quincy District Court, presents a framed copy of Abraham Lincoln's "Emancipation Proclamation" to John M. Greaney, Supreme Judicial Court, retired. Greaney, now a professor at Suffolk Law School, was the keynote speaker at the 51st annual Law Day ceremony at Quincy District Court.

Says Facts On Taxes, Roadways, Schools 'On Our Side'

Phelan Asks Supporters: 'Please Tone It Down'

Former Mayor Bill Phelan, weighing a re-election bid against incumbent Mayor Tom Koch, said Tuesday that while he is receiving an "unbelievably positive response" from voters as he seeks people's input across the city, he is also disappointed with "some folks on both sides who are getting too angry, too personal and too nasty."

"People on both sides need to clam down, and stick to the issues," Phelan said. "I am asking my supporters to please keep it civil, and keep it on the issues. We do not need to resort to personal attacks, because we have the issues and facts on our side."

"I have a record, and

WILLIAM PHELAN

Tom Koch has a record, and that's what we should all be talking about," Phelan said. Phelan pointed out that Koch increased Quincy's taxes twice as much in one year as Phelan did in his six years in office. He also points out that roadways and schools are in worse shape despite Koch's record tax increase.

Phelan decried angry comments on blogs and in other forums as "not helpful to our city."

"I am finding that there is enormous anger and frustration out there over the Koch Administration's record tax increase, the terrible condition of our streets and roadways, and the lack of attention to our schools," Phelan continued. "That is what people are telling me over and over is important to them, and that's what I intend to talk about. I would ask all my supporters to do the same."

is healthy and good for the city," Phelan said. "But let's stick to the real issues."

Phelan last week announced formation of an exploratory campaign committee to ask the public whatever they think he should run for mayor this year. He has asked people to weigh in with their advice as he goes door to door, on his website: taxpayersforphelan.com, or to call him at 617-786-9300.

"So far, I have been overwhelmed by the positive response," Phelan said.

The former three-term mayor said he will continue to seek out advice from Quincy residents and will announce his final decision "in the next few weeks."

Response From Mayor's Spokesman

It's not official yet but the potential mayoral rematch between incumbent Mayor Tom Koch and former Mayor William Phelan appears to be underway.

A release issued by Phelan on Tuesday, which in part challenges Koch's record on taxes, appears at the left. Below is a response from Chris Walker, spokesman for Koch.

"The Mayor is spending his time leading this City through some of the most difficult times in history, not responding to dishonest attacks from hypothetical candidates," said Chris Walker, spokesman for Mayor Koch.

"But I'll say this: In his first 18 months in office, the Mayor has cleaned up a huge mess that was left him and just delivered a budget that calls for no property tax increases and still maintains our City's core services, so I think the record is already fairly clear.

Unfortunately, these dishonest attacks are likely to continue. For now, I'd just point to the state-certified record on the Phelan administration's tax bills, an independent auditor's opinion on the Phelan administration's hidden deficits, the state's opinion on the Phelan administration using Water-Sewer fees to pay for the fire and police department budgets, the state's opinion on the Phelan administration's handling of the high school project, and the state investigation of the Phelan administration's $32 million energy deal as just a few examples of how dramatically leadership has changed for the better in this city."

QHS Students Get Designated Parking

Quincy High School students have their own designated parking spots near the high school, thanks to Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly.

Kelly filed the ordinance which now designates some 40-50 student parking spaces from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Coddington Street below the YMCA.

Principal Frank Santoro said the new student parking is needed during the final construction phases of the high school. He said 40-50 students drive from all parts of the city to Quincy High

"We've lost all our parking facilities," Santoro said, noting that parking has already been designated for staff.

Santoro credited Cynthia Conley of the parents' association

Enjoying Life at Allerton House

THE ALLERTON WAY

Allerton House at Hancock Park, Quincy, MA
by Kelly Richards

Theresa Webber's children surprised her two years ago when they came to her Dorchester home and simply said that they wanted to take her somewhere. Webber says, "As it turned out, the final destination of our mystery ride was Allerton House at Hancock Park. After taking a tour and meeting some of the residents and staff, I knew I would love living here." She credits her daughter and three sons for doing their research, knowing her needs and personality, wanting to make life easier, and finding her a perfect home. "It was the first place I looked at," she says. "I didn't need to look any further."

Today, Webber's spacious one-bedroom apartment at Allerton House is decorated with lots of photographs of her children and grandchildren, as well as other personal possessions that she holds dear. "All of my furniture fit right in," says Webber. And my family is close by so I see them all the time. They especially like to come to the special events here. At the Christmas party, they saw me sitting on Santa's lap."

Prior to her move to Allerton House, Webber lived alone. With her children nearby, she could always count on them for help, but at age 82, she continued to carry out the day-to-day tasks that home ownership entails. She says, "I don't have to do anything now - no cooking, no cleaning, no paying the bills, no laundry. All of those things are done for me, and

Webber's engaging personality touches everyone she meets. "I believe we all just need to keep going and stay involved," she says. And stay involved she does. You may find her at the Bingo game at Allerton House three or four times a week, joining other residents on a road trip for lunch at a local restaurant, or socializing in the residence's elegant dining room. One of the first friends she made when she moved in now lives at Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group's skilled nursing center in Hingham, and Webber makes it a point to visit her often. "We both enjoy catching up during our visits."

According to Webber, one of the best things about living at Allerton House at Hancock Park is the opportunity to be around truly nice people. "I know everybody here," she says, and "everybody is wonderful. Moving here was the best thing!"

Ordinance Committee Clears Way For Wind Power

cillor Kevin Coughlin.

"If you snooze, you lose," said Larry Chretien, executive director of Mass Energy, a private non-profit organization, who described the state funding available now to wind power communities.

However, Chretien warned that 119 municipalities could qualify and it will be a matter of being first in line.

"The timing of this is absolutely perfect," said P.J. Foley. "If we move forward in a timely fashion, we'll be able to get some of that money and put Quincy on track."

Martin Aikens, Chairman of the Zoning Board of Appeals, said that, under the governors' plan, "Communities that endorse wind power are going to get a lot more funding. You can be eligible for all those funds."

"We can look just across the harbor to Hull to see where we need to go," said Steve Perdios of Quincy Environmental Network.

Not every speaker favored speed in considering the ordinance. Several recommended that the councillors consider all aspects of wind power from their 10 story to 20-story height to their profits and their abutters.

"Make sure the taxpayers benefit, not the developers," urged John Rodophele, indicating a need for mitigation.

"Some developers are going to make a lot of money. Try to protect the taxpayers," Roncophele concluded.

Similarly, Richard Joyce said that living with a wind turbine nearby is a lot different that viewing one across the bay in Hull. He challenged the heights in the ordinance which ranged from 10 stories to 20 stories in height.

Joyce asked councillors to insert more protections on site plan review, public input, and setbacks.

Maura O'Gara and Brian Palmucci, members of the Mayor's Wind Committee, urged councillors to pass the ordinance as soon as possible. O'Gara presented petitions from residents favoring wind power.

Sally Owens, Judy Capo and Cherie Dewar, also, urged speedy passage with Dewar lamenting the power that is "literally blowing by" and predicting a "less polluted future for our children" through wind power.

"John Adams would be sick to his stomach to see us so dependent on other countries," said Carol Abbott, after noting, "We have the wind. We've got the technology."

Steve DesRoche who heads the Quincy Youth Arena said energy costs there are over $100,000 a year and pleaded for quick passage. "It's going to happen. It's happening next door in Milton already."

Councillors did approve the ordinance but not before a thorough vetting of nearly each line in the nine-page proposal.

Zoning Board of Appeals.

The council also amended the proposed ordinance to increase the setback from adjacent properties, to prohibit advertising on the turbines. However, there is no ban nor size regulations on company signs on the turbines.

In addition, the ordinance requires that the turbine owners provide bonds or surety to cover the costs of dismantling the structure once it is obsolete.

The proposed ordinance limits wind turbines to monopoles and monitoring towers to 12-month permits.

The Mayor's Committee included Gutro, Coughlin, O'Gara, Foley, Chretien, Patti Keville, Bruce Wood, Brian Palmucci and Rob Ross.

Council Commends Dive Team Donor

City Council recently commended Richard Daley and Kenneth Wood, Sr., who donated a Ford Aero Tour Bus to the Quincy Police Marine Unit.

Wood and Daley own Paul Revere Revere Transportation, LLC, of Boston.

"We can use it to transport our divers and our equipment," Lt. Richard Gillan said after the meeting.

Gillan who heads the unit said Quincy has three teams of eight divers, all volunteers. Gillan, Lt. Robert Greenwood and Officer KenWood, Jr., are assigned to the Marine unit.

The Dive Unit responds to rescue appeals and undertakes inspections for contraband and security throughout the region.

Until now, Gillan said the unit has been using smaller vehicles when their teams are called to a rescue dive or inspection site. That has meant loading divers, tanks, and underwater gear into any available vehicle and responding to calls all over New England.

City Council President Jay Davis presented the commendation to Wood and Daley, noting the vehicle will allow the Dive Unit to "store equipment in a state of constant readiness."

In addition, Davis said the vehicle will "provide an excellent training and work platform for divers for years to come."

Ryan Farnham Promoted To Navy Fireman Apprentice

Navy Fireman Apprentice Ryan M. Farnham, son of Stacey J. and Michael F. Farnham of Quincy, was recently promoted to his current rank upon graduation from recruit training at Recruit Training Command, Great Lakes, Ill.

Farnham received the early promotion for outstanding performance during all phases of the training cycle. Training which included classroom study and practical instruction on naval customs, first aid, firefighting, water safety and survival, and shipboard and aircraft safety. An emphasis was also placed on physical fitness.

The capstone event of boot camp is "Battle Stations." This exercise gives recruits the skills and confidence they need to succeed in the fleet.

"Battle Stations" is designed to galvanize the basic warrior attributes of sacrifice, dedication, teamwork and endurance in each recruit through the practical application of basic Navy skills and the core values of honor, courage and commitment.

Farnham is a 2003 graduate of North Quincy High School of Quincy.

Quincy Police Department Updates Communications Center

The Quincy Police Department recently upgraded its "Emergency 911" equipment while training Dispatchers as part of the state's new operating system.

The new system ensures an orderly, documented, and effective response to all emergency calls for services. Quincy Police officials decided to upgrade the Communications Division because of its deplorable condition.

Phase I of the project was to move the Communications Division to the Police Academy on the second floor of the Police Station. Phase II of the project was to move the Police Academy into the old Communications Center adjacent to the Police Academy when Phase I was completed.

Due to budget constraints, it was necessary to put together a plan that would not be a burden the local taxpayer.

The proposed Communications Center needed to be upgraded with new flooring, paint, and computer consoles. In addition, electric, telephone, radio equipment, and computer lines needed to be transferred from the old Communications Center to the new Communications Center.

This was not an easy task. In an effort to defray any of these costs to taxpayers, federal grant monies were used for new furniture that would house computer equipment and Homeland security funds enabled the Police Department to install homeland security cameras along with television wall monitors mounted in the Communications Center. Other donations were made for flooring, paint, and filing cabinets, through the efforts of Lieutenant Charles Santoro, who also painted murals from old police photos.

On April 9, the transfer from the old Communications Center to the new Communications Center took place and the new system is up and operating.

At the present time, Phase II, the Quincy Police Training Facility renovation is under way. This stage of renovations was made possible by auto dealer Dan Quirk who donated all the classroom furniture.

The Quincy Police Training Facility will provide Quincy police officers with the very best in classroom instruction. It is hoped that the Police Academy will be completed sometime next month.

$55,000 Cash Transfers Spotlight Dwindling Free Cash Account

City Council recently approved a total of $55,000 in Free Cash transfers as requested by Mayor Thomas Koch for the Veterans' and the Assessors' Departments and deferred an additional $60,000 transfer request for further review.

After the votes, Finance Committee Chairman John Keenan cited the dwindling resources in the Free Cash account which is hovering around $2 million. Keenan warned that available funds may be drained if the city faces substantial emergencies.

"Our stabilization fund is nearly depleted," said Keenan.

Prior to the votes, councillors welcomed Thomas Stansbury, the new Director of Veterans' Services, who said that $25,000 was needed to meet the June payroll.

The state reimburses the city's Veterans' Services at a 75% ratio and councillors spoke of fully funding the account next year to avoid such transfers.

Marion Fantucchio, Chair of the Assessors, told councillors her department's $30,000 request would cover the data collection contract through May. "It will more than pay for itself."

The mayor, also, requested a $60,000 transfer to cover legal fees "associated with Woodward School's claim against the Adams Temple and School Fund."

"The city stopped paying funds due to the Woodward School," said City Solicitor James Timmins, describing the city as the administrator of the 50-year-old Adams Temple and School Fund, currently valued at some $300,000.

Timmins said the city failed to transfer the annual $25,000 due the Woodward School during the last administration. After the school trustees sought the funds through litigation, the judge ordered the city to cover $60,000 legal and audit fees.

Councillors asked why the city is overseeing a private trust and why the former administration stopped payments. They, then, transferred the request to the Finance Committee.

As Trustees of the Fund, City Council President Jay Davis and Councillor Michael McFarland withdrew from the council discussion.

Councillors, also, voted unanimously to clear banks for electronic processing of tax payments and other monies due the city. This paves the way for the payment of taxes and fines electronically through credit cards.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Acetylene Use

Here's an article I've hesitated to write where it will have limited interest, however there's a need to do so.

Many of our permits expire the end of April. There are currently some delinquent acetylene users within the City without a current permit. While I can't remember a fire incident with a cylinder or caused by acetylene use within a fixed site such as a gas station or muffler shop, there are still important reasons to apply for one through us.

First, the State mandates that acetylene cylinder storage requires the permission of the head of the fire department, thus the need for a permit. A permit is the written acknowledgement of permission given to maintain, store or handle materials, or to conduct processes or to install equipment. In this instance, the fire department wants to know where these cylinders are stored should we have to respond to a fire emergency in that building. Should there be a fire in a building, a firefighter wants to know as much about the contents of the building as possible.

It also gives us the opportunity to check on whether fire extinguishers are being properly maintained and tagged on a yearly basis. In many of these occupancies where acetylene is used, there is little storage or exposure to combustible contents, however, an incidental fire may start while an extinguisher can be quite useful. So in applying for acetylene storage, our first question is, have the extinguishers been maintained within the year.

Our other concerns are:

- Cylinders must be stored where they are not exposed to physical damage and tampering, by unauthorized personnel.
- Cylinders shall be stored to prevent falling.
- Cylinders shall be stored to locations where used and valve end up.
- Cylinder storage shall be separated from flammable & combustible liquids and easily ignited materials.

Notices are being mailed to locations where we suspect acetylene is still in use. Those notices are on record should there be an incident, while we encourage compliance for the benefit and safety of all involved. Should you have a question, contact our fire prevention office. We are here to help you and all of us who will benefit from a safer work place.

Thank you.

Quincy Police 'Lifesaver' Locates Missing Person

On Sunday, Mother's Day, the Quincy Police Department was notified that one of their senior residents had walked away from his home.

Fortunately, he was part of the "Project Lifesaver" program and was wearing an electronic tracking bracelet.

Once the call came in, a perimeter was set up while trained Quincy Police Officers and Norfolk County Sheriffs responded to the area with their tracking technology. Within 30 minutes, the man was found inside a business in the Norfolk Downs area.

Project Lifesaver has been involved in over 400 searches nationwide and there have been no reports of serious injuries or deaths. This can be attributed to the technology, the train-

National Nursing Home Week At John Adams Center

In honor of National Nursing Home Week, residents and staff at the John Adams HealthCare Center, 211 Franklin St., have been hosting a variety of programs which began last Saturday and will end this Saturday with this year's theme, "Nurturing Love That Lasts."

Included in the program will be "Wacky Wedding Week" when two staff members act out the exchange of wedding vows with one of the residents acting as flower girl.

Through the week, residents enjoyed a bridal shower, rehearsal dinner, a bachelor and bachelorette party, a slide show of the couple on their honeymoon in Hawaii, followed by a game of Honeymoon Bingo.

Donations for the event were by This Takes A Cake, 764 Hancock St., Almqvist Flowerland, 326 Franklin St., and The Laptop W'zrd, for videotaping the events.

United First Parish Church Moving Up In Online Voting

United First Parish Church, "Church of the Presidents," is moving up in the online voting competition to win a $100,000 grant to help restore the bell tower and improve the public corridor to the crypt and tombs of the Adams Presidents.

As of Monday, the church has moved up to 11th place out of 25 finalists for grants totaling $1,000,000 for historic preservation, which will be awarded by an online voting contest by Partners in Preservation, a partnership of the National Trust for Historic Preservation and American Express.

Rev. Sheldon W. Bennett, Minister, would like to thank Quincy residents for their enthusiastic support by voting to help restore this historic landmark, which is important to the city. Bennett asks that resident keep voting through Sunday, May 17 at www.partnersinpreservation.com. Each person may vote once every day.

Grant awards will be announced on June 16.

The historic church building, built in 1828, is an architectural masterpiece in the Greek Revival Style by Boston architect Alexander Parris and serves as a living monument to two U.S. Presidents, John Adams

Vietnam Veterans Day Observance At Marina Bay

NORTH QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL Junior R.O.T.C. and the Morrisette American Legion Post present arms during the National Anthem at the Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces Memorial Service held at the Vietnam Veterans' Clock Tower in Marina Bay. The service was held in memory of the 48 young Quincy men who gave their lives for freedom and also to honor all Vietnam veterans who served their country honorably.

FORMER VIETNAM Prisoner of War and retired Navy Captain Richard Stratton was the guest speaker at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Service. Behind him, etched in the side of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Clock Tower, are listed the names of Quincy citizens who gave their lives while serving in the Vietnam War.

Dollars and sense

Thrift Store Finds Aren't All Bargains

While everyone is trying hard to save a dollar these days, there are some things you should not to buy at yard sales, church sales or thrift shops. Here are some examples:

- Stained clothing, unless you can tell at a glance that it will be easy to get out.

- Clothing without a laundry-care tag.

- Bed linens and mattresses. Bedbugs are becoming an epidemic in some parts of the country, and it's not worth taking a chance for a low-cost set of sheets. Watch the sales in discount stores and buy when the price is even lower.

- Puzzles and toys with the parts tossed in a box. Unless you want to put it all together right there, you could get home and find that you don't have all of it.

- Shoes for children. Rule of thumb for kids is: Dress them in rags but put good shoes on their feet. The younger the child, the more important this is. By putting someone else's shoes on a foot that's still developing, you can set the child up for potential foot problems down the road.

- New shoes for adults: If someone has donated a new pair of shoes, chances are they weren't comfortable. If you really want them, walk around the store in them to make sure they'll feel OK over time.

- Dishware with scratches. There could be bacteria embedded in the scratches that you'll never get out. Skip metalware too, such as baking pans, especially if they have rust.

- Any electronics you can't try out completely in the store. A "works fine" note on the item doesn't mean it actually works, or it could mean that only some of the components work. In some areas it costs money to take unwanted electronics to the dump, and some charity shops won't take them if they don't work. Test before you buy.

More hints:

- Look for name brands. The item will likely be of a better quality. It's a bonus if you find new tags still on it, but even so, check carefully for tears or seam problems in clothing.

- If you want to hunt for bargains, go to thrift stores or church sales in higher-end neighborhoods or towns. The merchandise that's donated will be of a better quality.

Tips, Tricks For Adding Curb Appeal To Landscapes

(ARA) - You only get one chance for your home to make a first impression. With a little help from Mother Nature, you can demand a second look from passersby with a show-stopping front yard.

"Every canvas needs to start fresh and clean," says James A. Baggett, editor of Country Gardens Magazine. "So roll up your sleeves, stick your hands in the dirt and get ready to personalize your yard with color and style."

With a little ingenuity you can transform a ho-hum landscape into a real stunner with these simple tips that add professional-looking curb appeal to your home:

First things first

You can't enhance anything until you have a clean slate. So mow the lawn, get rid of the weeds, rake up and dispose of any leaves, edge the sidewalks and remove the grass growing between concrete seams and brick pavers. Prune the trees -- especially the ones near or touching the roof -- and add a layer of dark, natural mulch to any flower beds or under trees.

- Cover up the bald spots

Now you need to take a good look at your yard. How can you enhance your best features and minimize your worst? Here's a great trick:

Print photos in black and white and you'll easily see the problem areas. Determine what "flaws" you want to fix. To update your look, fill empty spaces and add interest to a drab corner or "hide" unsightly spots with colorful, ever-blooming plants like the very popular shrub roses in The Knock Out family.

Put out the welcome mat

The entry garden is the most visible garden space and sets the mood for your entire home. Whether formal or relaxed, it should draw your eye toward the front door. Plant a pair of carefully pruned boxwoods on either side of the front door to add symmetry. Add a light fixture that matches the home's exterior and shows your personal taste.

Contain yourself

For those with minimal or no yard, or if you just want the elegance and ease of containers, pot up pretty annuals and perennials around your entrance, mailbox or along the front walk. To have striking color year after year, use perennials for fistfuls of continuous blooms that help stretch your dollars. Yellow and red are hot colors this year so plant the newest Sunny Knock Out rose paired with your favorite red annuals to be in step with the latest trends.

Express yourself

Decorate a garden with a favorite antique, treasured collectible or statue. Look for objects such as driftwood, rocks or even empty mailboxes to punctuate certain areas. Use color to attract the eye. Paint your front door a bold, welcoming color or try a bright, punchy color on the shutters.

Plan for sustainability

Look for plants that are easy to grow, save water and don't require a lot of work. Pick plants that are native to your area for low-maintenance beauty. Eco-friendly shrub roses are a great choice, especially when paired with perennials for year-round color.

Baggett thinks shrub roses are perfect for first-time homeowners since they are extremely easy to grow and are low-maintenance. "Shrub roses give you a lot of bang for your buck," he says. "They are really no work for the homeowner -- and don't require spraying, harsh chemicals, pruning, deadheading or lots of water. They bloom from May to the first hard frost in the late fall, offering season-long color and visual impact in the home landscape."

The most popular shrub roses are The Knock Out Family of roses. They are available in seven shades ranging from hot raspberry pink to soft yellow, fitting any homeowner's taste and landscape style while providing continuous year-round curb appeal.

Enjoy the days you get outside to renew your yard and garden. You'll have folks taking a second look.

Underlayment Supports Room's Floor Covering

Q: I'm planning to redo our second bedroom, which is where our son kept his two cats. The cats did a lot of damage to the carpet, including urinating on it -- so much that it soaked through the carpet and padding. I plan to replace everything, including the plywood underlayment, and I'm wondering: Is there a better material than plywood for this job? Thanks. -- Carl in Wichita, Kan.

A: Underlayment is, as its name implies, a layer of support underneath a room's floor covering (whether it be carpet, tile, vinyl or what have you). It sits between the subfloor and the floor covering and padding, if any.

There are four general choices for underlayment materials: plywood -- the layer in your son's old bedroom -- fiber board, cement board and isolation membrane. Which material to use depends on the type of floor covering you plan to put in.

• Fiber board -- a thin-but-sturdy underlayment for areas where a thicker material might affect floor height. It's usually placed underneath ceramic tile or vinyl flooring.

• Cement board -- a stable material that deals well with moisture and is therefore best used in areas that are likely to get wet, such as bathrooms or kitchens. It is usually only used for ceramic tile or stone installations.

• Isolation membrane -- For tile installations over a concrete floor (particularly one that is cracked), isolation membrane protects the tile from movement occurring in such floors. Isolation membrane can be installed over an entire floor, but is commonly used in strips to cover individual cracks.

• Plywood -- What I'd recommend for your redo -- if you plan to just lay down new carpet and padding -- is a sturdy plywood. Exterior-grade, 1/4-inch AC (one side entirely smooth) is ideal, but if you are just installing new carpet it doesn't need to be perfectly smooth -- just level and free of defects.

HOME TIP: When replacing underlayment, inspect the subfloor closely after removing the old underlayment material, looking for loose seams or moisture damage.

Gardens With Color Combos, Foliage Factor

(ARA) - Lawns and gardens that are eye-catching have harmonious colorful plants in bloom and dramatic foliage varieties patterned in a way that appeals to the senses.

Unifying blooming and foliage plants in gardens has become a popular trend because it allows homeowners to think outside the box of traditional flower beds. If planted with care, a garden space can result in a heightened presence of sight, smell, movement and even touch. However, starting from scratch without proper knowledge can be tricky. From bold plant selection contrasts to color continuity, understanding bloom and foliage combinations will lead to an alluring escape in any backyard.

Ambiance Matters

Foliage plants bring as much interest to the garden and provide as many options as blooming plants. However, these combinations often exist in the form of variegated textures and non-traditional color contrasts. It is important to keep in mind the differences between a flower bed and foliage design. Foliage is all about leaf shape, vein coloration, outlines and textures. Some foliage selections are tall, dramatic and vast; others are soft, petite and simple. Arrangements are often subtle and focus on creating a mood, drawing the eye outward or upward and creating dimension.

Because common foliage colors include variations of blues, silvers, greens and deep reds, a soothing design concept is often a favorite among homeowners. To achieve this delicate ambience, it is best to use strong textural contrasts to insight supplemental interest instead of bright colors alone. A mix of matte and velvet-like foliage may be best for this style, with groupings of smooth and serrated edges. The blue-green summer leaves of Heuchera 'Tapestry' are accented with deep-red veins which complement dark foliage plants such as the deep purple of Heuchera 'Plum Royale.' These two plants from Terra Nova Nurseries, a world leader in plant breeding and genetics in Portland, Ore., work well together to infuse drama and fullness to beds or containers.

Introducing soft hues blended with striking color contrasts adds range and seems to extend the space. Plant colors such as silver, auburn, russet and deep green will also add a calming effect and develop a sense of assortment without over-complicating the layout of the garden.

By choosing colors such as yellow, chartreuse, bright reds and greens, a foliage garden will take on a more vibrant energy. While vivid hues were once less common in foliage plants, many are now cultivated with high-level color power to tackle the need. When trying to make an impact, pair several bright- and true-green foliage varieties of different textures in an area with one or two unusual foliage colors. Complementing a heavy green palette with plants of crimson or wine will become an instant focal point. For example, the shiny, lacy leaves of Tiarella 'Sugar and Spice,' from Terra Nova Nurseries, have heavily marked reddish centers in summer. When used with Tiarella 'Mystic Mist,' showcasing bright green leaves with white-speckled variegation and red veins, the combo is breath-taking.

Two other garden-worthy options from the growers of Garden Splendor varieties include Sedum 'Angelina' with evergreen needle-like, yellow foliage that makes a stunning ground cover or container plant and Sorbaria 'Sem' boasting a spectacular chartreuse leaf accented with softer bronze-red young tips that turn green in summer.

Color Congales

When planning the colors for a landscape, especially spring or summer gardens, it is wise to think in terms of diversity. When placed together, flowering blooms in a variety of colors, shapes and sizes creates a medley with enticing appearance. Professional growers like Terra Nova Nurseries and Garden Splendor make great strides each year to cultivate a wide range of colorful bloomers. Planting unexpected combinations like Terra Nova Nurseries' Echinacea 'Pink Poodle' and Echinacea 'Mac 'n' Cheese' will stop garden visitors in their tracks with a bold and beautiful surprise. The names alone are enough to draw attention.

The alternating-stripe blooms of Phlox 'Peppermint Twist' are a stunning choice for beds, borders and mass plantings. True to its name, pink and white blooms appear as if peppermint candy atop this compact grower. The Garden Splendor brand horticulturists say it is a mainstay of summer garden color.

Following the home-gardener trend of developing a collection or menagerie of color in the landscape, the Terra Nova Nurseries team introduced Echinacea 'Tomato Soup,' a coneflower with tomato-red blooms that can grow up to 3 feet tall. It follows Echinacea 'Tiki Torch,' now well known for its broad florets and burnished-copper seed cones. When creating beds, borders, containers, and other gardens, blooming color and attractive foliage will unify the areas by their sheer visual appeal. Learn more about these plants and gardening tips at www.terranovanurseries.com and www.gardensplendor.com.

For The First Time Since 2002

North Quincy Back In Post-Season

By SEAN BRENNAN

This year's North Quincy Red Raider baseball team is heading back to the state tournament for the first time since 2002.

The program's long playoff drought came to an end following a 10-3 victory over Randolph High School on Monday. With four Patriot League games remaining, North holds a 12-5 overall record, and as of press time, held a one-game Fisher Division lead over Middleboro High School for the division title.

"This accomplishment really starts with the leadership of our senior class," said NQ head coach John Fidalgo. "We have been playing well all season. It all comes down to the hard work put in by the entire team, but especially the seniors."

"Last year we were a young team, but they all came back wanting to be better and make the tournament. These kids all played fall baseball and took part in baseball activities during the winter. They put in the hard work and it has paid off for them."

The Raiders picked up the clinching post-season victory over Randolph behind the super pitching of Joe Edergerly. Edergerly picked up his fifth win on the hill, striking out 11 batters and walking none over six innings of work.

"It all starts with pitching and we have had solid pitching from a number of players all season long," Fidalgo added. "Our pitching has kept us in games and we have been able to take advantage of mistakes by our opponents when we are at bat. If we want to succeed in the post-season, we are going to have to continue to pitch well, play good defense and continue to take what we can offensively."

Against Randolph, Ryan Louis (two HR, four RBI), John Ainsley (HR, RBI), Colin Ryan (two hits, two RBI) and Brian Donaghey (three hits, RBI) led the way for North Quincy at the plate.

"The kids were certainly excited about qualifying for the state tournament," Fidalgo said. "It has been a long time since any North Quincy team has qualified, so it was a great feeling for them. They all came into this year with the same goal and we accomplished that goal, but there is still plenty of baseball yet to be played."

With a tournament spot already locked up, the Raiders can put their focus on winning the Patriot League's Fisher Division crown. North, as was stated above, holds a one-game lead over Middleboro, a team they have already beaten this spring. North was scheduled to play against Rockland on Wednesday, and the team has a huge rematch road game versus Middleboro on Friday.

"We control our own destiny when it comes to winning the Fisher Division," added Fidalgo. "With four league games remaining, including one game against Middleboro, a division title is certainly in reach. We are always looking to improve and these last four games should give us some time to work on things before heading to the tournament."

Making the post-season is a nice accomplishment, but we have higher goals we would like to reach."

North will host Pembroke HS on May 18 at Adams Field and Hanover HS on May 20 at Adams Field. Both games will begin at 4 p.m.

Quincy Recreation Announces 2009 Summer Schedule

The Quincy Recreation Department (QRD) announced this week its Summer Sports Clinic and Instructional Workshops schedule for 2009.

In announcing the schedule, Barry J. Welch, Director of Recreation, noted that by taking advantage of our outstanding municipal facilities and the great wealth of local leadership, "the Quincy Recreation Department is pleased to organize and conduct these activities for the benefit of children who are enjoying the school summer vacation."

The QRD, due to the ever-growing popularity of the clinics and workshops, also announces that there will be three ways to register. The brochure has a registration form, which will be mailed back to the QRD by May 18; beginning May 18, registration will be processed lottery style and will continue on a daily basis as long as openings exist. Online registration begins on May 19 at www.QuincyRec.com and will continue throughout the summer as long as openings exist. Instructions on how to register and a full 2009 schedule of clinics and workshops can be found on the website.

Walk-in registration for any remaining space begins on June 1 at 9 a.m. and continues throughout the summer.

For additional information, check the QRD website or call the QRD Office at 617-376-1394.

The Quincy Sun will publish the entire 2009 Summer Schedule in next's week issue of the paper.

A Job Well Done

On Monday, May 4, at approximately 8:15 a.m. Officers James Karvelis and Paul Holland were dispatched to West Quincy on a report of a "family disturbance in progress."

Upon arrival, Officer Karvelis interviewed the 49-year-old victim/mother, who said that her son just fled out the rear door. The officer obtained a description of the son/suspect and radioed this information to Officer Holland. Officer Karvelis observed a door to be broken in half and learned from the mother that her 17-year-old son caused the damage. Upon further inspection, the Officer also found a clock radio completely destroyed and numerous banister rails shattered going up the staircase.

Moments later, Officer Holland located the suspect about 100 yards up the street, so he stopped him, positively identified him as the suspect and then escorted him back to the residence in the cruiser, pending further investigation. Back at the residence, Officer Holland interviewed the suspect separately while Officer Karvelis took a statement from the victim.

The victim said that her son kicked her bedroom door in half last weekend and her son destroyed the clock radio this morning during a verbal confrontation. The victim said that her son woke up this morning demanding $20.00 from her, but she refused to give him any money due to his past history of substance abuse and the fear that he would purchase illegal drugs.

Her son became extremely angry and verbally abusive towards her, so much that she feared for her safety and called the Quincy Police Department. Officer Karvelis joined Officer Holland and confirmed from the suspect that there was a verbal argument with his mother because she wouldn't give him $20 dollars.

Upon further questioning, the suspect became extremely agitated and uncooperative. The suspect then began walking out of the residence, followed by Officer Karvelis, who asked a few more questions but could see that the suspect was growing more agitated. As they walked toward the front of the home, the suspect started shouting in a way that served no purpose, asking, "Who are you? You're Quincy @#$%^&* Police Officers." This continuous barrage of shouting obscenities resulted in a disturbance of the peace. The Officer noted that traffic began to build up at the intersection and a traffic jam and a public safety issue soon developed.

The suspect continued shouting, "I am going to flip out." Since the suspect would not calm down or obey the Officer, he was advised that he was under arrest for "Disorderly Conduct" and then placed into custody. As Officer Holland transported the suspect in his cruiser, the suspect continued being unruly, then started kicking the cruiser windows.

At the station, the suspect was too uncooperative to book, so he was placed in a cell. Once in the cell, the suspect kept banging on the cellblock window, then took off his pants and attempted to carve something into the cellblock window with the zipper. In addition, the 17-year-old Quincy resident was charged with "Defacing Personal Property" due to the extensive damage he caused.

The mother was advised of her domestic violence rights and offered an emergency order, but she declined. When asked what she was going to do when her son was released, the mother said that he would be welcome at her residence that evening.

Nice Work!

In this case, even though the mother did not want anything to do with a restraining order against her son, taking the officer's advice to speak with a domestic violence advocate to consider various options would have been a better choice than to just let the son back in.

Even a simple action as getting a restraining order that allows her son to be in the home but with the stipulation that he not threaten or harm his mother (psychological or physical abuse) may be enough to protect her. It would also assist the Police in the event that we had to return to the address for another incident.

Remember, without the proper level of intervention, the likelihood of another incident is high!

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

GETTING TO THE ROOT OF THE PROBLEM

When gum disease is allowed to progress from gingivitis (sore, swollen, bleeding gums) to more serious periodontitis (bacteria buildup around tooth roots that attacks gum tissue and bone), the standard treatment is scaling and root planing (SRP). Also known as deep cleaning, this treatment involves scraping the tooth roots where gums have detached from the teeth. The newly smoothed, bacteria-free tooth surfaces are then free to accept gum tissue for reattachment. In some cases, a low-dose (20mg.) doxycycline tablet (Periostat) may be prescribed to be taken orally twice daily for three months following SRP. It increases the effectiveness of SRP by inhibiting the action of the enzyme (collagenase) that breaks down connective tissues in response to infection.

We encourage regular dental check-ups, cleanings and home care. Early detection of problems minimizes the expenses related to major tooth repair. We do not buy into fads, but instead research, pursue and implement high-quality technology that will help improve our patients' care. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we keep abreast of all the latest advances and procedures that technology has to offer. For more information or to schedule an appointment, please call us at 617-479-6220 to schedule your next appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com. P.S. Scaling and root planing is always conducted under local anesthesia.

Reduce Stress, Refocus Your Life

(ARA) - With everyone trying to do more with less these days, it is easy to become over-stressed and fall into a rut of performing the same monotonous tasks over and over.

Author and time management expert Ruth Klein is particularly aware of the impact this kind of stress has on people's daily lives.

"To help combat everyday stress, one simple step you can take to reduce some pressure is to plan meals ahead of time to help give your mind a break from the other worries caused by hectic schedules," says Klein, author of "The De-Stress Diva in the Kitchen" and "The De-Stress Diva's Guide to Life."

Klein offers three quick tips to help recharge, refocus and reorganize your life:

Recharge Regularly

Make sure you eat at timely intervals throughout the day, as food is energy for you emotionally, mentally and physically. As consumers continue to eat out less, they have become increasingly more interested in what they are eating at home or at the office and are discovering new ways to bring creativity to their meal options.

"Try revisiting popular staple dishes, such as salads and potatoes, as they provide the perfect blank slate for exploring all the customizable ways you can create extraordinary meals," says Klein. "Adding flavorful, chef-inspired ingredient combinations, like Sargento Salad and Potato Finishers, to salads and potatoes is a tasty way to infuse your own personal preferences to your meal."

Leave Work Worries At the Office

A study by the nonprofit Families and Work Institute reported that one in three U.S. employees is chronically overworked and that more than half feel overwhelmed at least once a month. Taking a few key time-management steps can help you get more done in the day, which will help you avoid thinking about work in the evening and allow more time for a family meal.

Plan Ahead

"Even though women are pressed for time more now than ever before, it is important that they find a balance between juggling busy work schedules, attending kids' sporting events and trying to plan a great tasting family meal," says Klein. "I recommend prioritizing projects at the beginning of each week, as well as making a meal plan of what to eat and when."

However, as the common adage says, there come times when "there aren't enough hours in the day" and a strategic approach to the week may fall short. In times like these, keeping some flavorful go-to meal combinations, such as new Sargento Blue Cheese Salad Finishers paired with fresh produce, easily accessible can help avoid the stress of preparing something good to eat at the end of a long day.

Find more tips from Ruth Klein at www.sargento.com.

The Best Way to Treat Sunburn

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: What's the best way to treat sunburn? I get one every year. I know it will happen this year too, and I want to be prepared. - D.J.

ANSWER: The best way to treat sunburn is not to get one.

What makes you think you'll get one this year? You're doing something wrong. I have to repeat things that should be common knowledge, so bear with me.

Don't go out into the sun during the hours of its greatest intensity -- 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. I have a feeling this is a rule observed more in its breach.

Always wear sunscreen with an SPF -- sun protection factor -- of 15. If you are very sensitive to sunlight, use one with an SPF of 30. Apply it 15 to 30 minutes before going outside, and reapply it at least every two hours. Each application requires about 1 ounce. If you go into the water or are sweating heavily, apply the sunscreen more frequently.

With a sunburn, in about three hours after exposure, the skin reddens and becomes painful and hot. Taking aspirin relieves pain and can lessen the damage done to the skin. Don't give aspirin to young children -- they can take Tylenol. Cool baths or cool compresses make a person more comfortable. Apply a skin moisturizer, but don't use butter or petrolatum. If blisters form, don't break them. If they're extensive, see a doctor.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: For the past six months, I have had no energy. I teach third grade. My doctor checked my thyroid gland, and it turns out it's not working well. I am now taking replacement thyroid hormone. How long does it take for me to recover my former energy? Also, my cholesterol was high. Is that part of this deal? - M.O.

ANSWER: It can take three to six months for your hormone level to reach a normal plateau. That's when you'll feel like your old self again.

A person with low thyroid hormone often has a rise in blood cholesterol. The level will fall as soon as the replacement hormone is working.

The booklet on thyroid problems discusses both under- and overactive thyroid glands. Readers can order a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue -- No. 401W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Can. with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am 83, and following hip surgery I developed a dropped foot. All I hear is that it is something I have to live with. Is there another answer? - D.K.

ANSWER: It takes a long time for an injured nerve to heal. Sometimes it never does. However, that doesn't mean something can't be done for a dropped foot.

Any number of braces can make walking much easier for a person with a dropped foot. I'd see about that now and bide my time, hoping the nerve will regenerate.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Bishop Barbara Harris To Celebrate Eucharist At Christ Church May 24

The Right Rev. Barbara C. Harris, Bishop Suffragan (retired) of the Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts, will be the preacher and presider at Christ Church Quincy Sunday, May 24 at 10 a.m.

The service will honor the 20th anniversary of Bishop Harris's consecration as the first female and first African American female bishop in the Episcopal Church and Anglican Communion.

Bishop Harris will mark this historic event in the historic setting of Christ Church, the oldest continuing Episcopal congregation in the Diocese of Massachusetts and the second oldest in New England. Many in Massachusetts have come to know and love their retired suffragan bishop as a spirited preacher and an outspoken advocate for (in her words) "the least, the lost and the left out." Throughout her years as Bishop Suffragan, she has always held forth a positive vision of what the diocese and everyone in the diocese, might become and might accomplish.

A cherished chalice to be used at the service was given to Christ Church by Caesar, an African American servant to the American born rector of Christ Church, the Rev. Ebenezer Miller in 1770. The chalice, made by Boston silversmith, Samuel Minott, is inscribed: "Given for the service of the Holy Communion to the Christ's church in Braintree, by Caesar, servant to E. Miller, Esq. 1770."

Caesar was baptized at Christ Church in 1731, was married there, and had all of his children baptized there as well. Caesar gave the chalice to the parish out of devotion to the church that accepted him at a time when most churches would not.

Christ Church contains a large number of recorded baptisms, marriages and burials of many slaves, who had the freedom to attend a church of their choice. It is in this tradition of acceptance and diversity that Bishop Harris will conduct the special service of the Holy Eucharist featuring special music by the choir and gospel singer, Renese King. All are welcome.

For more information, call 617-773-0310.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It seems that every day, every month and even every year has been given to someone, something or some cause. Pick a cause, there's a week for it! May is no exception. It is, among other things, "Senior Citizens Month." We would like to share some thoughts with you on this...

If you are a Senior Citizen, take a good look at yourself and your peers, and be proud of all you have accomplished... in the past and now, in your prime. You have the time to do all those things you put off in your youth because "the kids" or "the job" came first.

If you aren't one, take a look at all the senior power that fills your life. You, your family, your town, would be less today without those wonderful folks called "seniors." Take care of "Senior Citizen Month," and hug your favorite seniors today... and every day... THEY DESERVE IT!

In Loving Memory of DENIS P. CRONIN on his Birthday

May 5, 1928 - October 14, 2004

You can only have one father.

Patient, kind and true:

No other friend in all the world.

Will be the same to you

When other friends forsake you.

To father you will return.

For all his loving kindness,

He asks nothing in return

As we look upon his picture.

Sweet memories we recall

Of a face so full of sunshine.

And a smile for one and all

Sweet Jesus take this message

To our dear father up above

Tell him how we miss him

And give him all our love

"Ar dheis De go raib a anam"

May his soul be on God's right hand side

Lovingly remembered and Sadly

Missed by Margaret, Jerry, Jack, Dan

Denise, Eileen, Peggy, Denis, Mike, his

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19)
This is a good week to look at healing bruised feelings and re-establishing weakened relationships. It's also a good week to start new projects and make new job-linked contacts.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)
Music and art dominate the week, giving the sensual Bovine a lot to appreciate. On the practical side, deal firmly, but fairly, with those who might try to undermine your work efforts.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
Good feelings continue to flow from your recent efforts to reconnect with family and friends. But be ready to defuse a dispute before it can spread all that peace and harmony.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
A practical view of a romanticized situation could help to clarify some of its more confusing aspects before you make a decision that could be tough to undo later on.

LEO (July 23 to August 22)
Pay more attention to what a recent spate of workplace criticism might say about your performance and not what you think it implies about you personally. Some flexibility might be called for.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22)
With new information, and new promises of support (not to mention growing self-confidence), this could be a good time to restart a project you couldn't quite handle before.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22)
Before you decide to close down a problem-loaded project and make a fresh start with someone else, try once more to reach a compromise with your balking partner. He or she might surprise you.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21)
While you continue earning points for your sharp negotiating skills, be alert for an attempt to undercut your efforts. You'll need to provide solid facts and figures to stay in the game.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21)
A minor health problem might cause you to ease up on your usually busy schedule. But you'll soon be back in the saddle and ready to pick up the reins and charge ahead.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19)
The adventurous Sea Goat might be eager to take on a new challenge. But before you do, you might want to take some time to check out previously overlooked factors.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18)
A feeling of being overwhelmed by all that you have to do can be eased by setting priorities. Deal with the most urgent and time-sensitive situations first, and then work down the line.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20)
Creating a calm, peaceful place for yourself in the middle of a rolling emotional whirlpool this week starts when you, and no one else, decide how to make decisions about your life.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your determination to stick with your principles wins the admiration of everyone who knows you.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Quincy Point Festival Salutes Shipbuilders, Sailors

PROCESSION OF St. Brendan the Navigator parades down Washington Street toward the Fore River Rotary – the Gateway to Quincy – where an anchor from the Quincy-built heavy cruiser USS Des Moines was dedicated during Saturday's Maritime Festival "Making Waves in Quincy Point." St. Brendan is the patron saint of sailors. The procession is lead by Great Highland Bagpiper, Matthew MacArthur of Quincy.

THANK YOU, SAILOR - Don DeCristofaro, a Navy veteran and moderator of Quincy Point Congregational Church, presents a pen made from an original beam of the USS Constitution to Shane Murphy of Seekonk, first mate of the cargo ship Maersk Alabama, at the salute to shipbuilders and sailors aboard the USS Salem. Murphy, who once worked at the former Fore River Shipyard, took charge of the cargo ship when Capt. Richard Phillips was taken hostage by pirates off the Somali coast April 8. Murphy said some of his best crewmates grew up in Quincy.

AMONG THOSE SPEAKING at Quincy Point's Maritime Festival aboard the USS Salem Saturday were (from left): Joe Hajjar, ambassadore of Water Transportation Alternatives; Tom O'Brien, president of Tom O'Brien Hyundai of Quincy; Don DeCristofaro, Navy veteran and moderator of Quincy Point Congregational Church who remembered his father, Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro; Mayor Tom Koch; Brandi Issacs and Margaret Laforest, who presented the "Winnie the Welder Project" to the audience; the Rev. Ann Suzedell, pastor of Quincy Point Congregational Church and coordinator of Saturday's Salute to Shipbuilders and Sailors; Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi; and Quincy Sun Publisher Robert Bosworth, who remembered his father, Quincy Sun founder Henry Bosworth, a U.S. Navy veteran and former resident of Quincy Point.

FR. VINCENT DOOLAN of St. Joseph's Parish blesses the fleet from aboard the USS Salem. The blessing was part of the "Making Waves in Quincy - Salute to Shipbuilders and Sailors." The community salute thanked all those who worked at the shipyard and those who served in the Navy while also celebrating life in Quincy Point through its history.

TOP BRASS QUINTET, U.S. Navy Band Northeast, performs The Navy Hymn along with the Quincy Point Congregational Church chorus.

COLOR GUARD from the USS Constitution presents colors at the Salute to Shipbuilders and Sailors ceremony aboard the USS Salem.

THE SHIPYARD EXPERIENCE - Joe Hajjar, ambassadore of Water Transportation Alternatives, gives an overview of the proud tradition of shipbuilding at the former Fore River shipyard.

Would Affect Parcels Earmarked For Urban Renewal Support Swells For 20-Story Limit In Quincy Center

Quincy Center's skyline will improve significantly and its economy will get a jumpstart once urban renewal gets underway, according to speakers at Monday's public hearing on zoning changes.

Under the zoning proposal, developers could construct 20-story buildings in Quincy Center District, provided they are issued a Special Permit allowed only for Urban Renewal projects.

The new dimensions would allow buildings approximately twice as high as the highest building in Quincy Center at this time.

The proposed regulations would apply specifically to Quincy Center District and only on parcels set aside for urban renewal. The proposal also allows a 325-sq ft. minimum for dwelling units.

"We need this revision," Planning Director Dennis Harrington told councillors after outlining the changes which allow "a separate set of rules for urban revitalization projects."

Harrington submitted 30

letters from business owners and residents supporting the change as did Dean Rizzo, Executive Director, Quincy 2000.

"I don't think any of us could envision what we have before us," said Rizzo of a developer's plan for Quincy Center Residents and business owners have

Billions In Revenue Losses Seen In FY10 Legislators: Finances May Get Worse

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The financial outlook may be rough this year, but the worst is yet to come, according to state legislators who addressed City Council Monday.

The delegates led by Senator Michael Morrissey outlined billions in revenue losses at the state level, discussed potential new income sources, predicted a efforts to maintain local and for cities and towns.

"It is as bad as you'll ever see it except next year," said Morrissey, who called the financial outlook "the worst downturn since the Great Depression."

This year, legislators said that the state could expect a 15 percent reduction in revenue, or about $1 billion, that is, if the state were to

Mariano Will Not Seek School Seat

By ROBERT BOWORTH

Rep. Ron Mariano, a member of the Quincy School Committee, will not run for his school seat this fall so that he can devote full attention to his new leadership position in the House, he told the Sun this week.

Mariano, 62, was named the assistant majority leader in the House of Representatives in February. He is part of the House leadership team with Speaker Robert DeLeo, Majority Leader James Vallee and Speaker Pro Tempore Thomas Petrolati.

"I have to refocus on my duties up here in the House as the assistant majority leader as well as my responsibilities to my legislative district," Mariano said. "The position requires much more time and a lot of late nights. Since February I've given the school seat a lot of consideration and I don't want to be a member who just takes up space. I don't want to miss meetings and sub-committee meetings. Therefore, I've decided that I won't be a candidate for school committee," he added.

Mariano was elected to his school seat last year at a joint convention of the school committee and city council to fill the vacant term of Kevin Madole. Mariano, who was elected to the school committee in 2005, stepped down to become the human resources director of the Quincy Public Schools system.

Mariano served 16 years as an elected member of STATE POLICE SERGEANT Daniel Griffin captivated his audience with the "roll-over vehicle simulator" at a pre-prom safety seminar held at North Quincy High School.

Quincy Police Pre-Prom Safety Seminar Held At NQHS

The Quincy Police Crime Prevention Unit recently held a "Pre-Prom Safety Seminar" at North Quincy High School.

Lynda Steverman started off the presentation with a moving tribute to her son, who passed away after leaving a college party. She provided each student with a contact card that they should bring with him or her when they go away to college.

Steverman reminded the students they are or will be adults soon and neither the college nor hospital has an obligation to contact their parents if they are missing or injured. Having the contact information available to roommates or friends will aid in parental notification.

The second stage of the program involved Quincy Police officers presenting materials on the cost of an OUI and additional consequences, alcohol poisoning, then having the students try out the "drunk driving goggles."

The final presentation was the "rollover" exhibition provided by the Massachusetts State Police. Troopers Daniel Griffin and Larry Kiely discussed the impact of car accidents on the body, then showed what happens to child and adult passenger mannequins who are not seat belted. The immediate tossing of the mannequins produced a collective groan.

The Quincy Police Crime Prevention Unit thanked senior class advisor Gingy Fidalgo for her assistance in organizing the program.

Meeting For Parents Of Special Ed Students May 26

Rev. William Harding Guest Speaker Memorial Day Parade, Ceremonies Monday

The Rev. William Harding, pastor of Bethany Congregational Church and a chaplain first lieutenant in the Army Reserves who has served in Kosovo and Iraq, will be the guest speaker at the Memorial Day observance Monday, May 25, at the World War II podium in Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

Rev. Harding entered the Army National Guard after high school in 1968 as an enlisted soldier. In 1898, he received his commission as a chaplain first lieutenant in the Army Reserves. He was deployed to Kosovo in 1989 and then to Iraq in 2003.

"As an Army chaplain, I have had the opportunity to work with soldiers; which is the greatest gift I could ever receive," Rev. Harding said. "We celebrated the sacraments, had great fellowship and took time to worship God in all His Holiness. I saw first hand how the Army chaplains can help soldiers accomplish their assigned missions."

Rev. Harding is a member of the Reserve Officers Association and the American Legion. He is also a part-time VA chaplain.

Memorial Day ceremonies at Mount Wollaston Cemetery will follow the parade.

Marching units in the parade will assemble no later than 10 a.m. Monday in the parking lot of the Quincy Credit Union, 100 Quincy Ave., and march down Quincy Avenue, Hancock, Coddington and Sea Streets to the cemetery where all units will remain in formation during the ceremonies.

The parade will rest in Quincy Square while wreaths are placed on the tombs of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams

REV. WILLIAM HARDING in the crypt of United First Parish Church.

Parade Marshal Dan Dewey, commander of the Quincy Veterans Council (QVC), and guests will review the parade from a stand on Sea Street across from the cemetery entrance.

The parade is expected to begin at 10:30 a.m.

In case of inclement weather, the exercises will be held inside Broad Meadows Middle School, at 11 a.m.

After the services, the parade will disband and the veterans will retire to their respective posts.

John Raeke, chaplain of the QVC, will open the ceremonies with the invocation followed by the introduction of the invited guests by Lawrence Norton, the master of ceremonies.

Commander Dewey, Mayor Tom Koch, Council President Jay Davis and Tom Stansbury, director of Quincy Veterans Services, will deliver greetings and remarks.

Heikki Pakkala, junior vice commander of the QVC, will read General Logan's order creating the first Memorial Day, and George Bouchard, senior vice commander of the QVC, will read Lincoln's Gettysburg Address.

Rev. Harding will deliver the main address.

The adjutant will call the roll of deceased comrades and the Memorial Day poem, "In Flanders Field," will be read by Fred McCray, past commander of Post 95, Quincy American Legion.

Commander Dewey will place a wreath and others follow with wreaths of all wars. Gold Star Mothers will place a basket of flowers on the World War II monument, the Second Marine Division will fire a volley and Donald Murphy will sound Taps on the bugle.

The National Anthem will be sung by Moe Morad. Robert LaFleur, the officer of the day, raises the colors to full staff, Joseph Brooker, assistant chaplain of the QVC will give the benediction and Officer of the Day LaFleur will dismiss the troops.

The parade formation, which is subject to change depending on which posts, colors and guests report, will be led by Quincy Police and Fire Honor Guards, the Quincy Veterans Council Colors and the William R. Caddy Detachment, Marine Corps League.

Dan Dewey, commander of the QVC; Heikki Pakkala, senior vice commander of the QVC; George Bouchard, junior vice commander of the QVC; Mayor Tom Koch and city and state officials will follow.

The guest speaker, Rev. Harding, is next followed by his aides and the Quincy and North Quincy High School bands and Junior ROTC.

Three Detectives To Bring Staff To Eight Drug Unit To Be Expanded

Mayor Thomas Koch and Police Chief Paul Keenan announced Tuesday three detectives will be added to the department's drug unit as part of the city's broader effort to crack down on drugs in Quincy.

"We are serious about fighting the drug problem in this city and we are serious about protecting public safety services," said Koch, whose level-funded police budget prevents major public safety cutbacks. "Expanding the drug unit is a priority for this administration and it is a priority of the Police Chief, who has done an outstanding job managing resources amid this financial crisis."

The new detectives will be shifted from existing units as part of an overall restructuring spurred by the new budget, which keeps police funding at $21.5 million. The department is applying for federal grant money to add several officers whose positions will be left vacant due to retirements.

The new assignments will bring the drug unit's staff to eight, including one detective assigned to the regional Drug Enforcement Agency task force. The relationship with federal authorities was restored last year after it had lapsed for several years.

"Working with a level-funded budget, we can allocate resources in the most effective and strategic way possible," Keenan said. "The Drug Unit does a remarkable job out on the street every day, and with the addition of our drug dogs and the additional detectives, there can be no mistake about how serious we are about fighting drugs in Quincy."

The beefed up unit, along with the addition of drug-sniffing dogs, are part of a larger drug fight by the Koch Administration. A task force formed by the mayor has made a number of in-roads and recommendations, including: a $600,000 grant that was awarded to Impact Quincy to work toward preventing fatal overdoses of opiates, expanded public outreach programs and new education programs in city schools.

DRUG, GUNS, CASH and cocaine were seized by the police drug unit in last week's raid in Quincy Point. The suspect, John Feliz, 32, was arraigned Monday in Quincy District Court on nine criminal charges and held on $100,000 cash bail.

Police Seize Weapons, Cash And Cocaine

Police seized illegal weapons, cash and cocaine in a raid at a Quincy Point home last week and the suspect was arraigned Monday on nine criminal charges, ranging from possession of cocaine to possession of illegal weapons.

John Feliz of Ellerton Rd. was held on $100,000 bail after his arraignment in Quincy District Court.

Feliz was arrested May 18 after detectives found a sawed-off shotgun, cocaine, ammunition, an electric stun gun and an ammunition feeding device in his home.

The detectives had searched the residence with a warrant after a month-long investigation into reported illegal narcotics dealings at that address.

Additional charges against Feliz include possession of a controlled substance with intent to distribute within a school zone, three counts of possessing a firearm without a license, defacing the serial number on a firearm and three counts of unsecured firearms accessible to minors.

"This will stem the sale of illegal narcotics from this address and bring the safety of the community back to the residents," commented Detective Lt. Patrick Glynn who heads the Drug Unit

Mayor's Task Force Hosts Symposium

Mayor Thomas Koch and the Quincy Drug Task Force hosted a symposium on substance abuse in front of nearly 70 community leaders on May 12 at the Quincy Marriott.

In his introductory remarks, Koch spoke of initiatives begun by the Task Force that have occurred over the last year and a half as well as planned increases in drug abuse education in the Quincy Public Schools and adding personnel to the drug unit at the Quincy Police Department.

"All of the pieces add up to make a difference in the community," Koch said.

Sam Mele Learned A Lot From 'The Little Professor'

It was Opening Day April 15, 1947 and the Red Sox were starting their new season as defending champions of Major League Baseball's American League.

The line-up included household names familiar to fans throughout the region. Ted Williams, Bobby Doerr, Johnny Pesky and Dominic DiMaggio. The Sox won the home opener 7-6 over the Washington Senators.

In right field, making his major league debut at age 25, was Sam Mele, a New York native and star basketball player at New York University. He shared the outfield with Williams in left and DiMaggio in center.

"Those were some kind of teammates," Mele recalled in an interview last week in his Quincy home. Mele, who has lived in this city since 1949 and married a Quincy girl, Connie (Clemens), a former Miss Merrymount, played 10 seasons in The Show for six different teams, including two stints with the Red Sox from 1947-1949 and 1954-1955.

MELE

For nearly 90 minutes, Mele reminisced about his 30-plus-year career in baseball as a player, scout, minor league instructor and manager with the Minnesota Twins. He coached the Twins to the franchise's first American League pennant in 1965.

But some of Mele's fondest memories stretch back to that 1947 season as a rookie with the Red Sox.

While Mele absorbed hitting tips from Williams, it was DiMaggio who took him under his wing and taught him the finer points of playing defense in Fenway Park's tricky right-field. It was the Little Professor - DiMaggio's nickname because of his diminutive 5'9" frame and his eyeglasses - teaching Mele - the eager student - how to be a better defensive player.

And Mele can still pin-point his first encounter with DiMaggio - who died May 8 at age 92 of pneumonia - like it was yesterday.

It was spring training, 1947. After taking batting practice one day, Mele headed to the outfield and heard a voice. "Hey Kid, come over here." It was Williams. He talked hitting with the rookie right-fielder. Mele then asked him about getting some fielding tips.

"Ted said to me 'Don't talk to me about fielding - you go to that little guy in center field.' And that's when I met Dom DiMaggio. And Ted yelled to Dom that I was coming over to see him and Dominic introduced himself. He told me a lot of little things about playing the outfield."

It was the start of a lifelong bond - on and off the field.

Three days after the home opener, the Red Sox took their first road trip and stopped in Philadelphia.

The players got off the bus at the Ben Franklin Hotel and they hung around the front desk waiting for their room keys.

"I'm at a loss - I'm just a rookie and I don't know what to do," Mele recalls. "I find a chair in the lobby and sit down. One by one the players get their rooms and the bellboys take their bags and now there's no bellboys left."

"I see Dominic DiMaggio walking towards me and he says to me, 'Okay, rookie, go get your bag. You're my roommate. And that's how it started. We were roommates on the road for two years."

"And he was some kind of roommate. Everything we did as great friends. He was my mentor, like an older brother would be to a younger brother. He took good care of me."

While baseball dominated much of the conversation between the two teammates, Mele says DiMaggio taught him much more than just playing between the white lines.

"Dominic taught me how to dress, how to tip, all that kind of stuff. In the lobby waiting for the bus, he'd say 'come sit with me - you sit in that chair, I'll sit here and we'd pull our chairs together. And talk baseball.'"

DiMaggio could have been known as the Little Professor because of the way he studied pitchers and analyzed the game. He had a book about all the pitchers the Red Sox faced on the road. Notes about things such as what they liked to throw with two strikes, how they tip their pitches, etc. One day, he told Mele about Yankees pitcher Red Ruffing.

"When you go to bat, this guy loves to throw high fastballs, Dominic tells me. Sure enough, my first pitch was a high fastball and I hit a home run. Dom comes to me and says, 'he's going to throw you the same pitch. He loves to throw the high fastball. First pitch especially.' I go to bat and I took the first pitch. I think there was doubt in my mind that he would do it again because I had hit a home run off him. But Dominic was right again, high fastball."

Williams' hitting tips certainly paid off for Mele his rookie year. He batted .302 in 123 games with 137 hits, 14 doubles, 8 triples, 12 home runs and 73 runs batted in. He also slugged .448. Mele, who was the Red Sox Rookie of the Year that season, could have been a logical choice for the league's inaugural ROY award. But there was only one recipient and that went to Jackie Robinson who broke baseball's color barrier. Robinson batted .297 with 175 hits (including 31 doubles, 5 triples and 12 homers and 48 RBIs) in 151 games. He slugged .427.

Mele tried to learn as much as he could from DiMaggio whom Williams called the greatest defensive center fielder and greatest lead-off hitter he ever saw.

"Dominic used to knock in 90 runs leading off and in those days, in Boston, you had pitchers who couldn't hit that good and catchers who didn't hit that good," Mele said. "If the seventh guy in the line-up got on, he had a knack for getting him home."

DiMaggio helped Mele learn how to turn on fly balls in the outfield, how to set your feet and how to field a ball hit directly over the head. There were other tips too, such as charging a ball that lands for a hit in the outfield, using sunglasses and a glove to shade a sunny sky, and playing Fenway Park's right field considered one of the hardest in baseball.

"Dominic told me about right field in Fenway - how the ball can curve right around right before the bleacher seats. You don't go directly at the ball, you surround it so it doesn't get by you. That could turn into a triple or inside-the-park home run."

"It was all those little things that he taught me. And he never threw to the wrong base or missed the cut-off man. We'd talk baseball two or three hours into the night every night. On the road we'd eat together, he always had a little tid-bit to tell me."

DiMaggio wasn't flashy like some of today's players. Instead, he made all the difficult plays without any fanfare.

"He never, ever left his feet to dive for a ball like all these outfielders are doing today. He must have gotten a lot better jump on the ball. I never once did I see him dive for a ball."

"And Dominic had to cover more ground in the outfield because Ted Williams wasn't that great an outfielder. He had to cover a lot of ground between the two of us."

DiMaggio also paid Mele the ultimate compliment.

"One game I'm in the outfield and there's a long fly ball heading to right center field. I took off and I made a back-hand play on the ball. I was just able to get it. When Dom went by me, he said, 'I take my hat off to you.' And I never, ever forgot it."

Count Mele among those who think DiMaggio was a Hall of Famer like his older brother and late Yankee great, Joe DiMaggio.

"I think Dominic DiMaggio belongs in the Hall of Fame. You know what writers forget: he stole bases, had a 34-game hitting streak for the Red Sox in 1949, he took guys out of double plays, could patrol the outfield like a gazelle, had loads of assists, and was an excellent baserunner just like (his brother) Joe. He missed three years serving in the Navy during World War II. If he had played those three years, he definitely would have made the Hall of Fame."

Mele also thinks DiMaggio's #7 should be retired at Fenway Park.

"Dominic was a legend in baseball. The Red Sox better do it or the fans won't like it I'll tell you that. His name was synonymous with the Red Sox like Williams and Doerr and Pesky. He was really something."

Mele said Dominic never felt overshadowed by older brother Joe's celebrity and athletic prowess. "Dom loved his brother so much and he looked up to him so much it was amazing. And yet the only times they would speak was when they went by one another in the outfield. 'Hi Dom, Hi Joe. Everything okay?'"

"I remember one day in Yankee Stadium Dominic made one great running catch going toward left field. He back-handed the ball and almost fell but he didn't. When Joe passed him (heading to center field) Joe made some kind of remark to Dominic which I would have thought he said 'great catch' but that was your brother. I could imagine that's what he said."

Mele said DiMaggio was a great base stealer and runner, too. He and Johnny Pesky had a favorite play.

"If Dom got on first base, Pesky would give him a sign that he's going to bunt and it was always toward third base. And Pesky could run very well so when Dominic saw the sign and the pitch was made he took off."

"Pesky would bunt the ball toward third, the third baseman had to come to field it, Dom never stopped; rounded second and came right into third and there was no one at third. The shortstop was still at the shortstop position because he didn't expect him to keep running. Now you end up with first and third, probably nobody out and Ted Williams the hitter. No wonder he could knock in a lot of runs."

Long after their playing days were over, DiMaggio and Mele remained friends for many years.

"I used to call him, he used to call me. We kept in touch."

The former teammates frequently saw one another scouting games for the Red Sox at the organization's AAA team in Pawtucket. And it wouldn't be long before the former teammates were like teacher and pupil again.

"Dominic could pick up the little things watching a baseball game. He'd say, 'take a look at that catcher now. His position is way back from the hitter. The umpire won't give him the low strike because by the time it reaches him it's going to be lower than it would be if he was up a little closer which made a lot of sense.'"

Dom DiMaggio and talking baseball. Those are memories Sam Mele will always hold near and dear to his heart.

DID YOU KNOW Sam Mele wore #14 when he was a rookie for the Red Sox? That number will likely be retired after Jim Rice, another #14, is inducted into the Hall of Fame this July. Incidentally, Mele was one of the scouts who watched Rice develop into a bona fide major leaguer.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1920's postcard view of Elm Avenue in Wollaston looking towards Hancock Street. Phillips Street crosses in the foreground. When this section of Wollaston was divided into house lots the Wollaston Park Land Co. laid out this wide avenue on what was the driveway from Hancock Street to Josiah Quincy, Jr.'s mansion that later became the site of the Eastern Nazarene College. There were three rows of Elm trees on each side of the road.

The trolley tracks in the center ran from Hancock Street to West Elm Avenue then turned onto Billings Road to Norfolk Downs where they rejoined Hancock Street. Today the tracks are gone but the Park Department maintains flower beds along the center islands where flowering trees have also been planted. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

LaRaia Offers Reflections On Quincy Point

The Ledgerland story on Quincy Point then and now brought back favorable memories of its shipbuilding past. The Yard had a major influence on the lives of many Pointers and the many businesses that permeated the streets within a half-mile of the Yard. The Point is not the same bustling community when comparing its past with the present life style of its residents and a diminished business activity from the glory days of the Yard. My residency in the Point began in 1932 and continued to 1965, my last year as a city councillor representing Quincy Point. Those businesses and shops that lined the streets with close proximity to the Yard no longer exist there. They included a movie theater and bowling alley, five diners, four gas stations, four pharmacies, nine bars, four barbershops, a supermarket, three hardware stores, a furniture store, two pool halls, a new car dealership, a retail clothing store, a soft drink bottling company, several delicatessens, a men's clothing store and an assortment of smaller businesses. The only remaining businesses listed above include a new car dealership, one pharmacy, one barbershop, four bars and an assortment of smaller businesses.

The loss of the Yard in 1986 and the activity its presence generated does not take away the desirability of choosing to live in Quincy Point today. It should be noted that the loss of business activity that took place over the years when the Yard was approaching closure in 1986 was to a large degree attributable to a change in people's life style brought on by the major use of the automobile for shopping, the attractiveness of enclosed shopping malls made possible by state highway expansion to remote communities. If there is a major change in the density of the Point it rests with the future development of the Yard for commercial residential and industrial use. The one thing that still exists with the past is the diversity of the different nationalities and religions that stood out from other neighborhoods throughout the city. They included but not limited to Irish, Scots, Italian, Lebanese and Jewish residents. The more notable losses that stand out with its memorable past are the closure of its only synagogue, the St. Joseph's elementary school and its branch library. Joseph LaRaia tion? It is a slow packed drive already. Imagine the driving if the C-Mart were located there? Much, much worse, and much, much slower. I understand the supporters of the market...for many, it would be nice to walk and buy Asian groceries instead of going to Boston's Chinatown, or taking the bus or needing a ride to Kan Man, but it is a quality of life issue in North Quincy, too. How many supermarkets are enough in that area? When are people going to stop thinking about themselves and more about their community? Some people have accused some officials of making decisions with racial discriminatory overtones. I'll reply to those accusations with two words... "No way." These officials made the decisions with their heart, intelligence and their communities in mind. Gene Lee

Quincy's Yesterdays

Goals Outline For Quincy Revitalization

By FRANK MCCAULEY

The day of the single-family home has run its course in Quincy, according to Rev. Bedros Baharian, chairman of the Planning Board and newly named Director of City Wide Development.

Some of the goals included Planned Apartment Growth, Downtown Revitalization, Burgin Parkway Extension, Major Mercantile Store and New Office Buildings.

Rev. Baharian felt that due to the fact that there is so little open land in the city that single-family development is virtually impossible. (Editor's note: A review of the above goals indicates Two new multi-story apartment houses in Quincy were constructed, one at Coddington Street and one at Hancock Street, opposite Presidents Place. Downtown upgrades were completed during the 1990s. The Burgin Parkway Extension was constructed and opened in November 1985. At the present time a major mercantile store in Quincy has not taken place and two major office buildings were constructed. The Quincy Center Plaza office building, home of the Stop & Shop executive offices, was built in the early 1980s, while Presidents Place was developed and built on the site of the Bargain Center in the middle to late 1980s.)

RUTH GORDON AMPHITHEATER 'HORRENDOUS' SAYS TOBIN

Mayor Arthur H. Tobin toured the unfinished $544,000 Ruth Gordon Amphitheater in Merrymount Park and called conditions there "absolutely horrendous." "Every citizen in the city should take a look at what happens when federal funds are misspent," Tobin remarked. Public Works Commissioner James J. Ricciuti said that nothing could be done until he gets responses from CETA Director Paul Ricca and City Auditor Charles L. Shea. "There's nothing I can do until I find out how much money is left," said Ricciuti. What CETA Director Ricca will tell Ricciuti is that there is absolutely nothing left out of the $544,000. It was all paid out, 90% in wages and 10% in administrative costs and materials. Ricca denied that there was an improper use of money on the part of CETA and Ricciuti agreed with him. (Editor's note: The Amphitheater was completed in 1984 during the McCauley Administration by city workers under the direction of Public Works Commissioner Paul N. Anderson.)

SHEETS: CITY TAKE BADGERS QUARRY

City Councillor James A. Sheets asked the Mayor and City Council to move swiftly on an order to take Badgers Quarry in West Quincy by eminent domain. Sheets said he has been working for more than two years to have the area taken so that the quarry, a focus of vandalism by swimmers, can be drained and filled.

Proceeds From Event To Promote Tourism

Approximately 200 people recently attended the first annual "Discover Quincy Spring Gala" sponsored by the Boston Marriott Quincy.

Proceeds from the event will be used to promote tourism in the City of Quincy.

"It was great to see the business community, civic leaders and residents come together and support the tourism initiatives for the City of Quincy," said Mark Carey, executive director for Discover Quincy.

"Tourism has been and will continue to be a significant contributor to the City of Quincy's economic development plans. Fund-raisers like the Spring Gala are necessary to help us raise funds that are used to bridge the gap between our historic sites and our shops and restaurants so that tourists partake in more than just one aspect of Quincy's offerings."

In addition to the Boston Marriot Quincy, major sponsors included United Commercial Bank, South Coastal Bank, Liberty Bay Credit Union, and Boston's Best Cruises.

Silent auction items included Red Sox tickets with limousine service, a Boston's Best Cruises Package, a Quincy watch, lapel pin, and pendant donated from Rogers Jewelry, and more.

Attendees danced to the fabulous sounds of "Just Us."

Discover Quincy is a non-profit organization that was formed in 2004 to promote tourism in the City of Quincy.

songs relevant to the development of their style, along with original songs from ballads to waltzes, with guitars, bass, harmonica and plenty of harmony singing.

Hall is an award-winning songwriter whose two solo albums were released to much critical acclaim.

Anderson plays numerous instruments and crafts "rich arrangements that don't clutter things up."

Their new CD, titled Hungrytown, entered the folk/bluegrass charts at number 7 and continues to receive extensive airplay throughout the U.S. and abroad.

Germantown Celebrates With Recycling Carnival

Over 200 children and adults attended an Earth Day Recycling Carnival at the Germantown Neighborhood Center/YMCA.

The recent carnival featured games and prizes designed to entertain and educate about waste and recycling efforts in Quincy.

Hosted by Mayor Thomas P. Koch, the Department of Public Works and the Quincy Housing Authority, the event also attracted more than a dozen vendors and community groups with games and presentations to mimic a carnival mid-way atmosphere.

Dozens of prizes were raffled including several Red Sox tickets courtesy of Environmental Partners Group of Quincy and New England Recycling of Taunton. Olivia Rothwell Limoncelli, a fifth grader at the Snug Harbor School, earned a pair of Red Sox tickets by winning the Earth Day school's recycling poster contest.

In addition, Capitol Waste, Woodard and Curran, Polaris Consultants of Quincy, Big Belly Solar, Covanta Energy, the MWRA, and Abitibi Paper Recycling managed games and supplied prizes.

Quincy Environmental Network, the state Department of Environmental Protection, Mass Municipal Association, and Sterling PRINCIPAL DAN GILBERT (far right) and vice-principal Jim Hennessy of the Snug Harbor School were among those who recently participated in the Earth Day Recycle Carnival held at the Germantown Neighborhood Center/YMCA. Face painting, prizes and a magician were just a few of the attractions enjoyed at the event.

Middle School made educational presentations.

The Coffee Break Café of Quincy supplied coffee and the Quincy Community Police made a friendly appearance.

Kathy Quigley, executive director of the Germantown Community Center, deemed the event a major success in bringing recycling to the forefront of all in attendance.

"Getting the kids excited about recycling is the quickest way to reach their parents," Quigley said.

According to event organizers, most Quincy residents are not aware of the very high cost to dispose of trash every year.

"Less trash means more money can be spent on other areas such as public safety, education and recreation," Koch said.

Event organizers also stressed that recycling is one of the easiest ways to impact fiscal expenditures. The City of Quincy allocated more than $3 million for the disposal of solid waste in fiscal year 2009. Just a 10% increase in recycling saves the city $300,000.

Currently Quincy recycles approximately 20 to 25%. Conservative estimates that the city could recycle 50% of all trash, city officials said.

In 2007 San Francisco achieved the nation's highest recycling rate at 72%, according to Mayor Gavin Newsom. In Quincy, that would save residents more than $2 million a year disposal fees.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Irene's Scrumptious Salmon Cakes

It's amazing that when I am out having dinner with friends, and the subject of food seems to always come up, someone will eventually give me a recipe.

And so it was a few weeks ago when my friend Irene was telling me about some delicious salmon cakes she had made the night before.

When I asked her for the recipe the next day on the phone, she said, as so many who cook say that the exact measurement of each ingredient is "by guess and by golly."

So today's recipe is one in which you can be creative and add what ever you want, but Irene's recipe is pretty much on target.

SALMON CAKES

- 1 14 ounce can of red salmon
- 1 egg
- 1/4 cup Panko bread crumbs
- 1/4 cup water
- 1/4 teaspoon black pepper

Clean and drain the all the liquid out of the salmon. In a bowl, add the salmon, egg and bread crumbs. Mix and then add the water and the black pepper. Blend well and then form into patties.

Sauté in hot vegetable oil and drain on paper towel. They can be kept in a warming oven until ready to serve.

Mayor's Task Force Hosts Symposium

presentations of various facets of the state and local campaign against substance abuse.

Botticelli, the Director of Substance Abuse Services for the Massachusetts Department of Public Health stated, "all prevention is local; for a community to solve a problem a community has to own the problem."

He lauded the work done by the city and its partners to limit the influence of addiction in Quincy.

Judge Coven described the immensity of the substance abuse problem by detailing the volume of cases he handles on a daily basis in Quincy.

Coven acknowledged the immense task of combating addiction by stating, "to address substance abuse, it takes a village; if you could dissuade one person from taking OxyContin or convince one family to lock up its Percocet, you have done a lot."

The mayor thanked those in attendance for their dedication to the community and offered high praise to the Quincy Marriott for providing the meeting space at no cost.

New Design Adds Green Space, Opens Portions Of Town Brook

City Presents New Plans For Downtown Revitalization

At nearly each of the 20-plus community meetings in which Mayor Thomas Koch and representatives from Street-Works LLC presented plans for new Quincy Center, they fielded questions about how "green" the project would be.

They also received suggestions about daylighting Town Brook, which has flowed through the center in an underground culvert for decades.

The latest design for the center reflects the questions and comments from residents, significantly increasing the green aspects of the center and daylighting a stretch of the brook along the proposed residential portion of the project.

"We said all along that we were going to be listening to residents and responding to their suggestions, and this design makes clear that we were serious about that pledge," Koch said. "Not only will the new center be beautiful and functional, but it will be a model for environmental awareness as well."

The new design will be discussed with the City Council on May 28.

Koch and the Street-Works team attended community meetings in every ward and with many different civic groups, with participation ranging from a dozen residents to more than 100.

"We were very impressed by the interest Quincy residents showed toward the plans and the suggestions they had for improving the design. It has been a very enlightening experience for us," said Richard Heapes, a founding partner of Street-Works.

Heapes said Street-Works will present additional designs as the project moves forward.

The residential portion of the center will feature green roofs, managed rain water runoff, and a operated stretch of Town Brook, giving downtown residents and visitors a look at the stream for the first time in many years.

The center as a whole will also be environmentally progressive, with accommodations for Smart Cars and Smart Bikes, and numerous parks and green spaces for families to enjoy and activities like farmers markets and concerts to take place.

"We want Quincy Center to be a place where people not only come to shop and dine, but to enjoy many different activities," Koch said.

The next community meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m. on May 26 at the Squantum Elementary School at 50 Huckins Ave.

IBEW, Local 103 Endorses Davis In Ward 4 Race

The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 103, has endorsed Jay Davis for Ward 4 city councillor, announces Michael P. Monahan, the union's business manager.

Monahan said the union endorsed Davis because of his record of standing up for workers' rights throughout his career in public service and in private life.

"The labor movement has had no better voice in Quincy than Jay Davis," Monahan said. "Jay recognizes the importance of working families earning a livable wage with benefits and he has consistently fought to ensure that our voice and the voices of all Quincy residents are always heard."

"Through his strong advocacy for responsible development, Councillor Davis has demonstrated a critical understanding that when done right, commercial projects can bring jobs to his constituents, lower the tax burden on homeowners and respect the quality of life for all neighbors."

IBEW, Local 103, represents more than 7,000 electricians and technicians across Greater Boston and the South Shore.

Davis said he is honored to receive the union's endorsement.

"With their support, I hope to continue to lead the City of Quincy through this unprecedented stage in our history. If re-elected, I will continue to promote the working family ideals and values shared by myself, IBEW, Local 103, and all working families throughout Quincy."

Support Swells For 20-Story Limit In Quincy Center

"embraced it and it's actually overwhelming how positive (the response) has been."

Ernie Arienti, president of the firefighters' union, outlined the union's support for the changes provided the city increase fire protection through manpower and equipment, specifically a ladder truck able to handle the new heights.

"We have watched the city deteriorate over the years," Arienti said, describing the city's once vital center now at risk. "My concern is for the safety of people and (firefighters)."

Angus Jennings, President of the Citizens Advisory Committee, said that group supported the changes unanimously as the change

"will make it more likely there will be new investment in Quincy Center."

However, Jennings cited questions regarding the parking ratios in the redevelopment plan and plans for affordable housing units.

"We would support having affordable units within the development," said Jennings who, also, expressed concerns that the roads, stormwater management and all infrastructure is handled responsibly.

CAT members include Jennings, Rizzo, Maralin

Manning, Dave McCarthy and former Mayor Walter Hannon.

However, area resident Arline Goodman outlined her concerns in an e-mail to Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro and all councillors.

Goodman noted that the membership of the council will change with November's election and "the new member or members should be able to have input."

In addition, Goodman questioned why the Planning Board would make the final decisions on permits as well as what impact the new heights will have on the Church of the Presidents.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymonds conducted Monday's public hearing. City Council President Jay Davis who owns property in the Urban Renewal area refused himself from all discussion and votes on urban renewal issues.

After closing the hearing, councillors referred the proposal to the Ordinance Committee.

Weekly Mosquito Aerosol Application Starts May 26

The Quincy Health Department has received notice from the Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project that early morning application (ULV) of the pesticide Anvil (EPA Reg# 1021-1688-8329), for the control of nuisance and/or disease carrying adult mosquitoes is scheduled to begin during the week of May 26, 2009 and will continue (weather permitting) throughout the summer months until Sept. 30, 2009.

Applications in Quincy will be made on Thursday mornings, weather permitting.

Not all areas of Quincy will be entirely treated on a given date. Attempts will be made to treat as large an area as is deemed necessary and as weather permits. The fogging operations will occur between the hours of 2 a.m. and 6 a.m., only if mosquito populations warrant an application. If inclement weather occurs (i.e. high winds, rain or low temperatures) or equipment fails, the application will be the next scheduled day.

Anvil is applied in ultra low volume (ULV) sprayers at the rate of one half ounce per acre of finished spray. Anvil is a combination of two ingredients, Sumithrin and Piperonyl Butoxide. Sumithrin is a synthetic pyrethroid which imitates the natural pesticides found in chrysanthemums. It breaks down rapidly in the environment and is expected to pose little risk to humans when used at low concentrations for mosquito control, according to the EPA.

For more information, contact the Norfolk County

Mosquito Control Project at 718-762-3681, Monday-Friday from 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., or through www.mass.gov/norfolk-mcp.

If an individual would like to see a map of the areas to be treated they should visit the website and check on the following link: current_early_morning_aerosol_application_schedule_and_maps, then click on "Quincy." Please note that ULV maps will be posted by 3:30 p.m. the day before the scheduled application. Residents may also call the Project's main telephone line after 3:30 p.m. on Wednesdays to hear a recorded message detailing the streets/areas to be treated in Quincy on Thursday morning.

To have a property excluded from spraying, contact the Mosquito Control Project at 781-762-3681.

Enjoying Life at Allerton House

THE ALLERTON WAY

Allerton House at Hancock Park, Quincy, MA
by Kelly Richards

Theresa Webber's children surprised her two years ago when they came to her Dorchester home and simply said that they wanted to take her somewhere. Webber says, "As it turned out, the final destination of our mystery ride was Allerton House at Hancock Park. After taking a tour and meeting some of the residents and staff, I knew I would love living here." She credits her daughter and three sons for doing their research, knowing her needs and personality, wanting to make life easier, and finding her a perfect home. "It was the first place I looked at," she says. "I didn't need to look any further."

Theresa Webber is a resident of Allerton House at Hancock Park in Quincy.

"Moving here was the best thing!"
Theresa Webber

Today, Webber's spacious one-bedroom apartment at Allerton House is decorated with lots of photographs of her children and grandchildren, as well as other personal possessions that she holds dear. "All of my furniture fit right in," says Webber. And my family is close by so I see them all the time. They especially like to come to the special events here. At the Christmas party, they saw me sitting on Santa's lap."

Prior to her move to Allerton House, Webber lived alone. With her children nearby, she could always count on them for help, but at age 82, she continued to carry out the day-to-day tasks that home ownership entails. She says, "I don't have to do anything now - no cooking, no cleaning, no paying the bills, no laundry. All of those things are done for me, and

Webber's engaging personality touches everyone she meets. "I believe we all just need to keep going and stay involved," she says. And stay involved she does. You may find her at the Bingo game at Allerton House three or four times a week, joining other residents on a road trip for lunch at a local restaurant, or socializing in the residence's elegant dining room. One of the first friends she made when she moved in now lives at Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group's skilled nursing center in Hingham, and Webber makes it a point to visit her often. "We both enjoy catching up during our visits."

According to Webber, one of the best things about living at Allerton House is the opportunity to be around truly nice people. "I know everybody here," she says, and "everybody is wonderful. Moving here was the best thing!"

Kelly Richards is the Marketing Director for Allerton House at Hancock Park in Quincy. The 42 apartment assisted living residence is owned and managed by Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group which is celebrating 60 years of service to seniors. Fontbonne Academy Congratulates Cecilia Vu '09

Cecilia Vu of Milton is heading to Boston University this fall, having been accepted into its honors program. Highlights of her Fontbonne career include being President of the International Club, Secretary of the Service Club, a member of National Honor Society and of the Spanish National Honor Society. She was also an Admissions Ambassador, in the Instrumental Ensemble, and a member of the President's Council on Social Justice.

"In my opinion, the best part about Fontbonne is the teachers. Every teacher knew me not only as a student, but as a person. They recognized my talents and continually encouraged me to push my academic limits. Without a doubt, I would not be where I am if the teachers were not as considerate as they are. The students and teachers make Fontbonne a nurturing, comfortable, and caring environment. It's much easier to express your thoughts, have confidence, learn, and have fun in Fontbonne's unique atmosphere."

Embrace learning and the "life of the mind."

That was the message that Pulitzer Prize-winning historian David McCullough shared with more than 200 graduates and their families Saturday at Eastern Nazarene College's 87th spring commencement exercises.

McCullough, who received an Honorary Doctorate of Letters from the college, told attendees he was pleased to be back in Quincy, a city that figured so prominently in the research for his Pulitzer Prize-winning biography of Quincy's most famous son, John Adams.

"I'm one who loves commencements," said McCullough, whose appearance at the Christian liberal arts college was arranged by former Quincy Mayor and ENC Alumnus James Sheets. "We have no more moving, more relevant, more worthy ceremony in our civic, secular lives than commencements, a time when we celebrate hard work and achievement in the quest for learning."

McCullough began his address by sharing the story of a young farm boy who at the age of 14 received the first book he had ever owned.

"He was so proud to own it, he wrote his name six times in the cover," said McCullough, noting that the boy's mother was likely illiterate while his father could barely sign his name. "And yet that boy, because of education, went on to make a great contribution to education when as president, he signed into law the creation of the greatest library in the world."

The boy was John Adams. McCullough recounted how the future president was an indifferent student, until a tutor named Joseph Marsh awakened a love of learning that would consume Adams for the rest of his life.

"John Adams became the emblem of the transforming influence of education," McCullough said. "He cherished the book and the life of the mind, purchasing thousands of books at a time when books were very expensive. And he became the most well-read leading figure of his very bookish age."

From Shakespeare and Cervantes to Moliere and Cicero, Adams embraced learning, McCullough said, often "arguing" with the authors through the copious notes he wrote in the margins of his volumes.

"(Adams) never had any money or social prestige," McCullough noted. "It was thought at the time by those who didn't know him – and became accepted years later by those who knew even less – that John Adams was a rich, Boston blueblood. He was none of those things. He was a farmer's son from Braintree."

Yet the farmer's son would have a pivotal impact on the education of future generations through his role as the author of the Massachusetts state constitution. The oldest constitution still in use in the world today – and considered by many to be the model for the U.S. Constitution – Adams' state constitution included a groundbreaking statement on the need for public education:

"Wisdom and knowledge, as well as virtue, diffused generally among the body of the people being necessary for the preservation of their rights and liberties; and as these depend on

Phelan Says Koch Tax Pledge 'Too Little, Too Late'

Former Mayor William Phelan issued a press release Tuesday stating Mayor Tom Koch's pledge last week not to repeat his record-breaking tax increase this year is "too little, too late."

In the statement, Phelan said Koch's pledge "offers little comfort to struggling homeowners and small businesses who will continue to pay their property taxes at the same higher level this year, next year, and every year into the future."

Phelan, who is considering his own run for mayor this year, said Koch's record tax increase after one year in office is more than twice as large as all of his tax increases during his six years in office, despite the fact that Phelan left Koch with $15 million in the city's rainy day account.

Phelan called Koch's record tax increase, "excessive and unnecessary."

"What Mayor Koch didn't say is that if your property tax bill went up $700 last year thanks to his tax increase, it will stay at that new, higher level this year and on into the future...even if he does keep this campaign promise," Phelan said.

One of the few bright spots in Koch's budget statement was the $6 million in savings resulting from Phelan's innovative efforts as mayor to curtail rising health care costs for city employees by moving them onto the state Group Insurance Commission (GIC). Koch himself said last week that in addition to the $6 million in savings resulting from employees joining the GIC, "We'd be looking at $4 million in increases this year."

As mayor, Phelan said he recognized early on the devastating impact on the budget of rising employee health care costs, and said he worked effectively on many fronts to move city employees onto the GIC. Appointed by the MA Municipal Association to a special task force, Phelan said he helped craft the legislation that now authorizes city workers to join the GIC.

Phelan said he also sought, and won, compromises from teachers and other city unions to bring employee contributions to health care costs more in line with those in other communities. Without those compromises, city workers would never have agreed to join the GIC.

"City employees are to be commended for agreeing to join the GIC, but mayor Koch needs to come up with his own ideas and innovations, and find ways to take the pressure off suffering taxpayers," Phelan said.

"Raising property taxes should be the last resort," he said. "Unfortunately, Tom Koch has used higher taxes as his first and only option."

In Phelan's last two terms, Quincy's single-family tax bill increased the least of any city in the state. Despite inheriting a record deficit, he used a variety of innovative methods to hold the line on taxes.

Among other things, Phelan said as mayor he:

Negotiated with city unions to increase employee share of health benefits; secured millions by renegotiating Quarry Hills Golf Course deal; saved $12 million working with the state delegation to get Quincy Medical Center's loan forgiven; collected $1.5 million for ten years of unpaid parking tickets; collected $5 million in back payments from Quincy College; reduced city workforce 10% through attrition without layoffs; put the Fore River Shipyard back on tax rolls after 25 years, got the MWRA to pay $700,000 a year to the city; improved Wall Street bond ratings to save borrowing costs; launched downtown revitalization after decades of stagnation; secured a $5 million economic stimulus grant from the state for downtown development and secured another $6 million in federal money for the Quincy Center Concourse working with Senators Ted Kennedy and John Kerry and Congressman William Delahunt.

McCullough Urges ENC Grads: Follow Adams' Example, Embrace 'Life Of The Mind' spreading the opportunities and advantages of education in various parts of the country, and among the different orders of the people, it shall be the duty of legislators and magistrates in all future periods of this commonwealth to cherish the interests of literature and the sciences, and all seminaries of them, especially the university at Cambridge, public schools, and grammar schools in the towns; to encourage private societies and public institutions, rewards and immunities, for the promotion of agriculture, arts, sciences, commerce, trades, manufactures, and a natural history of the country; to countenance and inculcate the principles of humanity and general benevolence..."

"When John Adams wrote those words, they were quite radical," McCullough said.

COA In Need Of Bath Seats

The Council on Aging is in urgent need for bath seats for senior citizens.

If you have one to donate, call the COA at 617-376-1245.

"He was convinced that the legislature would reject them."

Instead, the legislature approved the document unanimously, establishing education as the foundation of American liberty.

"Education was the key to our whole conception of a good society from the very beginning," McCullough said. "When (the forefathers) wrote about life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, that didn't mean longer vacations, easier work weeks and more stuff. It meant more opportunities to pursue the life of the mind."

"Adams, Franklin, Jefferson all viewed education as the gateway to happiness," he continued. "And they all attributed what they were in large measure to the teachers who had changed their lives."

In concluding his address, McCullough warned graduates not to confuse information with education.

"If information were learning, theoretically you could memorize the World Almanac and be qualified to graduate," he said. "But if you memorized the World Almanac, you wouldn't be educated. You'd be weird."

"I hope you see lots of the world. I hope you enter work you love, and that you choose a vocation, if possible, and not just a job for the money. I hope you will thank, either in person or in writing, those faculty who have opened your eyes to the world of the mind and books. And wherever you go, whether you stay in a hotel or motel, please remember to tip the maid."

Other highlights of ENC's commencement included the awarding of Professor Emeritus status to Donald Yerxa, a nationally renowned historian and longtime professor in ENC's acclaimed History department; and the presentation of the Senior Class gift: a fully endowed $10,000 scholarship. The gift marked the first time ever that an ENC graduating class has presented a scholarship that is fully endowed and thus able to be awarded indefinitely to incoming students.

"We are so very proud of this class," ENC President Corlis McGee said. "Despite the times and the economy, when it would have been understandable if they had chosen to put that money toward their own tuition bills, they have caught the vision and are already giving back so that others can be enriched through an education at ENC."

Emergency Vehicles

The following is Captain Tom Lyons' response to a reader's question regarding what you should do as a driver of a vehicle that is at a red light and an emergency vehicle is fast approaching with its sirens/lights on.

Captain Lyons' Response:

I want to thank Lawrence C. for this question while I'm not certain I can respond to it satisfactorily. The question pertains to an article I wrote concerning the rules of the road as they pertain to approaching emergency vehicles. In that article I cited Mass. General Law-Chapter 89, Section 7A which states: "Upon the approach of any fire apparatus, police vehicle, ambulance or disaster vehicle which is going to a fire or responding to a call, alarm or emergency situation, every person driving a vehicle on a way shall immediately drive said vehicle as far as possible toward the right-hand curb or side of said way and shall keep the same at a standstill until such fire apparatus, police vehicle ambulance or disaster vehicle has passed."

The question is: "It always amazes me when cars are at a red light and emergency vehicles approach from behind and these cars make no attempt to get out of the way! What is the ruling regarding a car stopped at a red light when an emergency vehicle approaches from behind?"

I don't know that there is one. I've reviewed other Chapter 89 sections and found nothing to answer the specifics of your question. However, it doesn't surprise me. It's been my experience that laws and regulations are not typically too specific, allowing them to be adapted to different circumstances. Few seem "black and white", although often times I wish they were. It would make code enforcement a lot easier.

So there is no clear answer. You would hope that drivers would not willfully obstruct or retard the passage of an emergency vehicle. That being said, caution should dictate a driver's behavior while accommodating that passage. Each situation dictates its own solution. You would hope no matter what, that drivers will remain empathetic to the needs of an individual who is being transported within an ambulance, and caring enough to accommodate a police cruiser or fire apparatus responding to someone's needs. Clearly, an effort should be made by a driver to assist responding emergency vehicles. We understand however, that options can be limiting, while safety is imperative.

Meanwhile, as a driver of my own vehicle, I can give you my opinion. If I was at a red light, and an emergency vehicle was approaching from behind, and if I can safely turn onto the cross street towards the right allowing more room for the emergency vehicle to approach an intersection, I would consider doing so, only if I could do so safely. Conditions dictate of course.

If that is not possible, and I can't pull any further to the right, I would remain there for that moment. Sometimes doing nothing can be better than taking action, especially if I feel the responding vehicle has the room to maneuver on its own. Experience tells me that the driver of the emergency vehicle is keeping a keen eye on the behavior of the drivers at that intersection to determine his options while approaching and passing.

Meanwhile, while on the apparatus and responding to an emergency, our focus is on arriving at the scene safely. We cannot help anyone if we're not there in a timely manner while arriving without incident. So while promptness is important, caution is imperative. There is no doubt however, that your empathy and cooperation as a driver means a great deal to our mission and us. We ask for that effort and cooperation, while giving it safely. Thank you.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On May 19, 1715, the colony of New York passes a law making it illegal to "gather, rake, take up or bring to the market, any oysters whatsoever" between the months of May and September. This regulation was only one of many that were passed in the early days of America to help preserve certain species.

• On May 20, 1862, President Abraham Lincoln signs the Homestead Act, which opens government-owned land to small family farmers ("homesteaders"). The act gave "any person" who was the head of a family 160 acres to try his hand at farming for five years.

• On May 24, 1899, the first public parking garage in the United States is established in Boston by W.T. McCullough as the Back Bay Cycle and Motor Company. McCullough advertised the garage's opening as a "stable for renting, sale, storage and repair of motor vehicles."

• On May 18, 1920, Karol Jozef Wojtyla is born in the Polish town of Wadowice, 35 miles southwest of Krakow. Wojtyla went on to become Pope John Paul II, history's most well-traveled pope and the first non-Italian to hold the position since the 16th century.

• On May 23, 1933, TV actress Joan Collins is born. In 1990, Random House offered Collins $4 million in a two-book deal, paying a $1.2 million advance, with the rest due on delivery of the manuscripts. When Collins turned in the first book, the publishing house claimed the manuscript was "unreadable" and sued for the return of the advance.

• On May 22, 1967, a fire at the L'Innovation department store in Brussels, Belgium, kills 322 people on the first day of a heavily promoted American fashion exhibition. Despite speculation that the fire was a deliberate anti-U.S. action, most of the available evidence pointed to an electrical fire.

• On May 21, 2000, the bones of President James Garfield's spine, with a bullet hole, are put on display as part of an exhibit at the National Museum of Health and Medicine in Washington, D.C. The museum also owns some of Lincoln's skull fragments and President Eisenhower's gallstones.

However, they cautioned that nothing is certain this year.

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro asked how much the city's local aid would be cut because he has read, "The numbers are all over the place, 37%, 30%, 25%? Is the 15% cut within the realm of possibility?"

Mariano said that the original cut was 25% but "we restored about 10%."

"We will, also, put a high priority on local aid," said Morrissey of senate plans.

With a 15% reduction, the city's 2010 local aid should total approximately $36 million, down from last year's $43 million.

As for new revenue, the legislators and councillors explored such proposals as increased motel, hotel, and meals taxes, sales or gas taxes, gaming revenues, plastic bottle return, a liquor tax and utility pole tax.

Rep. Ron Mariano blasted Governor Deval Patrick for playing to the press, while offering few workable ideas and rejecting the legislators' plan for a sales tax increase.

"He sends out a letter that's not what he (will sign)," Mariano said of Patrick's plan to veto a sales tax increase. Instead, Mariano said Patrick supports a tax on "bubble gum and candy bars and liquor."

"It plays well in the Globe," said Mariano, calling Patrick's calls for reform "a red herring. The governor has the bully pulpit."

Mariano and Rep. Bruce Ayers, also, described the multi-million state bridge projects currently underway at the Fore River Bridge and the Neponset Bridge.

Despite the grim outlook, Rep. Bruce Ayers said the state will patrol for speeders, and protect citizens and state property on Wollaston Beach, Quincy Shore Drive, Squantum Point Park, the Hummocks and Shea Skating Rink.

Near the meeting's end, Rep. Stephen Tobin saluted Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly who is retiring from the council. Tobin outlined Kelly's work on behalf of the city and the environment. The council and observers then gave Kelly a standing ovation.

State Income

State revenue estimates have been dropping by billions at a time, according to Morrissey who said, "We've dropped a billion three times, sometimes a billion in 24 hours."

Morrissey said 2000 state jobs have already been cut and another 2000 will be eliminated after July 1st, as will hundreds of programs, ranging from homeless shelters and community policing to the Quinn Bill's payments for police education benefits.

"There's no easy solution. We're not going to get out without people being very unhappy on both sides," Morrissey said. "Local aid remains a priority."

"We'll get through this year, but it's going to (deplete) the Rainy Day Fund," said Morrissey, describing budget cuts, "72 items are gone, including the Quinn

Bill.

"It will probably be phased out," said Morrissey of the Quinn Bill funding for police education benefits which will now "fall to the cities and towns."

Morrissey said the senate was considering a bottle return bill which would earmark $20 million for sewer rate relief but members feared such a bill might cut into recycling revenues for cities and towns.

Kelly asked whether the legislators will support gaming bills.

"I will vote for gaming," said Morrissey who said he disapproves, but as long as people are gambling, the state can benefit, possibly with one or two casinos and slot machines.

"The House will revisit this issue," said Mariano after noting that Twin River Casino, Lincoln, RI, just laid off employees.

Both Mariano and Morrissey addressed the issue of pensions.

Mariano said about 100 persons are receiving state pensions of over $100,000 and all but a few are retired from state colleges or universities.

As for the perennial question, "Why don't you go to Social Security?"

Mariano said taxpayers would pay more money as state workers contribute 11 percent and the state, 2% to such pensions. Social Security would require the state to contribute 6%.

Similarly, Mariano said calls to eliminate county government simply means moving services to another branch.

Bridges

Phase 1 of the Neponset Bridge project is near completion and Phase 2 should begin sometime in September, according to Ayers.

Ayers said there will be a public meeting prior to the construction start. Phase 2 will include removing and repairing the bridge deck, adding sidewalks and a ramp.

As for Fore River Bridge, Mariano called the project a "priority. Once we get a design and the community is pleased. The funds have been identified.

"The tunnel (proposal) doesn't make a lot of sense," said Mariano, citing the grade change on the Weymouth side of the bridge.

Mariano said managers are hoping, "Inconvenience would be minimal" as the plan is to remove the existing structure and install the new bridge simultaneously.

Ayers also noted that state funding is earmarked completion of the Cross-town Connector and the ramp at Crown Colony

A Job Well Done

On Wednesday, May 6, at approximately 5 p.m., Officer Dennis Keenan was on patrol in an unmarked police vehicle when Officer Mike Duran contacted him, stating that he had just observed a red Ford Explorer acting suspiciously as it drove down Cleverly Court.

Officer Duran said the vehicle, traveling very slowly, was occupied by three males who appeared to be looking to meet up with someone. Officer Keenan arrived on scene and watched as the vehicle drove down Des Moines Road, then turned left onto Southern Artery and then right onto Quincy Avenue. The vehicle headed north on Quincy Avenue and then pulled into the parking lot of Subway.

Officer Keenan pulled into the Kam Man parking lot, which is next to Subway, and began surveillance on the vehicle. The vehicle sat there for several minutes and then a female walked up to the suspect vehicle. The front seat passenger exited the vehicle and entered the back seat and the female entered the front passenger seat. From the officer's position, it was unclear exactly where the female came from. The vehicle exited Subway and began to travel south on Quincy Avenue, then turned into the Bank of Canton lot. Officer Keenan followed, keeping Officer Duran posted.

The suspect vehicle initially stopped in the front of the bank, which was closed, then after a few minutes of surveillance, the suspect vehicle backed up to the farthest point in the lot. At this point, the driver/suspect 1 emerged from his vehicle and stood outside looking for someone. Officer Keenan then put a civilian shirt on over his uniform shirt, exited his unmarked cruiser and began to walk towards the vehicle. As he neared, he detected the odor of burnt marijuana coming from the inside the suspect vehicle.

Officer Keenan then identified himself as a Quincy Police Officer and instructed the occupants to keep their hands where he could see them. With the arrival of Officer Duran, Officer Keenan was able to search the vehicle and immediately found a small bag of marijuana on the driver's seat. He also observed dollar bills on the same seat.

Officer Duran opened the rear passenger door to speak to the occupant/suspect 2 and spotted a clear plastic bag with several pink colored pills inside it, located on the floor between the door and the seat. Officer Duran picked up the pills and immediately recognized them through his training and experience as nine Oxycontin pills, then informed the suspect in the back seat he was under arrest.

Officer Keenan advised the driver of his rights and informed him that Oxycontin had been found inside the vehicle. The driver then stated that there was more marijuana inside the vehicle. The officers found this inside the center console, in a clear plastic bag with five individually wrapped packages.

The marijuana was packaged in white paper with the numbers "10" and "20" written on the outside. The packages with the number "20" written on it were bigger than the packages with the number "10" written on it, which indicated the price.

A further search revealed a small digital scale that had marijuana residue on it. The driver was then placed under arrest. Both suspects were placed under arrest and transported to the station. In addition to the $150.00 found on the driver's seat, another $200 was found inside his pocket during booking. The driver, a 22 year-old Weymouth resident, was charged with "Possession of Class D With Intent to Distribute and Violation of a Drug Free School Zone." The money and driver's cell phone were seized pending civil forfeiture.

Suspect 2, also a 22-year-old Weymouth resident, was charged with "Possession of a Class B Substance With Intent to Distribute and Violation of a Drug Free School Zone." This suspect had $553 in cash on him, which was seized along with his cell phone. The other two passengers in the vehicle were allowed to leave after determining there were no warrants on them.

Nice Work!

Square, South Quincy; Morrisette Square, the Unknown GAR Soldier in Hall Cemetery, Walter Fabian and the War Memorial at the West Quincy Fire Station.

The Cavanagh Post will decorate the Doughboy Statue in front of the Adams Academy building on Hancock Street.

Sunday, May 24

Quincy Legion Post 95 will assemble at the United First Parish Church at 9:30 a.m. to conduct the traditional exercises of the Grand Army of the Republic (GAR). They will escort the Sunday School children to the Hancock Cemetery to decorate the graves of veterans. They will also decorate the Civil War Monument and Frederick Jones Square. All veterans' organizations, their auxiliaries and the public are invited to attend the services in United First Parish Church at 11 a.m.

Monday, May 25

The Wollaston Legion Post 295 at 7 a.m. will decorate the graves and hold memorial exercises at the National Sailors' Home Cemetery on Fenno Street and the monument at Hancock Street and Southern Artery.

At 9 a.m., veterans of all wars will assemble in the St. Mary's Church parking lot and proceed to Hall Cemetery, where a GAR Memorial will be conducted and a detachment will place a wreath on the Morrisette Memorial in Pine Hill Cemetery.

A brief memorial service will be held at the Christ Church Burial Grounds on School Street at 10 a.m.

'What Ministry In The Army Chaplaincy Has Meant To Me'

By REV. WILLIAM HARDING

CH (MAL) 804th Medical Brigade Chaplain

The Army Chaplaincy is one of the most meaningful blessings that God has given me. I cannot thank the Lord enough for allowing me to provide care to our Soldiers and Family Members. I'll briefly share some of my Chaplain history with you, to help provide the experience over the range of my career.

I entered the Army National Guard after high school in 1968 as an enlisted Soldier. At Basic Training I met a Chaplain who took me under his wing. Because of that Chaplain's meaningful ministry, I felt that if I ever entered the ministry, I would attempt to receive my commission in the Army Chaplaincy and give back what was given to me.

In 1989, I received my commission as a Chaplain First Lieutenant in the Army Reserves and was then assigned to the 399th Combat Support Hospital. In 2001 we were deployed to Kosovo where I served as staff and Hospital Chaplain at Camp Bondsteel. It was a peace keeping mission and provided great opportunities to love and care for our Troops and other assigned personnel.

In 2005, I was assigned to the 115th Chaplain Detachment and was responsible for overall development, planning, synchronization and implementation of the comprehensive Religious Support Plan. Our unit was deployed to Iraq in November 2005. I was sent to Camp Scania, a convoy support center, as the Camp Chaplain. I found that to be a rewarding development and I developed and initiated many new programs for our Soldiers. I was blessed to bring together the Unit Ministry Teams (UMTs), medical, housing, and food service personnel, to establish special support for convoys that have suffered loss of life.

Army Chaplaincy required that I put my life on the line to care for our Soldiers. Knowing that my own safety was in God's hands and the hands of my Soldiers, I willingly traveled the dangerous roads of Iraq to bring religious support to FOBs with our resident UMTs. I had the honor of establishing the "Iraqi Children's Project," which provided support for local orphans and widows. This effort provided significant outreach to the local community, building friendships and improving relationships with many Host Nation personnel.

As an Army Chaplain I have had the opportunity to work with Soldiers, which is the greatest gift I could ever receive. We celebrated the sacraments, had great fellowship and took time to worship God in all His Holiness. I saw first hand how the Army Chaplains can help Soldiers accomplish their assigned missions! If I went home to be with the Lord today, I would die a happy man.

I have been blessed to be married to Carol for 25 years and we have a wonderful son, Bill. Carol is a registered nurse and Bill is in his second year of dental school. I am a member of the Reserve Officers Association (ROA) and the American Legion. I am also a part time VA chaplain. I have been truly blessed by God having a great family and the fantastic opportunity to work and minister to Soldiers. The ministry of presence is and should be wherever a Chaplain is bringing about compassion, caring love and devotion to all entrusted to their care.

Five Common Kitchen Fix-Ups For $500 Or Less

(ARA) - After years of telling yourself you can live with the outdated hardware, the ugly orange laminate countertops and the daffodil-yellow wall paint, you've finally admitted to yourself that your love affair with your kitchen decor is over.

But leaving is simply out of the question and you don't have the budget for a complete makeover. What can you do?

Fortunately it is possible to rekindle your love for your kitchen, improve your home's value and accomplish it all on a modest budget. Here are some common kitchen complaints and hints for how you can resolve them -- and learn to love your kitchen again -- for less than $500 per fix.

Cabinets

Replacing outdated cabinets or even just refacing them can cost thousands of dollars. A more budget-friendly, simple solution is to repaint them and swap outdated hardware for a newer, more contemporary style. Even if you have 20 cabinet door handles to replace and you opt for pricey $5 knobs and pulls, you can still dramatically upgrade your cabinets' appeal for around $100.

Painting is another, easier option that helps change the style and appeal of your cabinets. Virtually any kind of cabinet can be painted. Just go online or consult an expert at your local home improvement store to be sure you're using the right kind of paint for your cabinet's material.

Walls

When it comes to budget redesign, paint and wallpaper can be your best friend. Pick a fresh, neutral color to paint the walls. Then spice things up with an easy-to-hang wallpaper mural that evokes your fantasy kitchen. You may never have the breezy, open kitchen in a villa in Tuscany that you dream of, but you can adorn a wall of your kitchen with a wallpaper mural that looks like an open window onto the Tuscan countryside. You'll find plenty of kitchen-appropriate wallpaper murals for under $100 at www.DecorPlace.com.

Countertops

Replacing laminate countertops with another material can be costly. Few homeowners have the resources to install granite themselves. While replacing laminate with ceramic tile may be more practical for some savvy do-it-yourselfers, an easier option for many people is to simply paint over the laminate they already have.

Even if your laminate is scratched, gouged or faded, it's possible to paint it. Use a good quality spackle to fill in cracks, chips, scratches or gouges. Be sure the entire surface is clean and dry, and then apply a coat of bonding primer to help ensure the paint adheres to the laminate. Next apply two or three coats of paint in your chosen color. Finally, seal the counters with polyurethane. You can get creative by stenciling designs on the surface or faux painting to make the laminate look like granite.

Fixtures

Replacing outdated faucets and sinks is one of the easiest, most cost-effective ways to update the look of your kitchen. You can find styles and designs to match every décor and taste for less than $500. For timeless style and lasting durability, stainless steel sinks are a great choice and many models are available for a few hundred dollars or even less. Visit your local home improvement store to get some ideas for what style will suit your taste and needs. These stores are also great resources for advice on installing your new faucets or sinks -- or go online to find tips in DIY installation.

Appliances

If your appliances look shabby but still work well, refinishing them can be a more cost-effective alternative to replacing them. A stainless steel refrigerator can cost thousands of dollars, but you can actually put a fresh coat of stainless steel paint on your old, scratched stainless steel, or even your black or white enamel refrigerator for far less. Or, if your enamel appliances better match your kitchen décor, consider repainting them in a designer color using products specially made to bond with the appliance's metal or enamel finish.

How to Smooth Caulk Without Special Tool

Q: On the television I frequently see ads for a product that is cut at different angles so that you can smooth out beads of caulk at different widths. Is this worth the price? -- Terry B., Niagara Falls, N.Y.

A: If it seems worth it to you, it might be worth the purchase price. The question to ask yourself is, how often do you re-caulk seams or re-grout tiles? If you do this fairly often in the course of home improvement and repair, a reusable smoothing tool might make the job easier.

For many homeowners, though, re-caulking is an occasional annoyance. You don't need to pay for a special tool for smoothing down the bead unless you really want to. Most do-it-yourselfers just use a finger to initially smooth the caulk down into the seam, and then use the corner of a sturdy index card to scrape away excess. The card is disposable and almost free.

Some caulkers trim away the corner of the index card so that less caulk or grout is scraped out of the seam. A playing card also is ideal for this job. Either type of card is not only sturdy, but can be bent or curled to get around tight spaces and corners.

Even with the best tools, excess caulk doesn't always get scraped away. Or a glob drips a few inches below the seam and dries before you notice it. To completely clear caulk away from areas you don't want it, moisten a cloth with distilled vinegar and rub it away, being careful not to get vinegar into the seam.

HOME TIP: To prevent cracks from appearing in new caulk, fill a sink or tub with water before recaulking a seam, and let the caulk dry before draining.

Driveway Improvements Speed Home Offers, Lower Costs

(ARA) - With a "For Sale" sign in your front yard, you want potential buyers to take a good, long look at your property. And even if you're not planning a move, you want to be sure you protect and maintain your home to keep future repairs at a minimum.

Real estate is a tough market today. If you're a seller, creating curb appeal is a key to entice potential buyers to come inside for a second look. Home selling experts predict that as many as 40 percent of potential buyers reject a home based on their first impression of the front of the house. The general appearance of the front yard is the single largest factor shaping impressions of your home.

Even if your home is not on the market, projects that improve your home's curb-side appeal can also create a safer home, help protect your assets and give the entire front of the house a beautiful look.

"Driveways and sidewalks are the first impression people have of your home. Well-maintained driveways and sidewalks create a strong first impression. On the other hand, if they are worn, cracked, stained and faded, that creates messages about what someone might find inside the home," says home improvement industry expert Gordon Bickley of Gardner-Gibson.

Driveways are often overlooked, spoiling an otherwise manicured landscape. Unless it is severely cracked, crumbling or poses a safety hazard, there's no need to spend thousands on removing and replacing it. There are easier options to make over a tired driveway that will boost the curb appeal of a home.

Seal of approval

Restore damaged asphalt by filling cracks with an asphalt crack filler or drive patch. Then renew the look of old, worn blacktop driveways with fast-drying Black Jack Ultra-Maxx 1000, a flexible, long-lasting filler and sealer with a 10-year guarantee. Or seal with new Gardner Pro7, with no mixing required and a jet-black seven-year finish.

Enlighten your view

An economical way to create a custom-home look is adding inexpensive landscape lighting. Low-voltage or solar lighting creates a softly-lit path to border the driveway, sidewalk and garden beds. While upgrading the look of the entire home, lighting deters unwanted visitors, improves home visibility, welcomes guests with a safe lighted path and decreases the chance of someone accidentally driving onto the lawn.

Refresh your sidewalks

Dirt, mold and algae that settle on sidewalks, pavers and driveways create a really dismal first impression. Clean them with Driveway Kleen, a garden-safe spray solution that attaches to a garden hose. To protect stains from coming back, coat concrete, bricks, pavers and edgers with Krytal Brilliance, a waterbased clear acrylic sealer.

Beautify the borders

Instead of having to keep the edge of the lawn trimmed against the driveway, create a "buffer" strip with a decorative rock garden or plant flowers along the path to build an inviting drive up to the home. If your driveway is adjacent to your neighbor's driveway, plant shrubs and flower beds between them for a small privacy wall.

Get an edge

Edge the driveway with pavers in colors complementary to the home and pavement. Use pavers in different shapes and sizes to create an interesting focal point and frame the driveway.

"Consider your front yard as 'open arms' that welcome visitors into your home," says Bickley. "Without a warm welcome, guests and potential buyers may just keep walking."

When You're Down to One Income

Many families are getting an unpleasant shock when job loss forces them to suddenly live on one income. If this happens to you, don't panic. Here's what to do:

- Apply for unemployment benefits. Don't wait to see if you get another job quickly.

- Do the math. Add up all your fixed monthly bills, such as credit cards, loans and mortgage. How much in the red will you actually be? Calculate savings and see how far it's going to stretch.

- Cut your fixed expenses immediately, to the extent that you can. Is it time to consider refinancing your mortgage, perhaps increasing the length of the loan to 40 years? (Once you get on your feet again, you can make extra principal payments to reduce the life of the loan.) Will the credit-card companies lower your interest rate? Perhaps it's time to cut back to basic cable service or raise the deductible on your auto insurance. If you have both cell and house phones, would it be cheaper to let the house phone go? Does it make sense to sell one of your vehicles to ily can enjoy endless hours of safe pool fun.

Much attention has been devoted to the dangers of suction drain entrapment since the passage of the federal Virginia Graeme Baker Pool & Spa Safety Act in cut back on payments and insurance? Ask your utility company about going on a fixed monthly plan (a year's use divided by 12.)

- Take a hard look at your flexible expenses, such as food and clothing and all those things that seem to fall under the heading of "miscellaneous." Before you buy anything, look for a cheaper source. Need kid clothes or a bicycle or dishes? Sign up on FreeCycle.com. Plan menus around the coupons in the weekly paper. Investigate "freebies" online. (It's best to generate a throwaway e-mail address for this, as your level of spam will skyrocket.)

- Can the one of you who still has a job telecommute? Even working from home a few days a week will save on gas and dry-cleaning bills.

If you still have your job, start now to develop multiple streams of income. Then if the worst happens, you won't be completely without income, and those side sources will have the potential of either keeping you afloat until another main job comes along, or they could be developed into your main job without the problems of getting started. Best bet in this economy: have one main and two side sources of income.

2007. The dangers of entrapment are significant, and anti-entrapment drain covers should be in place, but drowning presents an even greater risk as the second leading cause of death for children ages 1 to 5 in the U.S. Statistics from both the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and the Consumer Product Safety Commission show that hospital treatment for near-drowning is required for thousands of children each year. With the right steps, drowning is preventable.

Parents watch their children, especially during the toddler stages -- but it's impossible to watch them every second of every day, and a couple of seconds is all it takes for toddlers to come into harm's way. There are times when a parent is distracted by cooking, doing laundry, checking email, taking a shower or other routine activities such as answering the phone or front door. Ultimately, kids are drawn to water like a magnet.

It's vital to have layers of protection in place between your home and pool. Studies in areas where isolation fencing is mandatory, such as Western Australia, have proven that isolation fencing saves lives. Isolation fencing separates the pool from the home, either surrounding the pool or enclosing all doors leading from the home, to protect children who get out the door from moving beyond the patio. For above-ground pools, a smaller fence and gate surrounding the steps or ladder can prevent toddler access.

When a child gains unauthorized access to a pool and drowns or suffers permanent injury, it's a terrible tragedy. It can also be a liability issue when the injured party is a visitor. You can improve the safety and security of your pool or spa with isolation fencing with self-closing, self-latching gate hardware by D&D Technologies.

"D&D's MagnaLatch is the No. 1 selling child safety gate latch in the world," says D&D Technologies' Senior Vice President Jim Paterson. "Unlike common gravity latches, MagnaLatch has a built-in key lock, eliminating the need for a separate padlock. It won't jam, is self-latching and vertically and horizontally adjustable. Our gate hardware is formed of super-strong engineering polymers with stainless steel components, so it won't rust -- ever. And it carries a limited lifetime warranty. With TruClose hinges, no external closing spring is required, and the homeowner can easily adjust the gate closing tension after installation with the twist of a screwdriver."

Pool barrier codes require pool gates to be self-closing and self-latching, and to open away from the pool. D&D has two lockable MagnaLatch styles so the release can be mounted at the code-required height, typically 54 or 60 inches above the ground. Consult your building department for local regulations.

Pool safety advocacy groups like the National Drowning Prevention Alliance recommend several layers of protection to ensure that homeowners can experience the pleasures of swimming pools and feel an added degree of assurance that their children, grandchildren and visitors will be safe.

"We believe in promoting 'The Safer 3,' a program developed by the Swim for Life Foundation," Paterson says. "This means safer water -- including fencing and other safety devices such as alarms around the pool; safer kids -- including adult supervision and swim skill attainment; and safer response -- meaning adults should know CPR and rescue breathing, and a cordless phone should be kept poolside so that adults never have to leave the area to answer the phone while children are swimming."

The National Drowning Prevention Alliance recommends that a "water watcher" be designated for safety when children are in the pool, to maintain eye-to-eye contact at all times. Toys or floating chlorine dispensers that look like toys should never be left in the pool area. Most people don't realize that toddlers are top-heavy, so are at a higher risk of falling into water while reaching.

Neighborhood Housing First-Time Homebuyer Workshop

Buying your first home? Not sure where to begin? What kind of mortgage is right for you? How much can you afford?

Get these answers and many others when you attend one of our workshops. Open to all, regardless of income, these seminars are educational and recommended for all potential first time homebuyers. Participants will have the opportunity to speak with a lender to discuss many mortgage options.

Also covered at the workshop will be the legal aspects of buying a home, importance of home and lead inspections and other information.

This workshop is a prerequisite for first time homebuyers mortgage and grant programs, and is open to everyone throughout the state, regardless of income. Our next workshop, sponsored by Citizens Bank, is scheduled for Tuesday, June 30 from 5-9 p.m. and Thursday, July 2 from 5-9 p.m. There is a $15 fee per person.

The workshop will be held at Citizens Bank, 1200

Hancock Street (lower level), Quincy.

Attendance at both sessions is necessary to receive your homebuying certificate.

Call 617-770-2227, ext. 31 or visit www.neighborhoodhousing.com for additional information.

Free First-Time Homebuyer Seminar May 27

The homebuyer tax credit recently signed into law will be the subject at a free first-time homebuyer seminar set for Wednesday, May 27 from 7 to 8 p.m. at the office of Century 21 Abigail Adams, 221 West Squantum St., North Quincy.

The seminar is being offered by Century 21 Abigail Adams Agency in conjunction with Franklin American Mortgage Company's senior mortgage loan officer, Jennifer Lambert.

The homebuyer tax credit is part of the provisions of the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act. The bill provides for up to an $8,000 tax credit that would be available to many first-time homebuyers for the purchase of a principal residence on or after Jan. 1 and before Dec. 1 of this year. The credit does not require repayment.

Those attending the seminar will learn more about who qualifies for the tax credit, which properties are eligible, and how much the credit will be.

For more information on the free seminar, call 617-471-7575.

Team Needs Two More Wins To Qualify For D1 State Tournament

Now Or Never For Quincy Softball

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy Presidents' post-season fate rests on a four-game, four-day stretch this week. Facing the real possibility of missing the state tournament one season removed from capturing the 2008 Atlantic Coast League (ACL) North Division championship with a 16-3 record, Quincy (8-8 overall) needs to win at least two-of-four games against three Patriot League opponents and one non-league foe to qualify.

Quincy played Scituate High School on Monday evening, was scheduled to face city rival North Quincy on Tuesday, played Duxbury High School last night and will meet Stoughton High School today. The Presidents have already lost this spring to North Quincy (6-5), Duxbury (4-0) and Stoughton (4-2 in the season-opener). The team will need to reverse course against these teams to have any chance of improving on last year's run to the Division I South Sectional quarterfinals (a 5-0 loss to state power Taunton HS).

"We have been a little up-and-down this season," said Quincy head coach Mike Sedar. "But we still have a great shot at making the post-season for a second straight year. This is a huge week for us. We have a full slate and we need to come out of this week with at least two more wins. That would qualify us for the state tournament.

"My team has been playing great against the tougher competition. We have lost a lot of close games, but this week we have the opportunity to make up for some of those earlier losses against North Quincy, Duxbury and Stoughton."

If Quincy wants their shot at making noise in the South Sectionals the team is going to have to generate more offense, which is something that has been missing for long stretches this spring.

"We are not hitting as a team," Sedar said. "We have had some nice individual performances at the plate but I need more production from the entire lineup. This week it is going to be important for our 1-5 hitters to get on base and score runs."

"We have the defense and pitching to keep us in every game, but we need to produce more runs to get back to where we want to be."

Quincy's 1-2 hitters, Elisa Lam and Julia Yee, have been doing their job from the jump this year. Lam is batting .450 and Yee is batting .425, solid numbers for the team's table-setters, but with the rest of the lineup struggling to come through, Quincy usually finds itself in low-scoring games. And against the strong competition in the Patriot League, that is often not good enough.

"Yee and Lam have been fantastic for us this year and they are doing their jobs well," said Sedar. "But, again, if we want to move forward, we need the offense to start clicking."

"I have been impressed with the play of Jamie Shaughnessy, both on offense and defense, and I feel confident that our bats are about to heat up."

If the Presidents can get their offense going this week, starting pitcher Kori Sorensen should give her team a chance to be competitive in each game. Sorensen has been dominant again this season. Through sixteen games, Sorensen has 111 strikeouts, only five walks and a 1.43 ERA (earned run average).

"Whenever Kori is on the mound we always have a great shot of winning," said Sedar about his sophomore hurler. "Look at her numbers. She is a strike-throwing machine, but sometimes she is maybe too good."

"We need her to continue to challenge batters, but at the same time, we need her to waste some pitches. Everything she throws is in the zone and against teams that can catch up to her fast-ball she sometimes is not as dominant. If we can get her to keep batters off-balance, she could be unbeatable."

Quincy received some tough injury news over the weekend that could toss a wrench into their post-season plans. Freshman short-stop Nicole Parry, a pleasant surprise this spring, will miss the rest of the regular season and post-season after being injured over the weekend playing for her summer team. With a lack of depth on the roster, the Presidents will have to dig deep for reinforcements.

"We are not very deep right now, and with Nicole going down for the rest of the season, someone will need to step up," added Sedar. "But this team had great success last year, so I fully expect us to pick it up this week and then be ready to go when in the tournament starts later this month."

Team Preparing For 1st Post-Season Since 2002

Raiders Clinch Share Of Fisher Division Title

By SEAN BRENNAN

The resurgence of the North Quincy High School baseball program continued on Monday. The Red Raiders, behind a 6-5 win over Pembroke High School, clinched at least a share of the Patriot League's Fisher Division championship and with a win last night (Wednesday) at home versus Hanover High School, North Quincy would have laid claim to the outright Patriot League Fisher Division title.

Win or lose on Wednesday, the Raiders have improved by leaps and bounds in the second-year of head coach John Fidalgo's tenure on the bench. Last season, North finished on the outside looking in with regards to a state tournament berth, but already this season, the Raiders have locked up a spot in the post-season.

At 14-6 overall, North Quincy has already won five more games than they did all last year when the team finished the season at 9-11. The team's strong senior class, led by Joe Vial-

This combination of experience and talent has put this North Quincy team in a position to not only grab a division championship, but also make serious waves in the tournament.

On Monday in the Fisher Division clinching-sharing game against Pembroke, the Raiders received a solid pitching performance from Joe Edgerly. Edgerly picked up his team leading sixth win pitching six innings and striking out three batters.

Matt Jay (two hits, two runs, RBI, two stolen bases), Lamonte Toombs (three hits, RBI) and Greg Nelson (hit, two RBI) led the North Quincy offense against the Titans.

Matt Rodriguez, John Ainsley and Danny Russell also played well for North and Ainsley's fifth inning double proved to be the game-winning hit.

Late last week North Quincy picked up another huge Patriot League victory with a 3-1 win over Rockland High School.

Junior Ryan Louis pitched six innings, striking out seven batters and allowing zero runs. Senior Ben Leahy came on in relief and earned his third save of the spring.

At the plate, senior Matt Jay collected three hits and juniors Danny Russell and Louis had two hits each.

Matt Rodriguez, John Ainsley and Devin Hudson all played well on defense.

The Raiders finished last week by losing a Patriot League game to Middleboro High School.

Note: North Quincy's scheduled game against Hanover HS, set for Wednesday (May 20) will begin at 4 p.m. at Adams Field.

You Can Now Call Them The Eastern Nazarene College Lions

Eastern Nazarene College has a new mascot: Henceforth, the Christian liberal arts college's athletic teams will be known as the ENC Lions.

The new mascot was recently introduced to students, faculty and staff at an ice cream social held to mark the end of the semester and celebrate seniors' commencement May 16.

"We wanted to share the news of our new mascot before our graduating seniors left campus," College President Corlis McGee said. "The entire ENC community had an opportunity to offer input, and we look forward to rooting for our ENC Lions at sporting events in the future."

Created by Quincy's Cyclone Design, the new mascot features a golden lion atop the college name, with the word "LIONS" outlined in red over the college shield.

The Lions replaces the college's previous mascot of the Crusaders - a term whose connotation has changed over the years, ENC officials said.

"When ENC and many other Christian colleges first adopted the Crusader mascot, the term was perceived much more positively," said McGee, who noted that Illinois' Wheaton College, Point Loma Nazarene University and other U.S. colleges also have opted to replace their Crusader mascots. "In today's world, the term often carries a negative connotation, and there was a growing awareness among ENC students, faculty and alumni that the Crusader no longer represented the positive message of Christian love we aim to share with the world."

Eric Severson, a professor of religion at Eastern Nazarene, concurred. In a statement supporting the mascot change, Severson noted that the sanitized image of the Crusader overlooks a complicated historical record that includes cruelty and barbarism.

"The violent soldier of the crusades," Severson wrote, "...is simply a poor representative of ENC's commitment to Christian love."

ENC Alumnus Dr. Mark H. Mann - a former Crusader basketball player whose grandfather, longtime ENC President Edward S. Mann, selected the Crusader - also supported changing the mascot.

"I thank God that we have decided to make the change," Mann said. "It fills me with great pride to know that, in disassociating ourselves from the atrocities of the medieval Crusaders, we are better able to communicate the distinctly Christian mission and vision of those who, like my grandfather, sought to build a college that above all glorifies Christ."

After agreeing that it was time to retire the Crusader, ENC officials established a selection committee, which solicited suggestions and feedback from the campus community and alumni.

"The lion is a symbol of courage and strength," said McGee, noting that the Bible refers to Jesus as "the Lion of the tribe of Judah." "I think the very fact that ENC was willing to explore the mascot issue, and to open a dialogue on the subject, exemplifies the strengths of a Christian liberal arts education."

Located in Quincy, Eastern Nazarene College (ENC) is a fully accredited liberal arts college.

Parents Can Take Active Role In Helping Children With Asthma

(ARA) - As any parent of a young child will tell you, talking to your kids and getting them to listen is not an easy task. This challenge can be even more pronounced when you are a parent of a child with asthma, a condition that affects nearly one in 10 children in America, according to the National Center for Health Statistics.

When asthma is not properly managed, it can have real consequences for both parents and children. In fact, asthma accounts for almost 13 million missed school days each year and is the third-ranking cause of hospitalization among those younger than 15 years of age, according to the Centers for Disease Control and the American Lung Association.

To help parents talk with their children about asthma and support children coping with the disease, the Allergy & Asthma Network Mothers of Asthmatics, through a partnership with Schering-Plough Corporation, has developed an entertaining and educational new storybook, "Breathless Bethany But-tercup."

The storybook uses a little girl's experience to provide information about asthma management. With playful rhymes and colorful illustrations, the storybook appeals to early elementary school-aged students.

Parents can order a free copy of "Breathless Bethany Buttercup" through Schering-Plough and the Allergy & Asthma Network Mothers of Asthmatics by visiting www.asthmastorybook.com or www.breatherville.org.

Understanding Asthma

When your child has asthma, his or her airways become inflamed, resulting in swollen and very sensitive airways that can easily be irritated by environmental and other factors. Asthma is a part of your child's daily life and symptoms can strike anytime, anywhere. If you take the appropriate steps to learn about and understand the disease, and work with your child's health care professional to develop an asthma treatment plan, you may be able to help manage your child's asthma.

Tips for Managing Your Child's Asthma

- Recognize that asthma is a serious, potentially life-threatening condition and continually monitor your child's asthma symptoms.

- Work with your child's physician to develop an asthma action plan that outlines your child's asthma history and includes information about current medications.

- Work with your child to identify and avoid activities and irritants that result in breathing problems.

- Keep your child involved and talk to them about their asthma, warning signs and the appropriate use of medications.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

DENTAL IMPLANTS TAKE ROOT

Patients needing to replace lost teeth have another option besides partial/full dentures and traditional bridges. Dental implants can be used to replace all, a few, or only one missing tooth without any of the characteristic disadvantages often associated with dentures. Because implants make sure of titanium anchors placed firmly in the jaw, they are permanently set and will not slip. As a result, when the prosthetic teeth are attached to the anchors with connectors (abutments), dental implants provide both the look and feel of natural teeth. Those patients with sufficient jawbone to support dental implants are the best candidates for the procedure. If necessary, a bone graft procedure can be undertaken to provide implants with an adequate foundation.

Making the decision to dental implants can genuinely be life altering for someone who has missing teeth. Dental implants look, feel and function like your own teeth and give you back your smile and boost confidence. All of our patients have a pleasant, positive visit with us. Our office is located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we stress preventive health care for the entire family, and utilize state of the art dental procedures. The best way to reduce your chances of getting any dental disease is to develop good oral hygiene habits. We're currently accepting new patients and welcome you to call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Dental implants actually become one with the bone in which they are embedded through a process called "osseointegration" (fusing of titanium to bone).

Milton Hospital Taste Of Spring Fundraiser June 4

Milton Hospital, a clinical affiliate of Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center providing community-based health care, announces auction and raffle items in conjunction with its Taste of Spring fundraising gala, Thursday, June 4 at the Milton Hoosic Club in Milton.

Members of the community are now able to place bids online for items such as an amethyst and pearl bracelet, art work, delicious food, pottery, pop culture, sports memorabilia and a three-night stay in Las Vegas. The online-only auction is open through June 3 and can be accessed at www.miltonhospital.cmarket.com, allowing community members who are unable to attend the event a way to still give back to the hospital.

In addition to the online auction, and auctions during the event, tickets are available for the Taste of Spring Grand Raffle, featuring a luxurious one-week stay in Los Cabos on the Sea of Cortez, a Celtics ball girl or ball boy game package and an 18 kt Gold/Silver Diamond Pendant Necklace with chain.

Live and silent auction items feature an overnight stay at the Copley Plaza, a watercolor painting by New England artist Miriam Wotiz entitled 'Rain in the City', foursome at Wollaston Golf Club, sports tickets and more.

The Taste of Spring Grand Raffle tickets are available now through June 4 for $25 each or five for $100 and winners do not need to be present to win.

Chaired by Dr. and Mrs. Clifford Gluck, this year's event features a food and wine tasting prepared by area restaurants and chefs including The Weymouth Club, Gourmet Caterers and Domenic and Anthony catering. Wines are donated from distributors including W.J. Deutsch and Sons, CLICK Imports and Huneus Vintners.

Proceeds from this year's event will fund new operating room equipment that further enhances the hospital's commitment to innovation and technology while serving the community. Sponsors to date include Mass Bay Urology in Milton, Cedar Hill Health Care Center in Randolph, South Shore Internal Medicine Associates in Milton, Milton Hospital Medical Staff, Fuller Village in Milton, Cedar Grove Gardens in Dorchester, and Marc A. Susi Scholarship Fund.

"The Taste of Spring event gives members of the community multiple ways to support the hospital. Whether it's a $25 raffle ticket or corporate sponsorship, we sincerely appreciate the contribution the public makes to support hospital technology," said Joseph V. Morrissey, President of Milton Hospital. "It's also a fun event to attend and everyone looks forward to sampling different cuisine from local restaurants."

Exercise Won't Make Arthritis Worse

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have osteoarthritis of the hands, and my fingers have bony knobs on the knuckles. They look bad and hurt part of the time. I was a registered nurse and did lots of lifting of patients. Is the arthritis genetic or from the lifting? I go to the gym two to three times a week and have been doing so for two years. Am I making it worse? - C.S.

ANSWER: Osteoarthritis is the most common kind of arthritis. At age 65, one-third of people have evidence of knee osteoarthritis, and close to 100 percent of women have evidence of osteoarthritis of their hands and fingers. Not all these people have symptoms. The tiny bumps on the knuckle below the fingernail are part of the arthritis picture. Genes are involved. Age, misalignment of bones and injury are other contributors. Exercise is not responsible. Continue your exercise program. Strong muscles protect joints, and exercise keeps them limber. Only if an exercise is painful should you stop it.

A joint is the place where two bone ends meet. The ends are covered with cartilage, and the entire joint is surrounded by a tough covering called the joint capsule. Cartilage makes it possible for one bone end to move over the other painlessly. Joint fluid, contained in the joint by the joint capsule, oils the joint and also keeps it operating without friction. In osteoarthritis, the joint cartilage begins to fray and crumble, and the joint fluid thins.

There is no cure for osteoarthritis; there are treatments. Tylenol is one of the best and safest drugs. Aspirin and nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory medicines (Aleve, Advil, Motrin, etc.) are widely prescribed. They can cause ulcers, so they have to be used in moderation. Voltaren gel is an anti-inflammatory applied to the skin over an affected joint. Less is absorbed this way, so it has fewer side effects. The doctor can inject a bothersome joint with cortisone.

Artificial joints are always worth consideration when arthritis severely limits motion and is quite painful. The joint at the base of the thumb is often bothersome in women. An operation that inserts a small piece of cartilage or other synthetic material can cushion that joint and bring great relief.

The arthritis booklet discusses osteoarthritis, rheumatoid arthritis and lupus. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue -- No. 301W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada, with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Have clubfeet disappeared? When I was a child, I knew several children who were born with them. Now I never hear about it. I am 92. - R.T.

ANSWER: Clubfeet have not disappeared. It happens to about one in every 1,000 newborns.

This is something that happens during fetal development. The foot bones are misaligned. The result is the soles of the feet turn to face each other, like the position of praying hands with palm against palm.

Taping, strapping and casting are some of the ways used to treat clubfeet. Some infants require surgery to attain normal foot alignment.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

W. Richard Smith Memorial Concert June 7 At Covenant Congregational Church

The fifth annual W. Richard Smith Memorial Concert will be held Sunday, June 7 at 4 p.m. at Covenant Congregational Church, 315 Whitwell St., Quincy Center.

This year's concert theme is "Celebrating Quincy Musicians."

Each of the performers regularly share their musical talents with the Quincy community. They include: Sue Bill, violinist; Lambert Brandes, organist at Wollaston Church of the Nazarene; Alan Thomas, organist at First Presbyterian Church of Quincy; Rock Whiting, organist at Faith Lutheran Church of Quincy; and Christine Fahey, pianist at Covenant Congregational Church.

"Quincy is blessed with many wonderful musicians in our churches and this year we made the decision to highlight some of them in this special way," said Rev. Karen Palmatier, pastor of Covenant Church.

The annual concert is named for a much loved former choir director and organist of the Covenant Church.

The concert is free and a reception will follow the concert.

Call the church at 617-479-5728 for more information.

A THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

Memorial Day is a reverent day; a day of gratitude and prayer for our fallen countrymen who fell to preserve freedom and honor of their country. Those who died in our wars did so in the unfulfilled hope their sacrifice would bring enduring peace.

Memorial Day is a proper time for all of us to rededicate ourselves to peaceful purpose in our world-wide relationships. It can be done. God's help and guidance is available. We need only ask for it. With His help, internal and external problems can be solved. Strength, wisdom and courage can be ours to meet every challenge and reach solutions for the betterment of our country and mankind everywhere.

Memorial Day is a perfect time to realize our potential for peace with a prayer that never again will we have to praise the valor of our fighting men in any future war...

INVITATION TO BID

INVITATION TO BID

REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS

CITY OF QUINCY, MASSACHUSETTS PURCHASING DEPARTMENT
1305 HANCOCK STREET, QUINCY, MA 02169

The City of Quincy invites sealed bids/proposals for furnishing and delivering to the City of Quincy

AFFORDABLE HOUSING

FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS FOR THE CITY OF QUINCY FIRST-TIME HOMEBUYERS PROGRAM

JUNE 12, 2009 at 1:00 p.m.

In accordance with M.G.L. Chapter 30B, the City of Quincy acting through its Affordable Housing Trust Fund Committee is soliciting proposals from financial institutions interested in providing mortgage lending services to qualified participants in a new first-time homebuyers program entitled "At Home in Quincy". The purpose of the Affordable Housing Trust Fund is to assist people who despite working hard need financial assistance to buy a home. Many of these families live in Quincy, paying high rents that make saving for a down payment impossible.

Non-Price bids/proposals must be in a sealed envelope and price proposals must be in a separate sealed envelope. The outside of the sealed envelopes are to be clearly marked "RFP - Non Price Proposal Enclosed" with the time/date of the RFP and "RFP - Price Proposal Enclosed" with the time/date of the RFP.

Detailed specifications are on file at the Office of the Purchasing Agent, Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock Street, Quincy, Massachusetts, 02169, between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Proposals will be received at the Office of the Purchasing Agent until the time and date stated above. Late proposals delivered by mail or in person, will be rejected.

If applicable, proposals shall be in accordance with M.G.L. Chapter 30B, Chapter 149 as amended, and Chapter 30, Sections 39A, 39B and 39F-R. Bidder must abide by the prevailing wages as established by the Massachusetts Department of Labor and Industries.

The right is reserved to reject any or all proposals or to accept any part of an RFP or the one deemed best for the City and waive any informalities in the bidding if it is in the best interest of the City to do so.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19)
Untangling personal problems might take more time than the impatient Lamb expected. But it's important to hang in there until all those knotty situations are straightened out.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)
You still need to work out last-minute snags in your dealings with a rival. Hold your ground despite a perceived lack of support. Things should turn around before you know it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
Best not to delay preparing for that upcoming family event. The sooner you get things started, the better chance you have of finding potential problems and making needed changes.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
The romantic Moon Child might be reluctant to see the reality behind that "ideal" situation. But by midweek, the practical Crab emerges to help clear away the moonbeams.

LEO (July 23 to August 22)
Although the Big Cat might be receptive to more "purr-suasion" to get you to agree to a workplace change, make sure you can distinguish the fine line between facts and flattery.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22)
Your positive attitude in the workplace helps to get you noticed by the right people. Now go ahead and use some of that new self-confidence to help shore up a personal relationship.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22)
Although you might still have to work out some problems with a business partner, things go more smoothly on the home front. An investment opportunity might need more study.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21)
Don't be reluctant to act on your suspicion. Even if others see nothing wrong, the astute Scorpio could sense an underlying problem that isn't always obvious on the surface.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21)
A new opportunity presents some obstacles that need to be dealt with as soon as possible. Delaying action in hopes that the problems will go away could be counterproductive.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19)
A friend or family member's request might carry some hidden factors that could later create problems. Be sure you know all the facts before you make your decision.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18)
A setback in implementing a plan could turn out to be a blessing in disguise. Use the downtime to rework your original concepts and see where changes could be made.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20)
You might not be consciously fishing for compliments, but admit it -- won't you feel great when your efforts are noticed? So accept the praise gracefully. You earned it.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your love of beauty in your personal life extends to your efforts to protect and preserve the natural world around you.

Police Memorial Exercises June 7

The Quincy Police Mutual Aid Association announces the annual Police Memorial exercises will be conducted Sunday, June 7.

Commencing at 8:30 a.m., members of the Association, active and retired Quincy police officers, invited guests and dignitaries will assemble at the Quincy District Court, 1 Dennis Ryan Parkway, Quincy.

At 8:45 a.m., the contingent, led by the Quincy Police Department's Honor Guard and escort vehicles, will march from the courthouse to Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

At 9 a.m., at the cemetery, the traditional first Sunday in June ceremony commemorating Police Memorial Sunday will take place. The public is invited and encouraged to attend.

During the memorial, the Association will remember its departed members and departed Quincy Police Crossing Guards. A wreath will be placed at the Police Memorial located in the cemetery opposite Quincy Police headquarters.

Mayor Tom Koch and Quincy Police Chief Paul Keenan will offer remarks.

Following the ceremony, a light collation will follow at the George F. Bryan Veterans of Foreign Wars Post Hall on Broad Street.

In the event of inclement weather, the memorial will take place at the Bryan Post Hall.

Transferring To Manchester, CT As Of July 1

Majors Doug, Linda Jones Leaving Quincy Salvation Army

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

To the more than 50 people in the congregation at the Salvation Army in Quincy, the transfer of Majors Doug and Linda Jones to Manchester, CT, after eight years must have come as a surprise.

They have to be in Manchester by July 1.

Major Doug Jones said he and his wife received a phone call and had six weeks to prepare to move.

Major Jones said in the Salvation Army, "we are here by appointment - we don't select - we receive an appointment from divisional or territorial leaders."

"Our move was made by territorial leaders because we are moving out of Massachusetts into the Southern New England division, which includes Connecticut and Rhode Island."

SECONDARY LUNCH MENU

Monday, May 25
Memorial Day - No School.

Tuesday, May 26
Toasted cheese sandwich, cup of tomato soup, box of raisins. Early release middle schools.

Wednesday, May 27
Pizza burger on a whole grain bun, corn niblets, fruit gelatin.

Thursday, May 28
Turkey taco with shredded cheese, baked tortilla chips, corn niblets, fruit cup.

Friday, May 29
Whole wheat rotini pasta salad with veggies, diced turkey and cheese, fruit and nut trail mix cup.

SALVATION ARMY MAJORS Doug and Linda Jones will be leaving Quincy for their new assignment in Manchester, CT effective July 1.

Asked how he and his wife felt about leaving Quincy, Doug Jones said it was "hard to put into words as we just found out about it last Thursday." He said he and his wife are still trying to "sort things out in our minds."

He said the move is "bittersweet" because it's always difficult "to leave the people you love."

Major Doug Jones said "our eight years in Quincy have been extremely rewarding. It has been a joy to work with the other pastors in the community." He said he and his wife have also enjoyed working with "other social service agencies."

He said he had to resign from the board at the Quincy Rotary Club, and said he will miss the "camaraderie."

When asked about any highlights during the past eight years, he said the ability to "work with such kind and generous people" and added, "we met some wonderful people, including many community leaders who we have encountered with such support and cooperation."

He said the congregation and community leaders have all had a "full impact on our lives as we have on theirs."

He said in closing, "There is a spirit of cooperation in the City of Quincy that I've experienced no where else in my 33 years of ministry."

Don Uvanitte, senior vice president of Eastern Insurance and chairman of the Quincy Salvation Army's Advisory Board, said he was as "shocked about the Joneses leaving as they were."

He called them "lovely people" who have done an "outstanding job and have not only influenced the City of Quincy, but other surrounding communities as well."

He said that in addition to the youth programs, they instituted an adult day health day care program which services about two dozen people daily.

Services in the Salvation Army for the two majors included 10 years in Maine, three years in Hartford, CT, and 19 years in Massachusetts.

The final service will be held at 11 a.m. Sunday, June 28 at the Salvation Army, 6 Baxter St.

Koch Announces Re-Election Bid

Mayor Thomas Koch formally kicked-off his re-election bid on Thursday, telling more than 800 supporters in a packed ballroom at the Quincy Elks that there "is nothing we cannot achieve when we come together as a community."

Koch, who is running for his second two-year term, rallied supporters by telling them that the November election, "will not be about anyone's self-interest, but the city's best interests."

"It is all about the City of Quincy, and everybody in this room and everybody in this community is a part of it," Koch said.

The mayor, flanked by his wife, Christine and his three children, touched on the city's financial situation, working together with the city unions to save millions of dollars in health insurance costs, savings on the trash collection, and taking action to deal with a historic fiscal crisis.

TOM KOCH

He later highlighted the city's efforts to clear hidden deficits, reign in spending on the new Quincy High School project and the probe into the 2007 energy deal that sparked an ongoing state investigation.

"We dealt with the mess, we righted the ship, and we are working through some of the most extraordinary financial times in our city's history," Koch said. "The numbers are daunting, the task is difficult, but there is nothing we cannot achieve when we come together as a community. And it is in that spirit that we will continue to make Quincy the greatest city in the Commonwealth."

Koch did not address any specific challengers in his announcement, but said the campaign will bring the same honest message that it did two years ago.

"I kept getting told, 'You've got to punch back,'" Koch said. "Well, we took the high road then, and we will take the high road this year, bringing our message to every citizen of Quincy, holding coffee hours, and knocking on doors. I am ready and I need your help. Let's go get 'em."

Mariano Will Not Seek School Seat

Quincy School Committee from 1989 to 2005. He did not seek re-election to the school committee in 2005.

Mariano also told The Sun he will seek re-election to his House seat next year. He was first elected state representative from the Third Norfolk District in a special election in November, 1992. The district includes all of Ward 2 and Ward 4 Precinct 5 in Quincy, as well as three precincts in Holbrook and five precincts in Weymouth.

Mariano's decision to bow out of the school race means there will be at least one open seat for the school committee.

Incumbent Anne Mahoney is running for a second four-year term.

Nick Puleo has not announced whether he will seek the seat he's held since early last year after former School Committeeman James Timmins vacated the seat to become city solicitor.

Three other candidates have declared their candidacies for Quincy School Committee and have pulled nomination papers from the city's Election Department.

They are:

- Karl Roos, age 41, of 8 Park St. A graduate of the University of Massachusetts in Amherst and Bentley College, he works in the pharmaceutical industry.

- Matthew Lockwood Mullaney, age 39, of 180 Glendale Rd. A graduate of Harvard and MIT, he is a market manager for Harvard Pilgrim's Massachusetts business.

- Rebecca McWilliams, age 26, of 24 Newcomb St. A licensed architect, she is a graduate of Roger Williams University and is enrolled in Suffolk Law evening division.

No other candidates had pulled nomination papers as of the Sun's deadline Tuesday afternoon.

ABOUT PODIATRISTS

Our feet are meant to keep us balanced and mobile. The bones in the feet make up about 25 percent of all the bones in the human body. Podiatrists are specially trained to diagnose and treat the feet, and they must be licensed. Many podiatrists have their own practice or work within a group with other health practitioners. Depending on their board-certified specialty, podiatrists may place their emphasis on sports medicine, diabetic foot care, pediatrics, radiology, or a number of other concentrations. Some specialize in surgery, primary care, or orthopedics. Most podiatrists are supported by a staff of assistants. Some visit patients in elder care facilities. Podiatrists tend to treat fewer emergencies than other doctors. I am one of only two podiatrists in this state who has completed the advanced training necessary to offer patients relief from pronation through the use of the HyProCure™ procedure, a titanium implant that prevents the abnormal motion of the ankle caused by this condition. My office is located at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER. Office hours also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221. PH: 781-986-3668. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals. P.S. The foot may be the first area to show signs of serious health conditions such as diabetes and heart disease.

In Wall Street Meltdown; Pension Checks Not Affected City's Retirement Fund Down 24.9%

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The city's retirement fund suffered a 24.9% loss in Wall Street's 2008 meltdown, according to Ed Masterson who has been Director of the City's Retirement Services for the past 13 years.

"We've lost about $100 million in market value," Masterson told the Finance Committee May 19.

The losses will not affect the pensions of any current or future retiree but it could extend the time frame needed to fully fund the city's pension account.

According to Masterson's official records, the loss actually was slightly less than $100 million from January 1, 2008 to May 1st.

The official figures follow:

1-1-08	$312,338,341
12-31-08	$222,338,878
5-1-09	$217,706,420

From Jan. 1, 2008 to

May 1, the fund lost $94.6 million.

In the five months from Jan. 1, 2009 to May 1, 2009, the fund lost over $5 million.

That's going to have to be amortized over 20 years, Masterson said. Funding changes in the city's percentage contribution will occur in 2012.

After the two-year 50% reduction in the 2010 and 2011 budgets, the city's contribution will be 10%.

Sproul Tackles Overdue Bills $9 Million Uncollected Over Past Decade

Deadbeats have cost the city some $9 million in revenues over the past decade, according to Warren Sproul, Director of the Municipal Finance Department, who pledged new aggressive efforts to reverse the tide.

Sproul spoke May 19 at the Finance Committee reviewed pensions, benefits, revenue estimates, and debt service estimates in the 2010 budget.

"A lot of it is uncollectible," said Sproul who described unpaid parking tickets, personal property and motor vehicle taxes neglected for years.

"We should be writing some of the old, old stuff off," said Sproul. He then outlined new tactics the department has adopted to deal with debt collection. The new initiatives include more aggressive debt collection and more aggressive enforcement of liens.

For the next year, the city will be looking at the United First Parish Church Still In Running For Preservation Grant

When the voting ended on May 17, United First Parish Church, "Church of the Presidents," had moved up to 11th place out of 25 finalists in the recent online grant competition sponsored by "Partners in Preservation Greater Boston Initiative," a partnership of the National Trust for Historic Preservation and American Express.

"Partners in Preservation" announced on May 18 that the Paragon Carousel in Hull was the first place popular vote winner and will receive a $100,000 grant for historic preservation. It also announced that additional grants will be awarded on June 16 to a number of the other finalists by an Advisory Committee comprised of Greater Boston civic leaders and preservationists. A total of $1,000,000 in preservation grants will be awarded.

During the five week online voting period which began on April 14, people went to a dedicated website and voted for their favorite historic place from a list of 25 finalist sites located in the Greater Boston area. Partners in Preservation reported that it received "over two million page views" to its website.

The Rev. Sheldon W. Bennett, minister, said, "The congregation thanks the Quincy community for its enthusiastic support in voting to help restore this historic landmark which is so important to the city and nation."

He said the congregation "is proud of what it has achieved in moving from the bottom of the list up to 11th place," and that "we believe that we are very much in the running to win our $100,000 grant application when awards are announced on June 16."

If successful, the congregation will use the grant proceeds to help restore the bell tower and improve the public corridor to the crypt and tombs of Adams Presidents. Rev. Bennett said, "Whether or not we win a grant, this program has greatly increased public awareness of this magnificent building."

The historic church building, built in 1828, is an architectural masterpiece in the Greek Revival Style by Boston architect Alexander Parris and serves as a living monument to the two U.S. Presidents, John Adams and John Quincy Adams, whose tombs rest in a crypt within the church building, alongside the tombs of their wives Abigail Adams and Louisa Catherine Adams.

United First Parish Church, founded in 1639, was the church for eight generations of the Adams family, including the two Presidents, and continues today as an active congregation holding services, hosting civic events, and conducting public tours.

Launched in 2006, Partners in Preservation is a five year program funded by a pledge of $5.5 million from American Express in partnership with the National Trust for Historic Preservation to promote and fund historic preservation throughout the United States. The Greater Boston area is the fourth region to host the program.

Koch Calls Trip To Washington 'Success'

Mayor Thomas Koch said Tuesday he completed an "extremely positive, and extremely productive" round of meetings in Washington, D.C. last week. He said the administration continues to build broad-based support for the historic $1 billion plan to redevelop Quincy Center.

Koch and members of the Quincy Center development team met with Senator John Kerry, Congressman William Delahunt and Senator Edward Kennedy's office to update officials on the plan's progress and lobby for federal government's support of a plan that would create the largest influx of jobs and private investment in Quincy history.

"Since taking office, we've worked hard to build strong partnerships with our state and federal leaders, and these partnerships will be never more important than they are now as we move forward with the Quincy Center project," Koch said. "Everybody has a stake in this project from our local officials, to Beacon Hill, to our leaders in Washington and it's critical that they are invested in it from the beginning."

Koch said the city's Capitol delegation is "completely on board" with the downtown plan, and meetings centered around potential for injecting federal money into infrastructure projects in Quincy Center. He said that funding possibilities include the federal stimulus package, the federal Transportation Bond Bill, and the federal budget.

hunt and Senators Kerry and Kennedy are working hard on our behalf, and they clearly see that this project is precisely the kind of economic development that we need during these historically challenging times," Koch said. "I am truly grateful for all their support to date, and look forward to continuing to work together."

The city's negotiations with developer Street-Works are ongoing, and included a meeting with the developer's Washington-based legal team, Koch said. This week, the City Council is again taking up proposed zoning changes downtown, and the public will get its first full look at plans revised following more than 20 public meetings hosted by Mayor Koch over the last month.

Quincy College To Hold Spring Commencement Saturday

Quincy College will hold its annual spring commencement on Saturday, May 30 at 1 p.m. at the Boston Marriott Hotel in Quincy; over 250 students will receive associate degrees or certificates from the college.

At the commencement, Quincy College will honor Richard T. Pitts, D.O., with a Distinguished Alumnus Award for lifetime of excellence in the field of medicine and a life long dedication to learning. Elaine Beaupre will be recognized with the Faculty Member of the Year Award for 2008-2009 for excellence in education and outstanding service to the Quincy College community and its students.

Dr. Pitts will deliver the spring commencement address to graduates and Ms. Beaupre will serve as macebearer during the ceremony.

Dr. Pitts' distinguished career as a physician, professor, medical director and author spans some 33 years. He is currently the Assistant Medical Director/Chief of Occupational Medicine at Kaiser Permanente Orange County Service Area in Anaheim, California and Associate Clinical Professor of Medicine at the University of California, Irvine.

He served in the U.S. Navy Reserve Medical Corps from 1998 to 2006.

Ms. Beaupre has served as Chair of Nursing for three years and as a faculty advisor for a total of 30 years at Quincy College. She holds a BS in Nursing from West Virginia Wesleyan College, M.Ed in Health Education from Bridgewater State College and MS in Nursing Administration from Regis College.

She has served on the College Senate, the Academic Council and the College Curriculum Committee at various times. She has authored curriculum for Quincy College's medical-surgical nursing and pharmacology courses as well as the LPN in Transition and Nursing Refresher programs.

Zoning Board Rejects 'Baby Doll' Studio

"Baby Dolls" won't be dancing in North Quincy as least for the time being.

The Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) last week rejected a variance request for a "change of use which would have allowed The Billings Street Dance Studio, better known as the 'Baby Dolls,' to operate at 37 Billings Rd., Norfolk Downs.

"The Zoning Board found that it would be substantially more detrimental and a more intense use," Ward 6 City Councillor Brian McNamee said, explaining the ZBA's May 19 decision.

McNamee said the company's business plan indicated that dance classes would change on the hour and different instructors and classes would be coming and going in the already congested business district.

McNamee and Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro spoke at the hearing which drew some 50 spectators. Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, also, attended the meeting.

The studio has been a controversial issue in the North Quincy area where opponents objected to burlesque classes, and possibly burlesque shows on Billings Street.

Alex Newman and his partner, Abigail Weiner, both of Dorchester, were listed as owners.

Newman has repeatedly denied there would be burlesque shows or that the studio would focus on teaching burlesque routines.

In discussing his plans with The Sun last month, Newman said the studio would offer classes in ballet, Irish Step, swing dancing and Middle East dancing.

Martin Aikens is chairman of the Zoning Board.

Councillors Approve Frank Sablone Square

City Councillors last week honored the late Frankie Sablone with a special square named after him at the request of Ward 5 City Councillor Doug Gutro.

Gutro described how "Frankie" is missed by so many people in the city when he recommended naming the corner of Hancock and Chapman Streets in Wollaston, "Frankie Sablone Square."

Nearly 4,000 Ready For July 1 Change Insurance Deadline Nears, But 100-150 Retirees Unsigned

Some 100-150 retirees have not signed up for the city's new health insurance plan, according to Human Resource Director Steve McGrath who said his staff is continuing efforts to enroll every eligible person.

The missing retirees are a tiny percentage of the 2000 employees and the 2000 retirees eligible for the state health insurance program.

"We're reaching out to every person," said McGrath, adding there have been repeated efforts to reach the 100-150 retirees who have not responded.

All city employees and retirees will be covered under the G.I.C. or Group Insurance Commission as of July 1 and that raises the issue of how to handle those who have not enlisted and will not be insured after July 1.

"One option is whether we can enroll them. Legally, that's an issue," said McGrath, adding he and his staff are trying to "avoid anyone getting dropped."

As for those who have enrolled, McGrath said that the response has been generally positive

"They've been very pleased with the rates," McGrath said, adding that there have not been many complaints

This year, the city's bill for health insurance and employee benefits is nearly $42.2 million. The total cost in next year's budget is $36.8.

With the change to G.I.C., the city is expected to save $5 to $6 million in health insurance costs and another $4 million in health insurance increases.

However, the $10 million savings is a one year only bonanza. Finance Committee Chairman John Keenan warned that a 3% to 6% increase should be expected in FY2011.

Your mortgage and debts paid in full in the next 10 years... It can happen!

Memorial Day 2009

So, how was your Memorial Day weekend? Relax outdoors? Barbecue? Maybe a little golf or boating?

Monday marked the unofficial start of the summer season. But to me, Memorial Day is much more than firing up the gas grill or crossing the Sagamore Bridge to the Cape for the first time.

Don't get me wrong. I like a good burger and a warm, sunny day in Dennis Port like so many others do.

But the last Monday in May should – and does – mean more than that.

Memorial Day – formerly known as Decoration Day – commemorates U.S. men and women who died while in the military service. It was first enacted to honor Union soldiers of the American Civil War. But after World War I, the holiday was expanded to include American casualties of any war or military action.

You don't need a calendar to know when Memorial Day is approaching. Just pass by any cemetery. Countless American flags decorate the graves of those who gave the ultimate sacrifice in war time and other deceased veterans who served this country.

Of course, many Americans also use Memorial Day to honor other family members who have died. Count me among that group.

For many years, on Memorial Day weekend, my parents would take my sisters and me to visit the graves of family members. Sure, part of the weekend was for fun and enjoyment. But time was always made for the cemeteries. There we remembered loved ones and the years we shared together as family. One day to remember. To pay respects.

Every Memorial Day weekend, we knew Dad was going to the cemeteries. We'd watch him visit the graves and plant flowers and remove weeds around headstones and markers.

We'd pause at the graves and pray silently. We left the grave sites in better shape than we found them, adorned with pretty flowers. We left the cemetery with rekindled memories of loved ones who are no longer here.

So that's what I've come to expect each Memorial Day, although this year, it's the memory of my Dad that is still strong and vivid.

I remember one Memorial Day weekend I stopped into my parent's house and mentioned that I had visited all the graves already, and placed some flowers at one cemetery which was a considerable distance.

"You really visited all the graves, Bobby," he said, pleased and proud.

"Of course, I did. That's what you taught me." Henry then paused a moment. "Well, Bob, I hope you visit the cemeteries after I'm gone."

The sentence struck me but I didn't want to contemplate it too much. I said that was something that won't happen for a long time.

On this holiday weekend, that time came.

My wife Amy and I along with my mom planted red geraniums at Henry's grave. We brought potting soil and garden tools. Other family also visited with flowers in tow. Together we beautified his resting place in a way Henry would have been proud.

The three of us also visited another nearby cemetery and planted flowers there. On our way home, my wife and I made one more stop at a cemetery in East Bridgewater.

Sure the visits were somber.

But you know what?

For me, cemeteries evoke an inner calm. They are peaceful sanctuaries from today's hectic grind of everyday life. And the more I visit the better I feel. And now I'm finding going to the cemetery easier than leaving it.

I know not everyone feels the same way about cemeteries. But someone once said to me that cemeteries are not for the deceased, they're for the living. And when I visit Henry's grave, I remember my father's life as my dad, not his death. Same as when I go to work at the paper. I can still feel his presence.

Of course, cemeteries have a not-so-subtle way of reminding us of our mortality. And sooner or later, everyone has to come to terms with this conclusion.

Oddly enough, it was a few months following my father's passing – not directly after – that got me thinking about my own mortality.

The first "reminder" came one evening after work. There was a telephone message on the home answering machine. It was a lawyer inquiring about the estate of the late Robert Bosworth. My wife called the woman back and quickly cleared up the confusion: this Robert Bosworth was still very much alive.

A short time later I decided to visit my father's grave for the first time since his funeral. It was a Wednesday evening after work and I wanted to stop and visit. Emotional? Yes. Necessary? You bet.

As I lingered at the site, I started scanning the rows and rows of neatly lined headstones and recognized some of the last names. Some I knew personally.

And that's when the question finally surfaced: where will I be laid to rest?

Within a few days, I began making inquiries about burial plots at an area cemetery. The costs, different types, things like that. Then I called back and arranged a pre-need consultation and a tour.

On tour day it was raining pretty good. I stood in one section, surveying the land. The gentle green slopes were dotted with monuments, markers, flowers and trees. Next to me was the president of the cemetery holding a black umbrella over my head. He kindly and respectfully answered all my questions. He also assured me that it was not uncommon for someone who has lost a loved one to inquire about burial plots.

Soon enough, we were in his car driving around the cemetery in the pouring rain. I learned about mausoleums, flush markers and monument sections. Interestingly enough, I was told some people buy their burial plot along with their headstone and have the stone erected on the site while they are still alive. Some people, evidently, visit their own future grave sites.

In some ways, I felt like a prospective homebuyer looking at property. Should the plot be in the sun or under a tree? What about buying a space in a section that has yet to be developed but will fill in over the years? Is the area quiet or near the street?

So our trek around the cemetery took on the feel of a realtor with a prospective buyer. Only this time I wasn't interested in three bedrooms and one and a half baths.

But the overriding concern was still the same: location, location, location.

And I kept coming back to the same location: near my father.

Now, when I go back to the cemetery, I pass my own plot while visiting my father's grave.

It's been 19 years since I moved out of my parent's house in Braintree. And ever since, my dad would say to me, "Hey, when are you moving back this way?"

Somehow I think he knows that someday, I'll be back in his neighborhood.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1928 real photo postcard view of the old Norfolk Downs railroad depot looking south with the end of Billings Road where the car is stopped on the left. The grade crossing shown here was a temporary road while the West Squantum Street bridge was being rebuilt. At the time, more than 150 trains a day passed through here. The city once had a plan to build a major east-west roadway through here, with an overpass over the tracks, connecting Adams Street in East Milton via Holbrook and Billings Road to Quincy Shore Drive near Fenno Street. Other than the tracks everything in this view is now gone. The Pneumatic Scale factory building on the right is now the site of a Super Stop and Shop and the depot in the center is on the site of a Chipotle Mexican restaurant. READERS FORUM

Does Not Support 20-Story Height Increase

Editor's Note: A copy of this letter written to Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro was submitted to The Quincy Sun for publication by the author.

Dear Doug,

I understand that the City Council will be taking up the matter of increasing the height limit to 20 stories as apart of the downtown development plans.

I am asking (you and the city council not to vote in favor. This is not the time and I believe there are several good reasons.

We need to see what is happening with the concourse, the present demolition of buildings for the concourse and the actual road construction, and how it is going work for us.

There will be at least one change in the make up of the city council with the retirement of Leo Kelly, and the new city council member or members should be able to have input into something that would take place when they are sitting on the city council.

The plan, as I understand it, puts the final say in Planning Dept. and not with the publicly elected city council. This means the final say is to be made by an appointee of whoever happens to be mayor at the time. The City Council would be powerless is decision making for a 20 story building in our downtown.

(This is a biggie for me.)

We do not exactly know where a proposed 20 story building would be at this time or the impact on our skyline and present day important landmarks, such as the Church of the Presidents.

We now have a 15 story height which will provide union jobs and work for many Quincy residents and with the construction of the new high school, BJ's, etc we are certainly showing signs of growth and progress.

Again, I urge you and all the councillors not to vote in favor (this coming Monday.)

Thank you..

Arline Goodman
31A Revere Rd.

Serving Our Country To Keep It Free

Those of us who fought and died, we know the reasons why.

We ask for what reason do you criticize our service to those who are alive. We the chosen few of many who served, would like to be alive; but know in war not all will survive.

There are different reasons why we ask you to realize why we rest in noble honor in graveyards. We are not desired by most who serve, but we know there is always a reason why we should.

We gave you freedom and the right to choose your way in life without being penalized, for your way of life.

We the sons and daughters are not bitter of our sacrifice because we shown our love for what this country stands for.

We are not perfect and maybe never will be but we love our families, countrymen and humanity; to do our duty for this country to keep us free.

Love of family, friends and patriotism to this country in which we lived. "To those of you who do not wish to serve;" what would happen if we let things be. If it weren't for the likes of me. To do our duty for freedom cause.

Tribute To Woodward School Founder

By FRANK McCAULEY

At a service of Commemoration and Thanksgiving in recognition of the Semi-Centennial (50th anniversary) of the opening of the Woodward Institute for Girls held on Sunday, May 21, in the First Parish Church of Quincy, high tribute was paid to Dr. Ebenezer Woodward, founder of the Woodward Institute, who died 75 years ago.

Rev. Charles A. Wing, minister of the First Parish Church and chairman of the board of directors of the Woodward School, was presiding officer for the anniversary services, which opened with an organ prelude by Mary McConarty Daley, followed by the processional hymn "Forward Through The Ages."

Dr. Woodward was born in Cambridgeport, MA, March 12, 1798. He graduated from Dartmouth College in 1817 and received his medical degree from Harvard University. He began the practice of medicine in 1823 and continued until his death in May 1869.

Dr. Woodward in his will established a trust fund for the purpose of founding a school for Quincy-born girls.

Woodward Institute opened on the corner of Hancock Street and Greenleaf Street on April 10, 1894 with 76 girls and seven teachers.

WOUNDED QUINCY OFFICER TELLS OF SALERNO HORROR

"This business of war is no glorious flag waving affair in which heroic American soldiers easily overcome the enemy to the cheers from their buddies, it is a sordid heart-breaking battle in which men see their own friends shot down or blown to bits beside them."

That is some of the picture of modern warfare given by Lt. John J. Wickham of 134 Wilson Ave., North Quincy, home after 15 months of active service on the Italian Front.

Wounded in action and hospitalized, Lt. Wickham is home on rotation leave. He participated in the bloody fight at Salerno and in part, the battle for Cassino.

"All the men want to do is get it over with and get back home and see their loved ones," Lt. Wickham said.

KEEPING UP WITH THE RED SOX

The Boston Red Sox finished a road stand on a high note with a doubleheader victory against the Chicago White Sox. The scores were 4-3 and 9-2. Red Sox pitcher Tex Hughson won his fourth game in the opener while Mike Ryba, in relief, got credit for the win in the nightcap. The Red Sox were in fifth place in the eight-team American League with a 14-15 record, four games behind the New York Yankees.

cent Great East Music Festival.

The groups performed in West Springfield and were judged based on specific music standards and criteria.

Both the NQHS Choir, under the direction of Timothy Carew, and the NQHS-QHS Band, under the direction of Richard Kenneally, received Gold Medals.

The NQHS Select Choir received the highest medal, The Platinum.

Musical 1776 Sunday At Adams National Historical Park

The Randolph Theatre Company will stage an encore production of its highly-acclaimed and entertaining rendition of the award-winning musical, 1776. Sunday, May 31 at 2 p.m. at the Adams National Historical Park, Quincy.

The musical, 1776, relates to the story of the contentious debate among the nation's founding fathers at the Second Continental Congress, a debate that culminated in the adoption of the Declaration of Independence in Philadelphia on the Fourth of July.

Under the direction of Constance Miller Clinton, with musical direction by Sandra Howley, a talented and patriotic "cast of historic characters" will bring this historic moment to life on the lawn at 181 Adams St. in Quincy.

Those attending the event should bring their own lawn chairs.

Admission is free and open to the public.

The National Park Service at the Adams NHP preserves, protects, and interprets the home of John Adams, one of the Revolutionary-era's most beloved "signers" of the Declaration of Independence, and his witty and outspoken wife, Abigail.

For more information, call the Visitor Center at 617-770-1175.

Conspiracy Theory In Pop Culture, Politics At Crane Library June 3

A free presentation by Gordon B. Arnold tracing the presence of conspiracy themes in popular culture over six turbulent decades of recent American history will take place Wednesday, June 3 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

In the 1950s, Hollywood turned out a wide range of movies that tapped into conspiratorial fears of the Cold War. The theme found its way into political thrillers, melodramas, science fiction tales, and allegories as different as I Was a Communist Spy for the FBI and Invasion of the Body Snatchers.

A few years later, the assassination of John F. Kennedy provoked a new wave of conspiracy-theorizing. Some people thought the president's murder echoed themes from the popular film The Manchurian Candidate, which was released only months earlier.

Arnold is professor of Liberal Arts at Montserrat College of Art in Beverly, where he has taught courses in film history and politics for many years. He is the author of "Conspiracy Theory in Film, Television, and Politics" and the "Afterlife of America's War in Vietnam."

For more information, call 617-376-1301.

'Doubt' Movie Free Screening Tonight

A free screening of the 2008 movie "Doubt" starring Meryl Streep and Philip Seymour Hoffman will be shown tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The film is set at St. Nicholas in the Bronx, 1964. A vibrant, charismatic priest, Fr. Flynn, is trying to uphold the school's strict customs, which have long been fiercely guarded by Sister Aloysius Beauvier, the iron-gloved principal who believes in the power of fear and discipline. The winds of political change are sweeping through the country, and, indeed, the school has just accepted its first black student, Donald Mioller.

But when Sister James, a hopeful innocent, shares with Sister Aloysius her suspicion that Father Flynn is paying too much personal attention to Donald, Sister Aloysius is galvanized to begin a crusade to both unearth the truth and to expunge Flynn from the school.

Now, without a shred of proof or evidence except her moral certainty, Sister Aloysius locks into a battle of wills with Fr. Flynn, a battle that threatens to tear apart the Church and school with devastating consequences.

The film, rated PG-13 for thematic material, was directed by John Patrick Shanley.

The screening is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

'Willy Wonka Jr.' At Beechwood School

More than 70 Beechwood Knoll Elementary School students will take the stage for "Willy Wonka Jr." to be presented at 7 p.m. June 12 and 2 p.m. June 13 at Eastern Nazarene College's Cove Auditorium.

Based on Roald Dahl's beloved children's book, Charlie and the Chocolate Factory, "Willy Wonka Jr." features songs from the popular movie "Willy Wonka & the Chocolate Factory" adapted for young performers.

The musical is the third production to be presented as part of the school's annual Beechwood on Broadway program.

Parent Rob Buttomer is directing the production in conjunction with ENC music professor and Beechwood parent Delvyn Case.

Admission is $5 per person. For tickets and more information, e-mail bks.tickets@yahoo.com.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Natalie's Whole Wheat/White Bread

On a recent game show, one of the questions was what is your favorite kind of aroma coming from a kitchen? And the top answer was the smell of bread baking.

My niece Natalie called me one day very excited about her recent recipe for baking bread. She uses a blend of both whole wheat and white flour with amazing results.

She said although the recipe is easy, it takes a little time to get it right, but well worth it.

Whole What/White Bread

1 package of dry yeast (use with 1/4 cup water and 1/4 teaspoon sugar)
3 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons salt
2 cups . milk
3 tablespoons butter
2 cups white flour
cooking spray
Preheat oven to 400 degrees

Follow the directions on the yeast package and let set for five minutes

In a bowl, add the sugar, salt and the wheat flour.

In a sauce pan, heat the milk and the butter until warm. Do not boil.

Using a hand mixer, add the liquid into the dry mixture and the yeast mixture also. Add in the white flour until it forms a dough. Knead the dough and shape into a ball. Use cooking spray and in a large bowl turn the dough over in the bowl so the ball is well greased. Cover and put in a warm place for about one hour.

After the dough has doubled in size, punch it down and pull in the sides. Cut into two pieces for two loaf pans, and place onto a floured surface. Leave for about 15 minutes.

Roll out the dough and roll into a loaf size pinching the ends to keep it closed. Put in a greased loaf pan with the seam down. Cover the pans and let it rise (for about two hours and she said it rose beautifully.)

Bake for 25 to 30 minutes. Take out of pans and let cool. Serve warm and. enjoy!

After reading a basic recipe for white bread, Natalie actually made the change by blending the two flours and was pleased with the outcome.

Raymondi Seeks Study Of Medical Response

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi is seeking a major study of the fire department's medical response and possible alternatives solutions.

While City Council hasn't discussed his proposal yet, the city's already getting payback from the resolve.

Raymondi said the city is saving $4,000 to $5,000 a year now after closing a loophole in medical response costs.

Raymondi filed a resolution seeking a committee to study the city's medical emergency response system on May 4. City Council President Jay Davis objected to the resolution which was re-introduced and sent to committee study on May 20.

Since that time, Acting Chief Joseph Barron and Peter Racicot, Senior Vice President, Fallon Ambulance reviewed the city's current contract and found an estimated $4,000 to $5,000 annual oversight.

According to Barron, city funds have been used to cover medical equipment used by firefighters when answering medical emergencies.

Under the city's contract with Fallon Ambulance, the company was responsible for purchasing or reimbursing the city for a number of items, such as gloves, oxygen and defibrillator.

However, those details fell by the wayside until Raymondi's resolution.

Barron said he and Racicot reviewed the contract details and "...had a very productive meeting. There seems to have been a miscommunication."

Barron believes the problem occurred when the city relinquished Quincy City Hospital in 1999 and the hospital was privatized.

"They agreed to pick up all the costs," Barron said of the Fallon's response to the misunderstanding.

While every dollar counts, Raymondi's resolution calls for a committee to study the fire department's medical response system with the goal of major compensation for the city.

"City employees at taxpayers' expense are acting as a referral service for the private ambulance company with no compensation from the company to the City of Quincy...."Raymondi said in his resolution.

Raymondi also wants a review of the number of ambulances regularly assigned to Quincy. He cited the population of the city and noted, "...often times, there are occasions whereby seven or eight ambulances are needed...."

As for Raymondi's resolution, Barron said he is "open to exploring alternatives," but he has been pleased with the training and professionalism of Fallon's staff.

Barron said he, previously, had first-hand knowledge of their competency as head of the response team. "I worked closely with the paramedics."

Salary Of $80,000 To $100,000 Seen Auditor's Post Will Be Re-Advertised

The Council's opening for an auditor will be re-advertised in The Boston Globe and the state registry, according to City Council President Jay Davis.

The city's official Salary Ordinance lists the position as starting at over $94,000, but Mayor Thomas Koch has not included the auditor's salary in his proposed 2010 budget.

City Council recently voted to reduce the qualifications for applicants from a master's degree to a bachelor's degree. In addition, the position no longer requires municipal finance experience, but allows similar experience.

Davis' search committee consisting of Councillor Michael McFarland and Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee reviewed the first round of candidates, but declined to name the applicants or the finalists.

After the interviews, Davis said that the candidates had not met the advertised qualifications and the council revised the requirements.

Councillor Joseph Finn recommended a salary of between $80,000 and $100,000 for the new hire, but councillors have not discussed changing the salary.

Koch, through his spokesman, said the budget does not include funding for the auditor because, "We are waiting for the Council to suggest the salary."

Former Auditor Rick Fitzpatrick submitted his resignation nearly a year ago to take a position with Norfolk County Agricultural School. Fitzpatrick filed his notice in June and left in mid-July.

Susan O'Connor has been Acting Auditor since Koch appointed her last August.

In October, the council voted to reorganize the city's finance department and described their plan for hiring an independent auditor or an auditing firm to review and analyze city spending and report to the council.

Anthony Boyle Becker Graduate

Anthony Boyle of Quincy recently graduated from Becker College with a bachelor of science in business administration, management degree.

MARILYN REISBERG of Quincy, at age 81, recently celebrated her Bas Mitzvah at Temple B'nai Shalom in Braintree May 2. Here she reads from the Torah.

Marilyn Reisberg Is Called To The Torah

Quincy's Marilyn Reisberg, at age 81, was called to the Torah at Temple B'nai Shalom in Braintree on May 2.

Bar or Bas Mitzvahs are usually held at age 13 to celebrate a boy or girl's "coming of age."

Marilyn recently joined Temple B'nai Shalom after the closing of her temple in Quincy. She grew up in a very orthodox home where women didn't actively participate in Temple services.

Now a member of Temple B'nai Shalom, she embraced the women's role in this conservative temple.

Marilyn celebrated her Bas Mitzvah with officiants Rabbi Milton Feierstein, Rabbi Van Lanckton and Chazzan Seth Grossman.

The congregation, as well as her tutor, Solomon Borocov, were proud of her hard work and wonderful reading of the Hebrew scripture.

This was also a unique opportunity for Temple B'nai Shalom to have a first-time Bas Mitzvah student Marilyn's age!

Lisa Tang Liu will exhibit her photographs of American landscapes, cowboys and rodeos from June 1 to June 29 in the Colletti Reading Room of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

A public reception will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. June 28.

Liu was educated at Wellesley College and New England School of Photography, and has exhibited her work in many solo, group and juried exhibitions.

She was the editorial winner of CitySearch Boston's Best Photographer Award for weddings and portraits in 2007.

Veterans' Flags Sought For Flag Day Parade June 13

Planning for the 58th Annual Flag Day Parade and Celebration on June 13 is in full swing, with coordinators now issuing their annual call for veterans' flags to be displayed during the long-time summer tradition in Quincy.

"Thanks to the Quincy Partnership and our city's corporate partners, we will be having the same wonderful community event we have every year despite the tough economy," said Mayor Thomas Koch, the Flag Day Committee Chairman for more than 15 years. "These are the events that make Quincy a truly special place to live, and I am looking forward to seeing everyone there."

Families of deceased veterans may drop off their flags at the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock Street in Wollaston. The memorial flags will be placed on the "Quincy Salutes Its Veterans," float in the procession.

Edward J. Keohane, chairman of the Quincy Partnership, one of the organizations sponsoring the parade, assures that all flags lent for display will be well cared for while in the parade committee's possession.

"The veterans' flag display allows us to honor the sacrifices of those who are no longer with us and reminds us that our freedom is a credit to their efforts," said Keohane.

The Flag Day Parade will step-off from Coddington Street in Quincy Center at 7 p.m. on Saturday, June 13 and will proceed down Hancock Street before turning down Merrymount Parkway and disbanding at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park.

The parade will be followed by a flag-raising ceremony at Pageant Field with an impressive 30-foot-by-60-foot version of Old Glory. A patriotic performance by the American Belles, a fly-over (weather permitting), and howitzer salute will highlight the evening's celebration leading up to a dazzling 30-minute fireworks display over Black's Creek.

current value at roughly $225,000,000 and said Meteketa Investment Group of Westwood has handled the investments.

The city has plenty of company in the losses. Masterson told Finance Committee members, noting that the state's pension fund suffered an even greater loss with a 29% hit. That percentage could equal to a $10 to $11 billion loss.

In addition, the Pension Benefit Guarantee Corp., which insures the pension plans of nearly 44 million Americans, has more than tripled its $11 billion deficit to $33.5 billion.

"Every market index was in decline," Masterson said, adding that a 25% loss in employee 401K's was the norm in the past year.

Masterson said that employee contributions to the city's fund are increasing with the number of new hires.

In the early 1970's, employees contributed as little as 5% of their salaries to the fund. Today, new employees must contribute 9% to the fund and 11% for all income over $30,000, according to Masterson.

Changes in the city's contribution to the pension fund will not be affected by the losses until 2012 after the fund's scheduled audit.

In the current budget, the city's retirement and pension contribution is $18,398,129. That will increase to $19,673,656 in 2010.

Masterson, Warren Sproul, Director of the Municipal Finance Department, and Steve McGrath, Human Resource Director, detailed revenue sources and debt obligations at last week's Finance Committee meeting.

Enjoying Life at Allerton House

THE ALLERTON WAY

Allerton House at Hancock Park, Quincy, MA
by Kelly Richards

Theresa Webber's children surprised her two years ago when they came to her Dorchester home and simply said that they wanted to take her somewhere. Webber says, "As it turned out, the final destination of our mystery ride was Allerton House at Hancock Park. After taking a tour and meeting some of the residents and staff, I knew I would love living here." She credits her daughter and three sons for doing their research, knowing her needs and personality, wanting to make life easier, and finding her a perfect home. "It was the first place I looked at," she says. "I didn't need to look any further."

Today, Webber's spacious one-bedroom apartment at Allerton House is decorated with lots of photographs of her children and grandchildren, as well as other personal possessions that she holds dear. "All of my furniture fit right in," says Webber. And my family is close by so I see them all the time. They especially like to come to the special events here. At the Christmas party, they saw me sitting on Santa's lap."

Prior to her move to Allerton House, Webber lived alone. With her children nearby, she could always count on them for help, but at age 82, she continued to carry out the day-to-day tasks that home ownership entails. She says, "I don't have to do anything now - no cooking, no cleaning, no paying the bills, no laundry. All of those things are done for me, and

Webber's engaging personality touches everyone she meets. "I believe we all just need to keep going and stay involved," she says. And stay involved she does. You may find her at the Bingo game at Allerton House three or four times a week, joining other residents on a road trip for lunch at a local restaurant, or socializing in the residence's elegant dining room. One of the first friends she made when she moved in now lives at Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group's skilled nursing center in Hingham, and Webber makes it a point to visit her often. "We both enjoy catching up during our visits."

According to Webber, one of the best things about living at Allerton House at Hancock Park is the opportunity to be around truly nice people. "I know everybody here," she says, and "everybody is wonderful. Moving here was the best thing!"

Olympic Gold Medalist, Pro Soccer Played Inducted Into Groundbreaker Hall Of Fame

Kristine Lilly Honored At Broad Meadows Middle School

Each year at Broad Meadows Middle School, grade 7 students research groundbreakers in a research project designed to help students discover individuals famous or unsung who courageously changed society for the better.

This year, Alyssa Lydon and Kayla McArdle, two grade seven students chose to research Kristine Lilly, a star soccer player and a pioneer of women's team sports. Amazingly, Kayla's and Alyssa's research project came alive when Kristine Lilly walked right into their classroom.

Legendary U.S. Olympic Gold Medalist Kristine Lilly was touched by emailed research questions she received from Alyssa and Kayla. Instead of answering the students' questions by email, Kristine Lilly suggested she could visit Broad Meadows and answer Kayla's and Alyssa's questions in person. On May 18, Kristine Lilly spent an hour giving answers to students and receiving a huge student honor.

Kristine Lilly was inducted into the class Groundbreaker Hall of Fame by: Kayla McArdle and Alyssa Lydon, grade 7 students at Broad Meadows Middle School for these reasons:

Kristine Lilly is the iron woman of soccer and a barrier breaker.

Kristine Lilly, sports pioneer, helped open a new Women's Professional Soccer League also known as WPS.

She had to overcome unfair treatment of women's team sports, lack of supporters, ignorance and media apathy.

Kristine Lilly said the new league will, "...give young girls their dream back."

Shoulder to shoulder with your teammates, you and they stood up for equal opportunities for girls' team sports at every level, even professional. Today, we stand on your shoulders. Now, all girls have a higher goal to shoot for.

Julie Bloomer and Brandi Isaacs, also in grade 7, introduced Kristine Lilly to the entire school in the auditorium by explaining the groundbreaker research project.

Brandi said, "We are honoring groundbreakers such as:

Today's Therese Murray, first female President of the State Senate;

Martha Coakley, Massachusetts' first female State Attorney General, and yesterday's Lowell Mill Girls and the female workers of the Lawrence cloth making mills, who stood up together in the 1900s and went out on strike in the famous "Bread and Roses" strike, which sent a message to everyone that women should be paid a fair wage, just like men. Women workers should be paid enough money to buy the necessities for their families such as "bread" but also be paid enough to have some nice things, too, like "roses" once in a while.

Julie added, "When we get jobs, we'll be standing on the shoulders of the Lowell Mill Girls and the Lawrence Bread and Roses strikers, and we'll be protected by laws that Therese Murray will vote to pass, the laws Martha Coakley enforces."

"In memory and in honor of those who came before us in Lowell and in Lawrence, we present this bread and these roses to you, Kristine, because girls need bread, roses and an equal opportunity to get whatever job they are qualified for, even pro athlete."

This year, we are also being honoring as groundbreakers these people: Barack Obama, Eunice KRISTINE LILLY accepts a student-made soccer ball biography from the students in Mrs. Catherine Carey's classroom.

Shriver, Anh "Joseph" Cao, Shirley Chisholm, Alice Paul, Manon Rheaume, parent Paula Morrisson, and neighbor Flo DiTullio Joyce. If you are counting, that makes 12 groundbreakers honored. Number 13 is Kristine Lilly!

Kristine Lilly then took the microphone and passed along this advice.

Kristine told the students: "One of the best moments of my 20 year soccer career came in 1999 when the U.S. Women's National Team won the World Cup. I was a member of that team. It was huge not only because we won the Cup, but because of what happened that summer."

"That summer the nation for the first time ever took an interest in our women's national team. Over 90,000 people came to see us play the final in the Rose Bowl. Over 40 million people watched us on TV that summer. Our team's play in that World Cup changed people's view on women's sports. A movement happened that summer. We women were seen not as female athletes but as athletes. I am proud to have played a role in that movement to elevate women's team sports."

Kristine Lilly explained to the packed auditorium: "A little background on how I came to visit your school today. Two of your classmates were researching groundbreakers in their Language Arts class. Other students were studying Barack Obama, Alice Paul, Martha Coakley, Ahn Cao, Jackie Robinson, but two girls chose me. It is quite an honor that Alyssa Lydon and Kayla McArdle feel I am one of the groundbreakers. There are so many who came before you, before me, who have made a difference such as Billie Jean King or Title IX which gives girls and boys equal opportunity in everything. I am a Title IX baby. I was born in 1971. Title IX legislation was passed in 1972. I am so grateful for Title IX. We're still fighting little battles here and there, but it is great to be a female in our society right now because there are so many opportunities not just on the athletic fields but everywhere. To be part of your Groundbreaker celebration today is truly humbling. I am grateful to be here today."

Alyssa Lydon asked this question: "Your high school soccer teams won 3 state championships. Your college, UNC, won four national championships, and we all know about your Gold Medals in the Olympics and World Cup Championships. So, what are the keys to winning?"

Kristine Lilly responded: "What jumps to mind is hard work. There is no substitute for hard work. When you work hard good things happen. You can't win every game, but you can work hard every game, every practice, every homework assignment, every class. If your friends or teammates are also working really hard, anything is possible, even a World Cup or an Olympic Gold Medal."

(note: the U.S. teams Kristine Lilly has played on have won two Olympic Gold Medals and two World Cups.)

Kristine added: "Always believe in your teammates, and in yourself and in others. Keep going. Never stop. When it gets tough, keep going."

When asked about nutrition and body image, Kristine Lilly responded: "Girls sometimes struggle with food. Society puts pressure on girls and their appearance. Girls sometimes feel judged by how thin they are, but it's important to feel good about yourself and to stay strong. You need three squares. Hydrate yourself. Food is your energy source. Don't worry about what others look like or do. Do what is best for you."

Kristine was asked about veteran leadership. She answered: "As a veteran player I talk to the younger players, show them how to be a professional on and off the field. I tell them when they are struggling a bit to focus on their strengths. Too many times people who are struggling focus on what they are not doing right. If you focus on your strengths, then you have some successes and your confidence level comes back up again. Finish your goals. Work together."

FIRE SAFETY

New Codes, Regulations

Here we go again! I just opened a packet of updated code and regulations from the State Fire Marshal and we're asked to enforce new changes once again. This time it will apply to all homes while immediately affecting those up for sale needing a smoke and carbon monoxide detector certificate from us. The new regulation will take effect on January 1, 2010 while this article will forewarn you of its coming.

I just wrote an article on the subject suggesting that we'd see more of this issue in the months to come. Little did I know how soon it would surface while months turning into days, literally. Here's what it's about.

Studies have shown that a photoelectric smoke detector is quicker to sense the larger, visible smoke particulates which are more prevalent in a slowly developing, smoldering fire such as that found in the incipient stages of a fire in upholstered furniture. This type of fire is more prevalent within a home, which is why a photoelectric smoke detector is preferred within a home. That being said, Massachusetts' regulations pertaining to smoke detectors as of January 1, 2010 will specify the need for photoelectric detectors within homes.

Ionization type of smoke detectors are historically more prevalent where they have been less expensive to purchase and make. They're easier to find as well. However, that same study has indicated that they are less effective against your more common residential fires, smoldering fires. Consequently, the State Fire Marshal's Office is now attempting to prompt households to comply with these newer findings, requiring the more effective photoelectric type.

This is how the regulation is written. There will be no grandfathering of existing conditions. Older homes, built prior to the need for hard-wired smoke detectors, will now require a battery operated photoelectric smoke detector when it is to be located within 20 feet of a kitchen or bathroom. Another wards, an ionization type of smoke detector can no longer be located within 20 feet of a bathroom or kitchen no matter how old the home. Outside of that 20 feet, let's say at the base of the cellar stairs, a combination photoelectric/ionization detector will be required and if not available, a separate photoelectric and an ionization type of detector is required. That's right; two detectors will be required under certain circumstances!

Here's hoping the technology for the combination type is available by then otherwise two separate detectors will be required in areas outside of the 20 feet. Here's hoping the manufacturers clearly mark the different types as well. At any rate, you heard it here first!

Remember, this change will apply to all homes while our inspections will initially be directed at homes under agreement for sale where a certificate from us is required. Meanwhile, come January, we will be here to guide you through these changes and answer any questions you may have. The Nicole's Law implementation went well, I believe this will do so as well.

Be safe!

Quincy Medical Center Recognizes Nurses With Awards, Scholarships

Quincy Medical Center (QMC) celebrated National Nurses Week with a host of educational and entertaining activities aimed at recognizing the contributions of QMC nurses, including a Nurses Appreciation Night ceremony at Furnace Brook Country Club on May 7. The highlight of the evening was the QMC Excellence in Nursing Award and the QMC Nurses Memorial Scholarships presentation.

Cristina Cronin, RN, of Brockton, received the Excellence in Nursing Award, which recognizes an individual's positive contributions toward patient care and to the hospital. Cronin is a nurse on the Progressive Care Unit. According to her colleagues, "Cristina's own personal standard of care is to give 150% to her patients. She is always willing to learn more and do more. Cristina is a wonderful advocate for both her patients and their families. She is soft spoken, caring and compassionate."

Also during the ceremony, four employees were awarded QMC Nurses Memorial Scholarships: Carol Miller, RN, and Greg Pitts, both of Quincy, Derek Collins of Weymouth and Pedre Jean, RN, of Brockton. The scholarships -- awarded in memory of Betty Pywell-Stone, RN, Pat Fitzgerald, RN, Bev Connell, RN, and Eileen Tinney, RN, four longtime QMC nurses who passed away recently -- are awarded through the Nurses' Appreciation Fund, which supports programs designed to recognize the compassionate care and expert skill of caregivers by providing professional development opportunities to further enhance the advanced nursing care at Quincy Medical Center. Applicants must be QMC employees currently matriculated into a nursing program.

Genes Have a Hand in Stone Formation

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I come from a family of six girls, and I am the youngest. My five sisters all have had gallstones and have had their gallbladders removed. Am I doomed to the same fate?

My sisters are large-bodied. I'm not. Could their weight have influenced gallstone formation? - E.H.

ANSWER: Family history of gallstones is a definite factor in the risk of coming down with stones. Your family proves the point. However, it's not the sole factor, so you're not doomed to having gallstones.

Obesity is a strong influence on stone formation. On that score, you're in a safe zone.

A high-calorie, high-fat diet disposes a person to gallstones.

Rapid weight loss is another factor that favors the development of stones. Cholesterol is the main constituent of most gallstones. Rapid weight loss mobilizes cholesterol from body storage depots, and that's why it can bring on gallstones.

Estrogen is another contributor to stones. It increases the uptake of cholesterol from food, and it increases the amount of cholesterol in bile. Bile is made by the liver. It aids in digesting fat. When bile becomes saturated with cholesterol, stones form.

You're home clear on most of the things that contribute to stone formation. You're not destined to be a victim.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Some time ago you had a recipe for a natural laxative. I cut it out and used it, and it worked. I stopped using it, but now I need it again and I can't find it. Would you please, please repeat it? I am in bad shape now. - R.K.

ANSWER: It's not my recipe. I got it from someone else.

You mix 2 cups of bran with 2 cups of applesauce and 1 cup of unsweetened prune juice. Bran is the stuff removed from grains during refining. It's great fiber. Fiber keeps undigested food moist as it moves through the digestive tract. You can buy bran in health-food stores.

Refrigerate the mixture, and take 2 or 3 tablespoons twice a day.

You can add any ingredient you want to this mixture to make it more to your liking -- fruits, nuts, raisins, whatever.

Constipation is endemic in countries where refined grains are in vogue. The booklet on this topic is a discussion of how best to deal with it. Readers can order a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue -- No. 504W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: What does "essential" in front of "hypertension" mean? My doctor writes it down as my diagnosis on every form I give him. I say I have high blood pressure, and that always does it for me. - J.T.

ANSWER: Essential hypertension is the common kind of hypertension -- high blood pressure. It means there is no other process going on that's raising blood pressure. "Secondary" hypertension indicates that blood pressure has risen because of some other illness, like an adrenal gland tumor.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Milton Hospital To Host Community Health Day Saturday

Milton Hospital, a clinical affiliate of Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center providing community-based health care, will host its second annual "Community Health Day" Saturday, May 30 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Highland parking lot and Highland lobby at the hospital, 1999 Reedsdale Rd.

The event will feature health screenings, giveaways, healthy food, and interactive exhibits.

The hospital will also open the doors to its brand new, state-of-the-art operating rooms.

The hospital's mission this year is to fully engage the community in health education through hands-on activities appealing to all ages. Those attending the event will get a behind-the-scenes look at the technology, processes and procedures that take place on a daily basis at a community hospital.

There will be interactive tours of Milton Hospital's newly expanded and remodeled facilities and equipment such as:

- The hospital's recently revamped operating rooms, emergency department, laboratory and endoscopy and radiology departments.

- An exhibit area featuring a tour of a Fallon Ambulance, blood drive, screenings and a look at the hospital's da Vinci surgical robot.

Other highlights include:

- Interactive exhibits around cardiac health, blood pressure, glucose levels, lung capacity, and physical fitness in the "Gallery of Health."

- Blood donation opportunities with the American Red Cross blood donation van.

DENTISTRY
for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

SMOKELESS NOT HARMLESS

A recent study shows that use of snuff and chewing tobacco by adolescent boys in this country has surged over the past few years. According to a report from the U.S. Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, there has been a 30 percent increase in the rate of smokeless tobacco use among boys aged 12-17 years over a recent five-year period. This finding is worrying on at least two important fronts: First, smokeless tobacco is as addictive as cigarettes and does not assist in weaning oneself from smoking. Second, using smokeless tobacco products increases the risk of oral cancer. Because dentists are usually the first to see signs of oral cancer, they have a stake in preventing it.

Up to a certain point, if you quit, your body can heal itself... but the longer you use spit tobacco, the bigger your risk of getting cancer. Don't let it be too late! Chewing tobacco and snuff can cause mouth and throat cancer. We will be happy to discuss any dental concerns you may have. Any time you have a question, please don't hesitate to ask. Good dentistry is more than excellent clinical skills and state-of-the-art equipment. We feel that mutual trust is also a factor in the success of your treatment. Our entire staff believes that open communication can help build this trust. Our office is located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule your next appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Chewing tobacco and snuff contain 28 cancer-causing agents.

A Job Well Done

On Saturday, May 10, at approximately 9:42 a.m., Officer David Levine was dispatched to the CVS Pharmacy in Wollaston on a report of two females trying to pass a false prescription.

Upon arrival, the officer spoke with the pharmacist, who said that the two females were no longer in the store but reasoned that they would come back because this was the third time the two had tried to do this. The pharmacist said one of the females used a Massachusetts Driver's license and claimed the person on the script is their sister and she does not have identification to pick it up. A check of the license number provided a Quincy address.

The pharmacist provided the two other scripts along with the one prescription from today. He also had the two other scripts used in March and April, which also had the same license number on them. This script was made out for a different name than the other two and all were for the drug "Adderall."

The pharmacist told the suspects to come back in an hour for the prescription. She then contacted the psychiatry office on the scripts and they confirmed the pad to be stolen and they had no patient by the name provided by the suspects. Officer Levine reviewed the videotape in order to recognize the suspects, then checked the immediate area, but the suspects were gone.

At approximately 10:21 a.m., Officer Levine returned to the CVS after the pharmacist called stating the two suspects had returned. Upon arrival, Officer Levine recognized the two females and asked for identification. When asked what they were doing, they both stated that they were picking up a prescription for one of their sisters.

The 31-year-old suspects, one from Quincy and the other from Kingston, were placed under arrest for "Uttering a False Prescription, Forgery and Larceny of Property Under $250." One of the suspects also had warrants.

Officer Levine then interviewed the office manager from the psychiatry office and learned that one of the suspects was a former employee and was terminated in the summer of 2008 and that she has written false prescriptions out of this office in the past. Copies of prescriptions and surveillance video were logged into evidence. Nice Work!

A JOB WELL DONE: On Friday, May 15, at approximately 6:40 p.m., Sergeant Joe Lencki and Officer Tom Gaeta Jr. were working the "Cops in the Shop" detail at the Rite Aid Pharmacy on Granite Street in a plain-clothes assignment. Sergeant Lencki conducted surveillance in the store while Officer Gaeta was outside monitoring the parking lot in an unmarked cruiser.

At this time, two males and a female entered the liquor section of the store. One of the males, suspect 1, went to the counter with a 1.32-gallon Heineken Keg of beer, made the purchase and then left with the other friends. Sergeant Lencki followed them out and watched as suspect 1 handed the keg of beer over to suspect 2, who then put it in the trunk of his vehicle. Suspect 1 then went to his own vehicle, which was parked on the other side of the parking lot.

Sergeant Lencki then walked up to suspect 2's car, identified himself as a police officer and asked him if he was 21 years old. Suspect 2 stated that he was and provided the officer with a Vermont Driver's License, showing he was 22. A check with the Registry indicated that the Vermont Registry of Vehicles had no record of the license.

Sergeant Lencki told suspect 2 that he would give him one chance to be straight with him and he would not charge him with the felony of having a fake license, at which point suspect 2 admitted that the license was fake. Suspect 2, a 19-year-old Rosindale resident, was placed under arrest for "Minor Transporting/carrying Alcohol."

Suspect 1, who was still in his car, stepped out and stated that he had purchased the alcohol and asked why suspect 2 was under arrest. Suspect 1 then said the keg of beer was for him and that he was only having suspect 2 transport it for him. When asked why he couldn't transport the beer himself, he did not answer. Based on this statement, suspect 1, a 25-year-old Quincy resident, was placed under arrest for "Selling/delivering Alcohol to a Minor."

Sergeant Lencki then interviewed the 21-year-old female, who said that the beer was actually for suspect 1. She was allowed to leave at this point. Nice Work!

Police Memorial Exercises June 7

The Quincy Police Mutual Aid Association announces the annual Police Memorial exercises will be conducted Sunday, June 7.

Commencing at 8:30 a.m., members of the Association, active and retired Quincy police officers, invited guests and dignitaries will assemble at the Quincy District Court, 1 Dennis Ryan Parkway, Quincy.

At 8:45 a.m., the contingent, led by the Quincy Police Department's Honor Guard and escort vehicles, will march from the courthouse to Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

At 9 a.m., at the cemetery, the traditional Sunday in June ceremony commemorating Police Memorial Sunday will take place. The public is invited and encouraged to attend.

During the memorial, the Association will remember its departed members and departed Quincy Police Crossing Guards. A wreath will be placed at the Police Memorial located in the cemetery opposite Quincy Police headquarters.

Mayor Tom Koch and Quincy Police Chief Paul Keenan will offer remarks.

Following the ceremony, a light collation will follow at the George F. Bryan Veterans of Foreign Wars Post Hall on Broad Street.

In the event of inclement weather, the memorial will take place at the Bryan Post Hall.

Memorial Day Observed At Snug Harbor School

MEMORIAL DAY was observed at the Snug Harbor Community School featuring a flag salute, patriotic songs and poems recited by students. A wreath was also placed at the Snug Harbor Veterans' Memorial which honors eight residents who paid the ultimate sacrifice serving and defending this country.

Flynn/Boston Realty Advisors Sell Hull Oceanfront Condos At Auction

Seven condominiums sold for $4.5 million at auction on Saturday, May 9, 2009. The sale of the luxury condominiums was marketed and coordinated by Flynn / Boston Realty Advisors LLC; a Northeast firm specializing in accelerated real estate marketing. Oceania is an upscale residential condominium building owned by Seven Hills LLC of Weymouth MA. The Residences at Oceania is located at One Longbeach Avenue in Hull Massachusetts.

"This was a great opportunity to purchase an oceanfront residence. Since Oceania sits high on Atlantic Hill, every unit offers commanding views of the ocean and the Boston skyline. When you combine that with unique architectural features and the overall quality of materials and construction you begin to understand the demand," said Auctioneer Dan Flynn

The Residences at Oceania consists of 16 newly constructed units. All units have two or three bedrooms-many units include office/dens. Units include high-end appliances, granite kitchen countertops, hardwood flooring, washer and dryer hook-ups, hot tubs and oversized glass showers in each master bath. Another notable feature are the large balconies overlooking stunning views.

Winning bids ranged from $530,000 for a 2,882 square foot unit to $875,000 for a 2,798 square foot pent-

SEVEN CONDOMINIUMS at The Residences at Oceania in Hull recently sold for $4.5 million at auction. The sale was marketed and coordinated by Flynn/Boston Realty Advisors, house unit with its own roof deck. These units previously listed for $1,225,000 and $1,425,000 respectively. One unit was designated to sell absolute, subject to no minimum bid or reserve price. That 2,338 square foot unit sold for $580,000. Bidders had to factor in a 5% buyers premium fee over their final bids.

The auction took place in one of the subject units with more than 100 people in attendance. There were over 25 registered bidders.

Like many other developers, the developer of Oceania opted to offer the condos as a means to accelerate the entire marketing process. The Accelerated Marketing method sells property within weeks rather than months or years. Oceania developers retained control, setting their own terms and minimum acceptable sales prices.

Already, Flynn/Boston Realty Advisors LLC have plans for similar auctions in several New England States. Interested parties should sign up for auction email notices at FlynnBRA.com. For more information, please call us at 617-479-9000, or visit us on the web at www.FlynnBRA.com

First-Time Homebuyer Tax Credit: 5 Essential Tips For New Buyers

(ARA) - With the revised first-time homebuyer federal income tax credit currently in effect, now is the perfect time to consider making that big purchase, your first home.

"Buying a home is one of the biggest financial commitments a person can make, but first-time homebuyers and qualified return buyers are in an ideal position to take advantage of unique opportunities in the market, such as low interest rates and the choice among an abundance of for sale homes," says Charlie Young, president and chief executive officer for ERA Real Estate.

But before you sign on the dotted line, ERA Real Estate, one of the world's leading residential franchise networks, offers some helpful tips to ease the transition into homeownership.

Learn about the first-time homebuyer federal income tax credit

If you are considering purchasing your first home, or have not owned for at least three years, learn the parameters of the temporary first-time homebuyer tax credit, which is one of 10 provisions of the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act signed into law on Feb. 17, 2009. According to FederalHousingTaxCredit.com -- a consumer Web site created by the National Association of Home Builders -- for those who qualify and purchase before Dec. 1, 2009, the bill provides a tax credit of up to $8,000, calculated at 10 percent of the purchase price. Unlike the previously available credit from 2008, the money does not have to be repaid, as long as the homebuyer does not resell the house for at least three years. "The tax credit can help make the American dream of homeownership a reality for potential buyers who previously could not afford the investment," says Young. He adds that potential homebuyers should consult with a professional tax advisor for full details on how the tax credit may benefit them.

Calculate What You Can Afford

Before you start searching for your new home, know what you can afford. According to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, your total monthly mortgage payment -- which includes principal, interest, taxes and insurance -- should be about 29 percent of your monthly gross income.

What you can afford is also based on, among other things, how large of a down payment you can make and how much money you can borrow. You can start estimating this figure by using an affordability or loan calculator found on the Internet. These calculators can help compute what may fit comfortably within your budget based on factors such as annual income, annual debts, interest rates and credit score. Though Internet calculators and statistics are good references, it is recommended that you consult a financial advisor to determine exactly how much you can afford.

Choose A Neighborhood

After you determine your home buying budget, think about where you want to live. Are you going to stay in your current neighborhood, or do you want to hit the open road and start fresh? No matter what, you should thoroughly research the demographics of the area. Some additional factors to consider are how far you will be from work and shopping -- and if you have children, do some careful research on schools.

Make A Wish List Of Needs And Wants

Early in the home-searching process, list your basic needs such as minimum square footage, number of bedrooms and bathrooms, location and of course, the price you can afford. Web sites of leading real estate brands should have guided property searches that allow you to choose one or more of these criteria. If there are features that you would love to have in your home, but could live without, put them on your "want" list. This includes things like a pool, big yard, extra bedroom, etc.

Work With An Experienced Real Estate Professional

Searching for and purchasing your first home is an exciting experience, but it can be overwhelming. To help each step in the home buying process run smoothly, consider working with a seasoned real estate professional. Choosing a professional who is knowledgeable in your local and national markets, has access to the newest listings, and can help you negotiate prices, will increase the chances of finding your dream home.

Three New Agents Join Century 21 Annex Realty

Phyllis Rudnick and Arthur Foley, Broker/owners of Century 21 Annex Realty, Inc. located in Quincy, announce three new agents have joined the company.

They are:

Eugene Grathwohl, Joseph McCarthy, and Sarah Kim.

Grathwohl, a Quincy resident, is an archeologist with a specialty in Egyptology. He also has worked as a writing consultant to appellate lawyers.

Grathwohl attended Trinity College in Cambridge, England where he received a Bachelor of Arts and Masters of Arts both in archeology. He graduated with first honors.

McCarthy has a Massachusetts Building license, and he has over 30 years in the construction industry. He is considered an expert in building single family homes.

Kim, also of Quincy, has a close connection to Century 21 Annex. Not only does she work for Annex, but she went to the Annex Real Estate School.

Besides being a real estate agent, Kim has a home staging and interior design business, which she plans to use with her real estate career. She has been in the interior design business for 10 years. She is bilingual, speaking English and Korean.

Painting: A Quick, Inexpensive Way To Update Your Home

(ARA) - In today's economy, more and more homeowners are looking for ways to spruce up their home without spending a lot of money, and there is no better way to change the look and feel of a room than painting.

But even if you are a first time painter, there's no need to worry. Just follow these simple tips from the experts and you'll end up with a room looking like it was painted by professionals.

"Preparation is 90 percent of the battle," says Lou Manfredini, Ace's 'Helpful Hardware Man.' "Before you pick-up the paintbrush, take a moment to look at the space you are working with and determine the tools you will need for the project. This will help insure you have the right supplies for the job and save you unnecessary trips to the hardware store."

Paint

Think picking the perfect color is all that matters when choosing paint? Think again. There are two main types of paint to choose from, oil-based and latex-based paints.

Oil-based paints go on thicker, so it's less likely that you will have to apply more than one coat. They are ideal for chalky surfaces or walls that already have several coats of paint on them.

Latex paints give off less of an odor, dry faster and retain color better than the oil variety. The majority of paints sold in the U.S. are latex-based as they have a higher gloss, are easier to touchup and are the perfect choice for wood, drywall, stucco or concrete.

Once you've selected the type of paint, you'll need to choose the level of gloss, which refers to how shiny the paint is.

High-gloss paints are ideal for high-traffic areas such as the kitchen, bathroom, railings, trim and windowsills because they provide a tough washable finish that is stain resistant. One drawback though is that they show surface imperfections, so make sure you take care when painting with high-gloss.

Semi-gloss is less stain-resistant, but is easier to work with, so use this type of paint on walls that see less traffic (and fewer dirty hands).

Eggshell paints are a little less glossy than semi-gloss, and are a good option for those who dislike having shiny walls.

Matte or flat finish is a perfect choice for ceilings and walls that see little to no traffic.

Finally, you'll need to know how much paint to get, which you can determine with a simple formula:

Measure the total footage around the perimeter and multiply by the wall height in feet.

From this subtract 20 square feet for each door and 14 square feet for each window.

Divide by 300.

The result is the number of gallons that you'll need to complete the job. There are also online calculators that can help you figure it out, like the one on AceHardware.com.

Tools

When purchasing paintbrushes and roller covers, try to buy the highest quality that you can afford as it really does make a difference. If you aren't sure what to buy, choose rollers for large spaces, traditional paintbrushes for smaller spaces and thin angled paintbrushes for corners and trim.

Paintbrushes and roller covers come in natural and synthetic materials. "Use a synthetic brush when you use latex paint since latex can make natural bristles frizzy," says Manfredini. "Natural brushes are best when used with oil-based finishes."

Get started

With the right paint and tools on hand, it's time to get to work. Push the furniture into the middle of the room and cover with a plastic tarp or old sheet. Next, put painter's tape along the borders of the space, such as the doors, windows and trim.

Paint in wide brush strokes and alternate the direction you paint to avoid stripes on the wall. In no time, you'll have a beautiful room to enjoy.

Go Green With These Simple Steps

Q: "Going green" seems to be the watchword everywhere, but I don't have a lot of money or home-improvement skills to make my house more environmentally friendly. Do you have any suggestions? - Gail in Denton, Texas

A: You don't have to install solar panels or wind turbines to make your home "green." "Green" living really starts with the individual, not the gadget.

Here are a few simple changes to household management you can make almost right away, with little or no monetary investment.

Toss the paper towels and use cotton or linen dishcloths. Linen costs more, but is lint-free and durable.

Turn the refrigerator's temperature dial up a notch, and clean the coils behind the fridge frequently. Most fridges cool just fine in the middle to upper-middle range, and will function more efficiently if the cooling coils are dust-free.

Turn off the lights -- an easy one, right? You also can gradually replace the old incandescent light bulbs with more expensive but longer-lasting compact fluorescent bulbs.

Store coffee in a thermos. American-style drip brew takes enough energy to begin with; then the coffee pot sits on an electric burner, baking the brew into a bitter sludge. Turn off the coffeemaker once the brew cycle is done.

Don't run water -- another easy one. If you don't own a dishwasher, fill the sink with hot, soapy water to wash dishes. If you don't have a double sink, fill a tub or bucket with hot water to rinse.

Wash clothes in cold or warm water only, and clean the dryer's lint filter after every load.

Drain your water heater twice a year to clear out mineral deposits and improve its energy efficiency.

Start a kitchen compost: toss vegetable scraps and eggshells into an old coffee can and carry out to a larger yard composter every couple of days.

Separate out recyclables, like bottles and cans. If your city doesn't have a recycling pickup program, many grocery stores have collection machines that give you a few cents back for each item.

Starting with the above, you can gradually build an eco-friendly home -- and save a little "green" on the side, if you know what I mean.

HOME TIP: Reducing water and electricity use is a great starting point to making eco-friendly changes to your home -- and you'll save a little cash, too.

137 Goals In Two Seasons

Quincy's Lauren Stille Piling Up Records, Honors At Franklin Pierce

By SEAN BRENNAN

Lauren Stille, a sophomore on the Franklin Pierce University (New Hampshire) women's lacrosse team, is rewriting the school's record book. Stille has been a dominant force on the field for the Franklin Pierce Ravens since the moment she stepped on campus two years ago after graduating from North Quincy High School in 2007.

In just two seasons playing college lacrosse, Stille, who stars at the attack position, has already scored 137 goals to go along with 26 assists. This past year she scored 64 goals, leading the All Northeast-10 Conference with a 4.00 goals per game average (an average that ranked fourth nationally), and her 64 goal in 2009 ranks second in the program's history just behind her school record 73 goals that she scored as a freshman.

Stille was awarded for her personal achievements this year by being selected to the All-Northeast-10 Conference's first-team, becoming just the second first-team All-Conference selection in Franklin Pierce women's lacrosse history.

For Stille, her lacrosse career began back in Quincy playing in youth leagues and later at NQHS.

"Frank Casper started lacrosse in Quincy and I was part of the first year playing youth lacrosse," Stille said about her lacrosse beginnings. "My freshman year of high school they started a team. The first year we were a club team and the last three years we were a varsity team."

"My junior year we made the tournament and won the Atlantic Coast League and I led the state in scoring with 87 goals. I started playing in sixth grade and played in tournaments. I used to play softball in the spring but I liked lacrosse better."

Her success on the lacrosse field in high school drew the interest of Franklin Pierce and after being recruited to play there, Stille made the decision to attend.

"I was recruited and when I looked at the school I liked it," Stille said. "They had a good program and they had my major (Management) so it was a good fit."

"My first year we only won three games, but this year we made the All-Northeast-10 Conference tournament. We lost to the number three seed Southern New Hampshire University in the first round, but we have a young team, mostly freshmen and sophomores, so our team should only get better in the future."

For Stille, college lacrosse takes up most of her time, but her academics achievement are also top notch. A Dean's List student at Franklin Pierce, Stille uses what she has learned on the lacrosse field to help her in the classroom, and vice versa.

"My college experience has been awesome," Stille

Win Over Pembroke Qualifies NQ For Tournament

Raiders Fight & Scratch Way Into Playoffs

By SEAN BRENNAN

Their road was filled with potholes, detours and wrong turns, but in the end, it reached its original destination, the Division I South Sectional softball tournament.

North Quincy, a team that at the halfway point of the 2009 schedule looked like a long-shot to make a second straight post-season appearance, finally secured its spot following a season-ending 12-7 victory over Pembroke High School on May 21 at Mitchell/McCoy Field.

The Raiders (like the rest of the DI South Sectional bracket) found out just where and when they would be playing on Tuesday evening after the MIAA released its pairings for the 2009 tournament. More than likely, at 10-10 overall, the Raiders will be playing in a preliminary round game today (Thursday), with the winner of that game advancing to play in the first-round.

"We really picked it up about halfway through the season," said first-year NQ head coach Kerry Ginty about her team's second-half surge. "The girls have been playing really well and we are looking to not just play in the tournament, but we are also looking to make waves and advance."

According to Ginty, her team's late-season push toward the playoffs came as a result of her senior class and the leadership and experience that this group of talented girls displayed down the stretch.

"It all came down to our seniors and the leadership that they all showed late in the year, when the team really needed them to step up," added Ginty. "Catherine O'Connell (batting over .500 on the year), Kathleen Lynch and Brittany Folkins all played real well for us and without them, and the rest of that class, we would not be where we are today."

"But we have been playing well all season. We have just struggled against some of the stronger teams in the Patriot League, a league that I think is one of the best in the area, but over the last few games our bats have heated up and our pitching has improved."

One change that Ginty made late in the year that seemed to uplift her team was moving Folkins (the team's star shortstop) onto the mound and moving junior pitcher Sammi Bonanni into the outfield. Junior Devon McKay took over Folkins' role at shortstop.

"Brittany has been pitching really well for us as of late," said Ginty. "All of sudden we started holding even the better teams to little runs and it has allowed us to be competitive in games and pull out some wins."

"Sammi plays a solid outfield, so that has helped our defense there, and Devon has not missed a beat taking over at shortstop. These moves are working out."

Another quality of her team that Ginty has enjoyed watching develop is the ability her players have to fight and battle during every at-bat, in the field and in practice. She attributes this attitude to the quality of female student/athletes North Quincy High School has developed over the last few years.

"All of these girls play at least two sports," she said. "They are all great athletes, be it playing softball, soccer, basketball or volleyball, and they are confident in their ability to be winners."

"The school has produced some good female athletes over the years and this team is filled with them. They refuse to lose."

The Raiders earned their spot in the Division I South Sectionals following a 12-7 win over Pembroke, and in the deciding game, it was a freshman, Emma Ainsley that was the number one star.

Ainsley finished four-for-four with two RBI, including a solo homerun. O'Connell also continued her hot second-half batting by going four-for-four with two RBI. Bonanni, who looks to be fitting in nicely in the outfield, had two RBI.

"It was a big, big win, not just because it qualified us, but because we continue to play well against good team," Ginty said. "We now expect to be in every game and I think the tough road we took to get here is going to prepare us to play in the tournament."

Wins Over Scituate & North Quincy Secure Post-Season Spot Presidents Earn Second Straight Tournament Appearance

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy Presidents, an early season favorite to challenge for the Patriot League's Keenan Division championship, have finally secured a second straight appearance in the Division I South Sectional softball tournament, which will kick off today (Thursday).

The team's clinching game came last Tuesday (May 19) in a contest against city rival North Quincy High School, a 6-4 victory, which had followed an extra-inning 2-1 win over Scituate High School on May 18.

Quincy had needed to win two-out-of-four games last week and took care of its business in the first two games on the schedule; the Presidents dropped a 3-2 decision to Duxbury High School on May 20 and played a non-league game against Stoughton on May 21 (a 4-3 loss).

With the 6-4 win over the Red Raiders, Quincy will now wait-and-see where they are seeded in the DI field and if they either have to play a preliminary round game (play-in game), will need to travel on the road to play in the first-round or luck out and get to host a first-round game at Mitchell/McCoy Field. The latter scenario seems the most unlikely.

But at this point, the Presidents are just excited about having another chance to play in the second season.

"We have struggled all season to be consistent," said Quincy head coach Mike Sedar. "But we finally got in and now it is a whole new season. We knew coming in, because we are so young, that it would take some work, but the girls took care of business when they needed to the most."

Against North Quincy, a team that beat Quincy 6-5 back in April, the Presidents were lackluster throughout the early frames, but after a team discussion on the bench and a spirited speech from sophomore hurler Kori Sorensen urging her team to pick it up, Quincy responded.

Freshman Katy Lowry finished the game 3-for-4 with three RBI and junior catcher Olivia Berry contributed to the offense with three hits and a RBI.

Sorensen finished the game with seven strikeouts and only two runs allowed.

"We were really sluggish at the start of the game," said Sedar. "But we held a team meeting and Kori really stepped up and urged the team to get fired up and from that point on we started hitting and took control."

"I need to give North Quincy credit. They went down but made a comeback late in the game, but we stemmed the tide and picked up the win and earned our post-season spot."

Although Quincy will not start the South Sectionals as favorites, possible opponents should not take this team lightly. Sorensen, who is one of the more dominant pitchers in Division I South, will bring all-star stats into that first post-season game. She is on pace to finish the regular season with about 150 strikeouts and a 1.40 ERA. And if the offense can feed off her emotions on the hill, the Presidents could surprise the field.

"Whenever Kori is pitching we have a chance. She always keeps us within reach," Sedar said. "This is still a very young team (one senior) and we are still learning how to play with each other, but they play hard and leave it all on the field."

"Our record does not really show how good we are. I believe there have been at least eight games where we lost in the last two innings. If we can stop having that one bad inning we could go far."

Notes: The MIAA seeded the Division I field on Tuesday afternoon. The Presidents will travel to Silver Lake Regional High School today (Thursday) to play a preliminary round game at 3:30 p.m.

1st Division Title In Over 25+ Years

North Quincy Wins Fisher Division Championship

By SEAN BRENNAN

It was a banner day for the North Quincy Red Raiders last Wednesday night (May 20) at Adams Field. Following an 11-0 thrashing of Hanover High School, North Quincy (16-6 overall) won the Patriot League's Fisher Division championship (the league is split into two divisions: Keenan and Fisher), just one season removed from finishing at 9-11 overall.

According to NQ head coach John Fidalgo and the Quincy Public School Athletic Department's record books, this division title is the first for any Red Raiders baseball team in 25-plus seasons. The team, which wrapped up its regular season last Friday in a non-league game against Weymouth High School (an 11-1 win), earned a first-round bye in the state playoffs.

The Raiders will host the winner of the Walpole/Norwood game on Saturday at 2 p.m. at Adams Field.

"This team has worked so hard to get ready for this moment," said Fidalgo about his team's somewhat surprising run to the division crown. "A lot of teams preach hard work, but this team took it to heart and accomplished something that no North Quincy has done in a long time."

"We have been playing good ball all year and it all starts with our starting pitching, defense and timely offense. These kids were excited and with all their hard work, they got what they deserved."

In the Fisher Division clinching game against Hanover, the Raiders received 17 hits from nine different players and junior Ryan Louis pitched a complete game, striking out five batters.

At the plate, Matt Rodriguez (two hits, RBI), John Ainsley (two hits, RBI), Collin Ryan (three hits), Danny Russell (two hits), Ben Leahy (hit, two RBI) and Louis (three hits, two RBI) led the offense.

"We came into this game knowing that a win would clinch the division title, and Ryan kept the game scoreless through the first two innings," Fidalgo said. "Once we relaxed and got into the flow of the game, the offense really picked up. Our bats got hot in the second and third innings and the rest of the game was ours."

"As a coaching staff, you can only put the team in the best position to succeed, but it is the kids who play the games. They have been solid all year getting the job done and today was no different."

Raiders Knock Off Presidents In First Round Match

Last Thursday at North Quincy High School, the Red Raiders faced a well-known opponent in the Quincy High School Presidents in the first-round of the Division I South Sectional boys' volleyball state tournament, and came away with an impressive 3-0 match victory.

North Quincy won the first game 25-18, the second game 25-12 and the third game 25-22.

The Red Raiders, seeded sixth in the DI field, was scheduled to play third-seeded Newton North High School Tuesday night in the second round of the tournament.

For the Raiders, senior outside hitter Simon Yeung, the South Alliance League's Most Valuable Player (MVP), was the driving force to victory in the first-round win. Yeung finished with 18 kills. Senior setter Andy Ng (30 assists) and senior libero Mark Thatch (20 digs and 32 service points) also were productive against Quincy.

Other Raiders playing well included, role players, seniors Vince Kwan (five kills, two blocks), Raymond Fang (seven kills, ten digs) and Kevin Pacheco (seven kills, four blocks).

"We looked fantastic," said NQ head coach Jason Cai. "We made very few errors and that was the key for us."

"It is uplifting when those guys (the role players) step up and play well. It's motivating if one person does well, then everybody does well."

With the win, North Quincy improved its 2009 record to 12-5 overall.

For Quincy against North, senior setter Ken Tran finished with 26 assists (he closed out his high school career with 2,004 assists) and freshman libero Tim McNally added 21 digs.

The Presidents finished the 2009 campaign with a 7-8 overall record.

post-season spot since 2002 already secured (that happened two weeks ago) and a division championship in the books, North can now prepare for the one-and-done Division 1 South Sectionals, which is scheduled to start today (Thursday). The tournament will be new to everyone involved with the 2009 Red Raiders, but Fidalgo (now 24-17 in two seasons as manager) believes his team can carry over the confidence gained from their strong regular season into the post-season.

"The playoffs are going to be different. The first-round games go from seven innings to nine innings and we are going to prepare mentally for that and I think that will be the biggest difference for our team moving forward.

"But we are confident that if we continue to play our game we should be fine."

For the moment, Fidalgo and his team are going to enjoy what they have already accomplished. The season has been a success no matter what happens over the next two weeks.

"Everyone is really excited about seeing that division championship banner hung in the gym," Fidalgo added. "No matter how it plays out, this will be a season that will be remembered. These kids will be able to come back in 30 or 40 years and know that that banner is theirs. It is exciting for us, for the North Quincy baseball program and for the school."

Notes: Seniors Joe Edg-

ery (pitcher), Matt Jay (OF) and Matt Rodriguez (catcher) and juniors Ryan Louis (P/3B) and John Ainsley (2B) were all selected to the 2009 Patriot League All-Star team... All five played on Tuesday night at Rockland Stadium in the Patriot League's annual all-star game... The team's 16-6 record is the best in program history, according to team historian George Wagner... The Fisher Division championship is the first for a NQ team since 1975... With 16 wins, North is just one win away from tying the program's all-time record for wins in a season (17) set by the 1998 team that went to the semifinals of the state tournament. That team was coached by current Curry College head coach David Perdios.

Bill Dunn, Jr. Memorial Road Race June 27

The Bill Dunn, Jr. Memorial Road Race will be held Saturday, June 27 in Houghs Neck. This event is a great time for friends and family of Bill Dunn, Jr. to gather in honor of his life and share memories with each other.

This is the third year that the road race is being held and each year the support and participation is remarkable.

Registration for the annual event will begin at 7 a.m. at the St. Thomas Aquinas Hall on Darrow Street in Quincy. Those interested can participate in a five-mile run or a two-mile walk, beginning at 9 a.m.

Prizes will be awarded for the first place male female runner and the first Houghs Neck resident (male female). The first 600 people to register will receive a free race t-shirt.

Following the road race, a barbeque will be held courtesy of local donations. There will be a DJ and a 50/50 raffle, and the race committee will be giving away a scholarship the day of the race.

Proceeds from this year's race will benefit the Bill

Dunn, Jr. Memorial Scholarship, which provides scholarships to Quincy High School students, and also other local organizations.

Day-of-race registration is $20, however, for those that sign up before June 15, the registration fee is $15. Registration forms are available at www.RememberB.com and can be mailed to: Bill Dunn Jr Memorial Road Race, 105 Edgewater Drive, Quincy, MA 02169.

For more information contact Margaret Dunn at 617-471-9075.

Quincy/North Quincy Track Team Updates

The Quincy/North Quincy girls track team recently finished in third place, just a half-point behind Whitman-Hanson High School, at the Patriot League Championship meet held at Silver Lake Regional High School in Kingston.

Quincy/North had several athletes score points for the team at the league championship and among them were Alyssa Mullen and Jess Davis (first and third place in the two-mile), Erica Brady and Mary Schwartz (second and third place in the one-mile), Amber Jones (third in the 200-meters), Alice Luu, Talia Hampton, Amber Jones and Jess Howlett (third place in the 4 x 100-relay race), Erin Collins (sixth place in the shot put) and Julie Lynch (third in the javelin).

The team also participated in the Last Chance Invitational, held May 23 at Notre Dame Academy in Hingham, and Amber Jones won the 200-meters in a time of 27.02, just out leaping two Pembroke High School runners. Pembroke is the defending Class D Outdoor champion.

Jess Davis qualified for states in the two-mile with a running time of 12:24.2, finishing in second place. Julie Lynch took second place in the javelin and Mary Schwartz ran her best time in the one-mile with a 5:43.

Rachel Kananof finished the one-mile in a time of 6:37 and Sarah Gardiner closed out her season with a personal best time of 13:17 in the two-mile.

Quincy/North Quincy will travel to Andover this weekend for the Division I Eastern Mass Championships. Talia Jones will run in the 100-meters, Amber Jones will run the 200-meters, Erica Brady will run the one-mile, Alyssa Mullen and Jess Davis will run in the two-mile event and Julie Lynch will throw the javelin.

The 400-meter relay team of Alice Luu, Hampton, Jones and Jess Howlett will also compete in the DI States.

For the boys team, Matt McGroarty will run the one-mile and Jeff Pereira will run the 110-meters hurdles and compete in the long jump.

said. "Lacrosse is a lot of work, and I have had to juggle my academics around it, but everything is going well right now. I know that I have to practice hard and study just as hard. But it has been fun."

Scoring 137 goals in two seasons takes talent. Stille, who was the focal point of her team's offense as a freshman, is always looking to improve her game, and part of that improvement comes from her teammates and the way her team has gotten better the last two seasons.

"My first year there was only two girls, including myself who scored, and this year we had more depth and that is why we were a better team," Stille said about her team's recent success. "My best attribute is scoring. I have speed and I can finish around the net. If I have ten shots I usually score on seven of them. I am a finisher."

"Playing attack, I have to also play defense in the mid-field and I have been getting better at that each season. We start playing fall ball in September and the regular season starts in the middle of March. It is a lot of work, but it is worth it."

This past season, Stille played a major role in getting her team into the All-Northeast-10 Women's Lacrosse Championships. Besides her 64 goals, she led Franklin Pierce to a 4-6-league record and a 7-8 overall mark. Her best game came against Norwich University in a non-league game back in early April.

Stille scored six goals and matched a program-record with three assists, finishing an 18-12 win with nine points. Her single game assist mark was the second time this season she has done that and the third time in her two-year career. Stille set a career assist mark with 26 in 27 games played and moved into second place on the Ravens all-time scoring list with 115 (she is currently 14 goals away from tying the school goal-scoring record of 151 held by Courtney Boardman).

"I love playing lacrosse and this year was fun because the team was so successful," Stille said. "But college lacrosse is a lot of work, so it was nice to have both team and individual success."

Lauren Stille is not the only Stille playing a major role on the FPU lacrosse team. Her younger sister, Mary Kate, just wrapped up her first year playing for the Ravens and her success (13 goals and six assists playing at midfield) makes her older sister proud and excited about her team's future prospects.

"I am a year older than her and we have played all sports together," Stille said about her younger sister. "She plays midfield and runs the whole field. We fight as sisters (laugh), but we never bring that to the field."

"Because we played together all throughout high school, we know when to feed the ball and when to look for another option. We are definitely better when we play together."

With two more seasons to go at her collegiate career, Lauren Stille has many goals she hopes to achieve. Among them are becoming the school's leading goal scorer, earning All-American honors, and helping her team go farther in the college tourney.

"I think I am about 15 goals away from being the school's all-time goal scorer and I have already broken the assist-record and scored my 100th goal early this season."

"Last year I was awarded the Northeast-10 Rookie of the Year and this year I made the first-team. But I still need to work on using my left-hand. I am right-handed and people tell me if I work on going left I could be unstoppable."

"So, there are still aspects of my game that need work. That is what I will be looking to improve on over the summer."

Scenes From The 2009 Quincy Senior Olympics

Sponsored By Quincy Recreation Department, Quincy Council On Aging

Go hard in practice. Be tough. Win every ball.

"As a player on a team know your role. Every role is important and equal. When every team member is working together, pressuring, attacking, defending, and each individual team member is fulfilling their role, it makes a difference and makes winning the match possible. Doing things to get somewhere yourself, like appearing on Sports Center on ESPN, does not help your team. It should be all about the team. Doing things for the team makes the team more successful."

On the new league she is helping to establish, Kristine Lilly explained: "The Boston Breakers women's professional soccer team is back. The Boston Breakers are another groundbreaking event for women in sports. Our first season began in April. The Breakers really appreciate your support. I know 34 of you were at the Breakers' game last night. I'm still pretty sore from that game, but I'm so glad to be here with you today representing the Boston Breakers and the entire WPS (Women's Professional Soccer League). Women's professional soccer is here, and it is great to be a part of it.

On winning a Gold Medal at the Olympics, Lilly related this story: "I stand here today as an example of what you one day can be. Whether you love baseball, dance or writing, go for it. Set your goals high. Try your best to fulfill those goals. Work hard. Work with others on that goal. You will end up in a better place. I did. I wanted to be a baseball player and a gymnast winning an Olympic Gold Medal. However, I couldn't do a back walkover or make a baseball team. That didn't work out, but I found I loved sports. Then I found soccer, and after tons of hard work and believing in my teammates and in myself, I won Olympic Gold, twice. Always believe. Surround yourself with people who believe in you. You have teachers here and a Principal who believe in you. Believe in yourself. When you have all of that, all together, it is a powerful and amazing thing. It starts now, in these grades."

Before leaving, Kristine Lilly huddled the students together, like she and her teammates do before every game. Kristine explained the Boston Breakers' ritual of each player shouting out encouraging words in that huddle, things like 'Win every ball,' or 'Never give in.' Kristine then challenged the Broad Meadows Middle School students in the classroom to put their hands in to the middle of the huddle and shout out encouraging words about their school work. Students shouted out, 'Help each other study,' and 'Always ask questions.' Then Kristine showed the kids how the Breakers break their huddle: "One, two, three, Go Meadows!" Together, academic achievement is possible with the right amount of self motivation, hard work, encouragement, support and teamwork. That is what Kristine Lilly taught the Broad Meadows students about the keys to success.

Lilly added, "I'm so fortunate to a part of making way for a women's pro soccer league, to be a player in the league and to make a living playing soccer. It's my job, and I work hard for that, and every day I want to be better. Think about that. Work hard every day for your goals. Try to be better every day. You can get there if you believe. Always believe.

"I always dreamed of being an Olympian. To finally get there, for our U.S. soccer team to finally win gold, to stand with your teammates on that highest podium and to see the U.S. flag raised and to hear the National Anthem played for your team was one of those moments you will never forget. To this day when I hear the National Anthem played, it plays differently in my mind because of that one Olympic medal moment."

When asked about community service, Kristine Lilly said: "I teamed up three years ago to help the Special Olympics. It's a great organization. Sports has given me so much, I'm happy to give back."

On her future goals, Kristine Lilly quickly listed two. "Do I have any dreams unfulfilled? I'd like to play for the U.S. national team again. I'd also someday like to teach kids about the game. Those are two goals I have for the future."

The Broad Meadows students were praised by Lilly for their work researching and reporting, but also for their hospitality. Lilly said, "I go to a lot of schools, I do a lot of presentations, and this has been probably the most special day I've had. It's was the best assembly I've been part of. Plus, I got my own reserved parking space, food, a school locker (number 13), and induction into your school's Ground-breaker Hall of Fame."

W. Richard Smith Memorial Concert June 7 At Covenant Congregational Church

The fifth annual W. Richard Smith Memorial Concert will be held Sunday, June 7 at 4 p.m. at Covenant Congregational Church, 315 Whitwell St., Quincy Center.

This year's concert theme is "Celebrating Quincy Musicians."

Each of the performers regularly share their musical talents with the Quincy community. They include: Sue Bill, violinist; Lambert Brandes, organist at Wollaston Church of the Nazarene; Alan Thomas, organist at First Presbyterian Church of Quincy; Rock Whiting, organist at Faith Lutheran Church of Quincy; and Christine Fahey, pianist at Covenant Congregational Church.

"Quincy is blessed with many wonderful musicians in our churches and this year we made the decision to highlight some of them in this special way," said Rev. Karen Palmatier, pastor of Covenant Church.

The annual concert is named for a much loved former choir director and organist of the Covenant Church.

The concert is free and a reception will follow the concert.

Call the church at 617-479-5728 for more information.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

Thank God for memory, that most gracious artist, who softens the hard things in our life, and makes more beautiful the beautiful ones.

As we grow older memory becomes a treasure storehouse. The high lights of our years are there... vivid pictures of beauties appreciated. The heart-warming reminiscences of friends we've known... The tender thoughts of family and events that have happened... The satisfaction of recalling work well done... The feeling that we have meant something to those who meant so much to us... highlights stored in memory's treasure house to be recalled at will to encourage and sustain us whenever we need them...

"Memory is a capricious and arbitrary created. You never can tell what pebble she will pick up from the shore of life to keep among her treasures, or what inconspicuous flower of the field she will preserve as the symbol of 'thoughts that do often lie too deep for tears'..." And yet I do not doubt that the most important things are always the best remembered - Henry Van Dyke

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) An unexpected development could change the Arian's perspective on a potential investment. Keep an open mind. Ignore the double talk and act only on the facts.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A surge of support helps you keep your long-standing commitment to colleagues who rely on you for guidance. Ignore any attempts to get you to ease up on your efforts.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Family continues to be the dominant factor, but career matters also take on new importance. You might even be able to combine elements of the two in some surprising, productive way.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A realistic view of a workplace or personal situation helps you deal with it more constructively once you know where the truth lies. Reserve the weekend for someone special.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) As much as you Leos or Leonas might be intrigued by the "sunny" prospects touted for a potential investment, be careful that you don't allow the glare to blind you to its essential details.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A friend's problem brings out the Virgo's nurturing nature in full force. However, don't go it alone. Allow others to pitch in and help share the responsibilities you've assumed.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A business decision might need to be put off until a colleague's personal matter is resolved. Use this time to work on another business matter that you've been anxious to get to.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Relationships (personal or professional) might appear to be stalled because of details that keep cropping up and that need tending to. Be patient. A path begins to clear soon.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A promotion could cause resentment among envious colleagues. But others recognize how hard you worked to earn it, and will be there to support you if you need them.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Handling a delicate personal matter needs both your wisdom and your warmth. Expect some setbacks, but stay with it. The outcome will more than justify your efforts.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Resist the temptation to cut corners just because time is short. Best to move ahead step by step so you don't overlook anything that might later create time-wasting complications.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Use the good will you recently earned with that well-received project to pitch your ideas for a new project. Expect some tough competition, though, from an unlikely source.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your love of family extends beyond your personal life to include others to whom you generously extend your care and affection.

city's history, we took people to Small Claims Court," Sproul said, referring to four cases currently in litigation.

In addition, Sproul said the city is considering using debt collectors for bills after 90 days. Collection agencies don't even bother with letters, according to Sproul who said they get action because they, immediately, "put a mark on someone's credit history."

"Let's deal with it," Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond said. "We never seem to address the problem."

"I'd like to know who's stifling the city," Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis said.

Sproul offered to e-mail his department's 1300 pages of documents detailing the debtors' names and accounts to councillors but there were no takers.

In the past, one significant area of concern has been the police detail account which has been as high as $900,000.

Police Details

At this time, the police detail account includes a deficit of $464,000 accumulated over years, but Sproul and Police Chief Paul Keenan said new policies are addressing and reducing the debt.

"We've got the uncollected debt down," Keenan said after the meeting, noting that debtors can not get their building permits or liquor licenses renewed.

Keenan credited new policies instituted by Sproul with reducing the balances and preventing new deficits.

Police officers are, also, aware of the issue. Keenan said that officers on duty have a list of debtors. "We don't provide details to those people on the list."

In addition, police details will be billed through the central billing office in an effort to avoid future deficits.

"Next week, we're going to convert all police detail billing over to the city," said Sproul who said that $111,251 of the total deficit is uncollectible, due to bankruptcies or company closures.

At this time, Sproul's goal is to collect $353,660 of the nearly $460,000 in unpaid bills for police patrols.

Sproul, also, provided the Finance Committee with an overview of the city's debt and anticipated revenues and announced that Moody has set the city's bond rating at A1 and the city's S&P bond rating is A+.

Currently, the city has $46 million in short-term borrowing at a rate of ¾ of one percent.

Finance Committee Chairman John Keenan has repeatedly noted that total debt will change when the school building bonds are executed in 2011.

"Around 5% of our budget is indebtedness," said Sproul who reported that 2010 will be the last year for the teacher pay deferral, but there are still 10 years left on the bill for the Quincy Medical Center.

Sproul also estimated that local receipts are down in several areas, including some $500,000 in motor vehicle excise revenues. "People are not buying new cars," he pointed out.

"We're beginning to see a shortfall now," Sproul said, noting the real estate and personal property revenues are running at 93% and 94% of projections and even the legislative remedies may not halt the decline in revenues.

While the state legislature appears willing to allow new motel, hotel and meals taxes, Sproul suggested that these areas might, also, be pinched in the down economy.

On the plus side, the city will experience a new revenue stream as taxes are allowed on business cell phones and income from PILOT programs has doubled. These are funds provided by non-profit entities in lieu of taxes.

TAPS IS PLAYED by bugler Donald Murphy at Quincy's Memorial Day ceremonies Monday at Mount Wollaston Cemetery. Taps was played after reading the roll call of deceased veterans.

Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Noble

CARRYING A MEMORIAL DAY message of their own are Tricia Farulla and her mother, Lucy. The Wollaston residents were among those attending the city's Memorial Day ceremonies at Mount Wollaston Cemetery. The family has three members serving in the military.

Memorial Day Message: 'They Gave Their Tomorrows, For Our Today's'

the address he gave Monday:

Memorial Day in our Country means different things to different people. To some folks, it simply means that they will get Monday off and don't have to work.

For others, it will be a time of reflection, as they remember those in their own immediate families whom they lost during times of war. It is a time for us to remember.

Too many of us do not remember very well. Memorial Day is not just about picnics and ballgames. It's about brave Soldiers, Sailors, Marines, Fliers. Military personnel who died protecting their country and what it stood for. They died defending a way of life that they felt was worth dying for. . . families, children, freedom, morality, values, and responsibility.

We come to Honor these brave Women and Men who were willing to give their lives for others. In the Gospel of John chapter 15: verse 13 states: Greater love has no man than this, that a person lay down their life for their friend. Too often I feel we do not observe Memorial Day as it should be, a day where we actively remember our ancestors, our family members, our loved ones, our neighbors, and our friend who have given the ultimate sacrifice.

We can do this by visiting cemeteries and placing flags or flowers on the graves of our fallen heroes.

By visiting memorials. By flying the U.S. flags.

By renewing and remembering to pledge aid to widows, widowers, and orphans of our fallen dead and to aid our disabled veterans.

On May 5, 1866, veterans and residents of Waterloo, N.Y., placed flowers on the graves at each of the town's cemeteries to honor the local Soldiers and Sailors who had fallen during the Civil War. Proposed by a local pharmacist, Henry C. Welles; this act of remembrance centered on his belief that while praising the living veterans of the Civil War. It was equally important to remember the patriotic dead. This tradition has grown for a century and a half - it is Memorial Day.

On this Memorial Day, America is at war. Answering the call. America's military is fighting in Afghanistan and Iraq with much courage and honor. Our defense of Liberty adds to the rolls of the fallen. We pause on Memorial Day to honor all generation of brave Americans who made the ultimate sacrifice so that others can live free.

To the Families of the fallen my heart goes out to you, yours is a difficult burden. And we stand with you and lift you in prayer not only today but throughout the years. I thank you!

While dedicating an allied cemetery, General George S. Patton reminded us that we should thank God that soldiers have lived, rather than regret that they have died. Over the past 234 years, more than one million of our comrades-in-arm have selflessly given their lives for this cause. And today, more than one million of our comrades-in-arms are still fighting.

Winston Churchill once said of us: "The United States is like a gigantic boiler. Once the fire is lit under it, there is no limit to the power it can generate."

Volunteers Sought For Wollaston Beach Clean-up

Volunteers are needed to join the New England Aquarium (NEAq) to cleanup beaches in celebration of World Oceans Day June 6 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Clean-up teams will work at Carson Beach in South Boston (meet at the Castle Island parking lot), Wollaston Beach (meet at beach adjacent to Wollaston Yacht Club), and Revere Beach (meet on beach across the street from Kelly's Roast Beef).

The NEAq will provide garbage bags and safety instructions. A limited supply of gloves will be available, but persons are asked to provide their own if possible.

Volunteers will receive a coupon for one free child's admission to the NEAq to be used June 6 or June 7 with an adult ticket.

cy Center, replacing a similar flag that was stolen last week.

Some time on Monday, May 25, the rainbow flag together with its pole was stolen from the roof of the parish hall porch which faces Washington Street.

The pole was secured with a large Phillips head screw through the supporting fixture, which is firmly attached to the building at a height of 10 feet above the top step. The pole's removal required deliberate planning and effort, according to church and police officials.

Church officials reported the crime to Quincy Police and an officer investigated the scene.

Rev. Sheldon Bennett, minister, said there have been several previous incidents involving flags at the church. The church, located at 1305 Hancock St. is known as the "Church of the

Await Plan For Fore River Bridge

Councillors Fear Traffic Gridlock During Neponset Bridge Work

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City councillors fear gridlock will paralyze traffic across the city when the Neponset River Bridge and the Fore River Bridge undergo a $300 million overhaul in the next few years.

After state officials and consultants outlined preliminary plans for both bridges, councillors urged state officials to focus on traffic mitigation plans before work begins.

According to Project Engineer George Kober for Phase 2 of MassHighway's Neponset River Bridge project will be advertised in August with the contractor onsite in November.

After Heroin Overdose

Father: Narcan Saved Son's Life

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Not a pin dropped nor a paper rustled Monday at City Council as Steven Holler described how his son died last week and was revived by a dose of Narcan.

Holler said he found his 23-year-old son "blue as the blue of the flag" and "dead on the bathroom floor" last Thursday. His heart was beating but his brain was dead from an overdose of heroin.

"I had a pulse," Holler said, adding his son's brain had stopped. "The brain can not tell them to breathe. We knew we needed Narcan. I'm holding my son's head in my hands."

Police and firefighters responded within two and three minutes, according to Holler who asked them if they had Narcan in their supplies. They did not.

"I can not praise them enough," Holler said, describing how they immediately intubated his comatose son who did not awaken.

When the EMT's arrived minutes later, they did have Narcan and administered to Holler's son. Holler said the EMT's said they'd administered Narcan to "seven kids and brought them all back."

"A minute later, he started breathing on his own," Holler said, then described how his son became alert, began detoxing and was fully alert within ten to twelve minutes.

"I've been dealing with my son's addiction for five years," said Holler who described his son as good young man who has never been arrested, never been hospitalized, and had been living out-of-state for the past two years.

Holler and his wife believed his son was off drugs, but he says that you never know with an addict and they won't tell you.

"He's got a long road ahead," Holler said of the young man who is now in treatment.

Ironically, Holler said that he'd used up a supply of Narcan when distributing it to educate others. The drug is administered through the nasal passage and is designed to prevent or reverse the effects of narcotic pain relievers.

"They instantly start detoxing," said Holler who said the product is harmless when not used in such an emergency.

Holler, Rich and Kathy Deady, also parents of an addict, asked the council to support a resolution asking that the mayor's Drug Task Force and the City Council's Public Safety committee "encourage the police and fire department's first responders and other personnel, be trained in how to administer Narcan" and receive updates on the project.

Margaret LaForest, a member of the Task Force, joined Deady and Holler in supporting the measure.

Kathy Deady who described herself as the parent of an addict said Quincy was ranked "number 7 in the state for opiate overdoses."

"It works. It saves lives,"

Deady said of Narcan.

"We're losing the war on drugs," Holler said. "There's no money for anything. At least we can get this in the hands of the first responders."

Holler, also, noted that programs "hand out free needles."

"This is not easy for families to share," council President Jay Davis said of Holler and the Deady's who have been working in Quincy for prevention and to help addicts and addicts' families.

Davis filed the resolution.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin whose work with the courts brings him in contact with addicts described the parents as "courageous."

Coughlin said that Narcan "immediately blocks opiates to the brain."

City Council unanimously approved the resolution.

Brigadier General
James McConville
Parade Grand MarshalRelated Story
On Page 9

Mayor Thomas Koch and the Flag Day Committee announced Tuesday that U.S. Army Brigadier General James McConville will be the Grand Marshal for the 58th annual Flag Day Parade and Celebration June 13.

An Adams Shore native, Brig. Gen. McConville is the deputy-commanding general of the legendary 101st Airborne Division based out of Fort Campbell, Kentucky. Most recently, he finished a 15-month tour of duty in Afghanistan leading support services for the Army and NATO forces.

"We are honored that Brigadier General McConville accepted our invitation and incredibly proud to have someone of his stature call Quincy his hometown," Koch said. "He has given so much to our country, and I know we all look forward to honoring his service, and the service of all our veterans on Flag Day."

McConville graduated from West Point in 1981 and moved swiftly through the Army ranks. In 2005, he commanded a First Air Cavalry Division brigade in Iraq.

McConville's appearance at Flag Day will be the second time in three years that a brigadier general from Quincy has been named grand marshal. In 2007, Marine Brig. Gen. Joseph Dunford, Jr., an Iraq War veteran, led the parade.

The Flag Day Parade will step-off from Coddington Street in Quincy Center at 7 p.m. on Saturday, June 13 and will proceed down Hancock Street before turning down

Finance Committee Meetings Rescheduled

Finance Committee Chairman John Keenan announced Monday that he will reschedule the Finance Committee reviews scheduled this week and next week.

Currently, the state of the state's finances are unclear, leaving the city's funding questionable.

At this time as the state senate is working with one set of figures, the House of Representatives with another and Governor Deval

Patrick with a third.

Keenan has already held six meetings during which the committee reviewed all departments and their budget plans in preparation for a June 15 vote on the 2010 budget.

For Public Awareness Campaign

Group Raises $14,500 To Battle Drug Abuse

City Council Monday voted unanimously to accept $14,500 donated by local businesses in an effort to battle drug abuse.

The council voted after Jim Fatseas, the mayor's Chief of Staff, described how the funds will be used in an anti-drug campaign targeting teenagers and young adults.

Arthur Keough and the Friends of Quincy for their success raised the $14,500 for a public awareness campaign on drug abuse.

The funds will be temporarily administered by the City of Quincy Treasurer's Office.

Keough launched the effort after two local agencies, Impact Quincy and Bay State Community Services, were awarded state grants to provide overdose training to emergency responders.

The agencies conducted a survey that found that residents were not aware of the city's drug problem.

A majority of the 3000 persons interviewed did not believe there is a serious drug problem in Quincy while the Department of Health ranks the city 7th statewide in reports of heroin and opioid overdose.

Recent efforts to tackle drug abuse and create awareness include a billboard in Wollaston, warning of prescription drugs, with a slogan warning that "the monster" is in the medicine cabinet where youngsters steal drugs often.

In addition, 300 copies of a video on addiction are being distributed to service agencies, churches, parent groups and others.

Keough has written numerous successful grant applications for the city. He plans to fund Friends of Quincy as a non-profit 501(c)(3) organization.

Goals of the Friends include enhancing "public awareness of important issues within the city and initiating and developing programs to improve the city's quality of life."

The following individual and corporate donors contributed to the Friends of Quincy: Quincy Mutual Group, $1,000; Quirk Auto Dealerships, $1,000; South Coastal Bank, $1,000; Quincy Credit Union, $1,000; Fallon Ambulance Service,

$2,500; Norfolk County, $5,000; Deware Funeral Home, $250; Eastern Bank, $2,500; Dependable Cleaners, $200.

In a related action, councillors accepted $2,150 in donations for the DARE program as reported by Officer John Grazioso.

Donors included the following: Keohane Funeral Home, $100; Patrick J. Kennedy & Sons, $250; Scott-Williams, Inc., $100; Colonial Federal Savings Bank, $150; Agnitti Insurance Agency, $100; Street Running Club, $250; Varsity Club, $100; Twin Lads, $250; Wollaston Wine, $100; Quincy Credit Union, $500.

Councillors accepted similar gifts at council meetings in recent weeks, such as a $300 give from Wal-Mart Foundation for the Crime Prevention Program and $100 from the Varsity Club (A.B. Independence Corp.)

QUINCY POLICE Special Operations Motorcycle Officer Paul Brown recently visited Quincy High School as part of the Student Police Academy which completed its 18th year. Ordinances Approved For Wind Turbines, Noise Abatement

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City Council Monday officially approved ordinances aimed at regulating the construction and operation of wind turbines and abating noise.

Wind Turbines

Councillors analyzed nearly every line of the nine-page document at committee and council meetings before approving regulations for wind turbines.

Successful applicants will be awarded 25-year permits.

Applicants installing structures with heights of less than 250 feet may secure approval from the Planning Board. Structures taller than 250 feet will require a special permit.

The ordinance regulates the distance from other structures and lot lines and prohibits either advertising or cellular attachments on the monopoles.

In addition, the structure owner must provide proof of sufficient funds needed to dismantle the turbine

The Joneses Will Remember Quincy's Spirit Of Cooperation

Bittersweet but not disappointing.

That's how Salvation Army Majors Doug and Linda Jones view their transfer from the Quincy Corps to Manchester, CT at the end of this month.

The husband-and-wife spiritual team, who received their farewell orders last month, have steered and guided with compassionate hearts and loving hands the ministry of the Salvation Army Quincy Corps for eight years. They begin their new ministry in the Constitution State July 1.

As they prepare to make their move south, they'll be packing more than just clothing. They'll be bringing memories from a city they uniquely describe for its spirit of cooperation.

They will also take with them a readiness for their next assignment. And they know the Quincy Corps will continue to receive God's blessing after they have moved on.

"We know in our hearts that God is going to take care of Quincy just as he took care of Quincy when He brought us here," says Doug Jones. "And where He has us going next, that's God appointment for us.

"We are God's appointment and God's appointment is never disappointment. We're going with a sense that our lives are in God's hands."

But they also know that as their transfer nears, it's going to be more and more difficult for some.

"We have some people in the Quincy Corps who are very near and dear to us," Doug says. "One couple that is very active in the Corps and they have two children, one is 9 and one is 5. We are the only officers they've known and they are very close to us.

"It's going to be hard to say goodbye to those children and the other children as well. Those things are hard to do but it's God's timing and God's hands are on it and we trust God to keep his hand on this Corps."

Linda adds: "The transfer is bittersweet. It's bitter to leave here but it's sweet to see what God has for us on the other side."

For the last eight years in Quincy, the Joneses - who are both 57 - have embodied the Salvation Army, an evangelical part of the universal Christian Church and its mission statement. Its message is based on the Bible. Its ministry is motivated by the love of God. Its mission is to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ and to meet human needs in His name without discrimination.

Besides being spiritual leaders of its congregation, the Joneses have provided stewardship over the Corps' adult day health care program, emergency assistance, holiday assistance, and senior vacations. They are equally as proud of the youth programs the Quincy Corps offers, including the SonShine Pre-School and Camp Wonderland Camperships.

The Adult Day Health Care program is among the Quincy Corps' hallmarks. Since 1979, the Adult Day Health Center has been providing nursing care, social services and recreational activities for senior citizens and disabled adults from Quincy and the South Shore community. Its goal is to assist participants in a way that improves the quality of their lives, while enabling them to remain at home and enjoy their independence.

The adult day health program - which serves an average of 22 or 23 people daily - is one aspect of their ministry the Joneses will fondly remember.

"It's not just the people who are here every day that we help," Doug Jones says. "It's the caregivers and I couldn't tell you how many times a caregiver has said 'I appreciate what you are doing for my parent, I appreciate what you are doing for my wife, my husband and it gives me a little space so that I can try to take care of the rest of the night and the day.

"Even after the caregivers have left our program... you lose them to death or to a nursing home or a deeper care than we can provide, they come back to visit and they tell us how much this program meant to their parent.

"We had one fella," Doug Jones recalled, "who passed away but his daughter came in to tell us how much he enjoyed the meals here. He went to another program and the meals weren't as good as this program.

"But it's not about food," Doug emphasizes. "It's sitting there with the other seniors having dialogue, having someone who cares about you. I know if I were in that situation and I had to have my parent here, that would make it easier for me to go to work knowing my parent is cared for.

"The adult day health ministry will be with us. We've never had anything like this."

Combined, the Joneses have been officers in the Salvation Army for 65 years: Doug 33 and Linda 32. He was ordained a lieutenant in 1976, she in 1977. Then they got married.

Their assignment in Manchester, CT will be their seventh. Other ministries have been in Maine (Rockland 2 years, Portland 5 years and Lewiston 3 years); Hartford, Conn. for about 4 years; New Bedford (11 years) and the last 8 in Quincy.

While they were in Hartford, they were responsible for youth work. They ran a summer camp for four summers with 180 children and 65 staff members.

"Each community has been unique but Quincy has been a real joy," Doug Jones says.

In fact, they will forever remember Quincy for its "spirit of cooperation."

"I don't think we've ever experienced a spirit of cooperation in any community that we've served in that's better than this one right here. Regardless of whether it's a food drive or a prayer time, everybody shares and works together. That will stay with us," Doug says.

"We've enjoyed every community we have served but there's a spirit in this city that's just been incredible. I'm not saying that because we are leaving. We can look back and say the clergy fellowship has been fantastic. We do sunrise services together. Good Friday together. We've done a Thanksgiving service with some of the churches. And now we're in a softball league with several other churches and so we are interacting in that way.

"It's never been a matter of saying 'this is mine and I don't want to share,'" Doug explains. "We just do so many things together. And that reminds us that we are all in this together. We are trying to impact and influence people's lives."

Returning to Manchester, CT will be sort of a homecoming for the Joneses. They are familiar with that community because of their ministry in Hartford.

"We know the community a little bit," Doug says. "We know some of the people who are soldiers there. We have a good rapport. We've had some conversations with some of our former employees who are right in that area so there are people we will be able to reconnect with that we haven't seen in 19 years. That will be fun.

"Some of the young people who were in our summer camp (in Hartford) are now raising their own children. We're going back to see them with their children, so that's kind of unique."

Still, they are well aware leaving Quincy will bring mixed emotions. For them and their congregation.

"When you spend eight years investing yourself in the lives of people, if you're doing what God's called you to do, you're giving of yourself into people's lives," Doug says. "You are there as their pastor, you know their joys and sorrows, and so you're giving yourself. So when you have to separate from them, there's always feelings of grief. They're going to go through the grieving process and so are we.

"But the saving grace for us is that we know that our lives are in God's hands. When God appointed us here, he knew exactly what he was doing. We have seen God's hand on our lives; we have seen how the people in this church, how the people in the community have enriched our lives. We have seen that over the last eight years.

"We knew when we came here this was God's will. When you have to leave, you also have to know this is what God wants and God has reasons for these things," Doug continued. "We can't always at the time say, 'I know exactly why we're leaving.' But we can look back and say 'I saw how God brought me to this point' and for our own growth and the growth of the community, it was time for a change."

Neither Jones grew up in New England. Linda is originally from North Carolina. She's a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Ask her if she likes basketball and she beams "I love the Tar Heels."

Doug, who grew up in Utica, N.Y., enjoyed a different winter sport as a youth: hockey. As a kid, he helped shovel snow in the backyard. His mom would let the kids take water and make an ice rink.

"We never put skates on but we played ice hockey. And in the summer time, we started playing in the backyard. We'd put up these nets and we'd play hockey with a rubber ball. I used to like playing in the nets."

Doug still likes being a goalie. For the past three years, he's played floor hockey in the Salvation Army's gym with a group of guys from the Quincy area. He's run the floor as a forward a few times but prefers to don a goalie mask and pads. He's got a great glove and can make the difficult save but the time in the gym is much more than that.

"While the guys don't come to my church, in my own way I've been an influence on their lives. They know what I stand for and I think it's been good fellowship. It's a lot of fun," he says.

As they reflect on their time in Quincy, the Joneses expressed thanks to their congregation for working together for the honor and glory of God.

"We trust they will be open to what God wants them to be regardless of who the new pastor is. Get behind them and support them and work together again to see what God wants to do and through the Salvation Army here.

"I think God is doing some wonderful things for the Salvation Army here," Doug continues, "through young people, through the adult day care and different age levels. But it's the body of the church that God really wants to work as much as the pastors.

"We're grateful to the congregation for what they have given back to us and what they allowed us to do as their pastors but I would encourage them to know that God is not done with the Quincy Corps by any stretch of the imagination."

MAJOR DOUG JONES - floor hockey goalie extraordinaire.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1950's postcard reproduction of a photo by Mike Worley showing the Quincy Fire Department's Ladder Two fire truck at the Wollaston fire station at Beale Street. This white fire engine was built by the Seagrave Fire Apparatus Company then located in Columbus, Ohio. Over the years, the Quincy fire department had a number of similar ladder trucks that required a second driver in the back to steer the rear wheels. This ladder truck was put out of commission after being in a collision with another fire engine while responding to a false alarm. It never went back to service being replaced by a 1973 Maxim 100-foot TT. Today's Ladder Two at Wollaston is a red, all-aluminum, 1998 E-One 75-foot Quint. It was manufactured at the E-One Fire Apparatus Company's plant in Ocala, Florida. Thanks Mariano For Service On School Committee

I would like to thank Rep. Ronald Mariano for his past service on the School Committee. His duties as part of the House leadership team do require much attention and are important to the people of Quincy. From his previous 16 years of service on the School Committee, he is well aware of the responsibilities and time commitments required by the position.

His level of commitment and effort should not go unappreciated. He has done more than his duty. Rep. Mariano can take comfort in the fact that he is not alone in his passion and concern for the schools.

There are people willing to rise up and meet the challenges facing our schools and are capable of making the necessary commitment to the School Committee.

A Special Thank You From Some Senior Olympians

We the 25 Olympians from the "Mooring's" would like to express our sincere gratitude to Mayor Thomas Koch, Tom Clasby, Jr., Director of Elder Services and Barry Welch, Director of recreation and their outstanding staff on the running of the 27th Senior Olympics. A special thank you to the great young people who helped with their great enthusiasm to get us through all the events. A great job!

To our friend Rob Sokaloff from River Bay, affectionally known as our "Water Person." We are most appreciative for all the water and juices you so kindly provided. Also, the Sportsman luncheon with your famous cookies we all enjoyed way much at the Koch Complex. Kudos to everyone at O'Lindy's who are always so gracious to all the seniors. We all had a blast competing in darts, bowling and billiards.

What to say about The Torre Dei Passeri Club, just to say thanks again for always making us all feel so welcome, from the start of the day with the coffee and donuts to the wonderful lunch you all provide so efficiently. We all look forward to Bocce Day. Rain or Shine.

To all who helped in any way it was a great event. To all our old friends and to our new friends we made this year, we look forward to the 28th Senior Olympics.

Appreciates The Work Of Quincy Cemetery Staff

A note of appreciation is in order for the staff of Quincy's Cemetery Department for making sure that the grass was cut and lots trimmed in time for Memorial Day. Despite the heavy rain and severe shortage of staff, the workers succeeded in making the cemeteries look nice in time for this special day of remembrance for veterans and of those we love. Thank you.

Fore River Low Bidder On Export Line Contract

By FRANK McCAULEY

The Fore River Shipyard is the low bidder on two passenger vessels for the American Export Lines.

The local bid, submitted to the Maritime Commission by the Bethlehem Steel Office in New York, was the lowest of bids from three yards opened by the Commission in Washington.

News of Fore River's low bid was received from the national capital by Alexander Purdom, executive vice-president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce. The Fore River bid was $27,991,000 for one ship and $26,113,000 for each of two ships.

Estimated construction time for the first ship was 760 days and 850 days for the second ship.

EASTERN MASS DENIES WAGE PROPOSAL

New wage proposals, which averted a strike of 2,100 AFL bus drivers of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway serving 50 communities, came from the union and not the company, management said.

The company said in a statement that, "it made no offer to the unions except a willingness to go to arbitration."

The union contended that the company had proposed a 7-1/2 cent hourly increase for a 48-hour workweek until January 1, 1949 and an additional 7-1/2 cents on a 40-hour workweek after that date.

According to the company's figures, the proposed wage scale would cost the Eastern Mass Street Railway $975,000 in 1949 when the full 15-cent an hour raise would be effective.

QUINCYISMS

Miss Gloria Brummitt was the Chairman of Publicity for the Houghs Neck Congregational Church Choir. The Marvel, 5 Cottage Ave, Quincy Center, was advertising "Permanent, Shampoo and Hair Style for $3.75". Remick's of Quincy was advertising "Palm Beach Suits, 22% Cooler for $26.75". Dr. Edward Loftus, president of the Quincy High School Class of 1928, was heading a committee to celebrate the class's 25th reunion celebration. At Eastern Nazarene College's Cove Auditorium Squantum Community Youth Choir To Present 'Annie' Saturday

The Squantum Community Youth Choir (SCYC) is in production of its fifth annual spring musical, "Annie" (junior version), which will be performed Saturday, June 6 at 7 p.m. at the Cove Auditorium of Eastern Nazarene College on Wendell Ave., Quincy.

Starring local students Amanda Burke (Annie) and Zach Dwyer (Mr. Warbucks), "Annie" is about a very determined and optimistic little orphan who always believes brighter days are ahead, even during the most depressing and disparaging of times.

Cast members hail from Quincy, Braintree, and Weymouth.

With show-stopping numbers like, "Easy Street", "I Think I'm Gonna Like It Here", "It's the Hard-Knock Life", "N.Y.C.", and the unforgettable classic, "Tomorrow", there is something for everyone in this show.

Advanced tickets (reserved through Friday) are $7 for adults and $5 for kids. Tickets at the door will be $10 for adults, and $7 for kids.

For more information or to reserve tickets, call 617-479-4449 or send an e-mail to SquantumCYC@comcast.net. The SCYC's official website is SquantumCYC.com.

AMANDA BURKE (Annie) and Brenna McGoff (Miss Farrell) during rehearsal for the SCYC's production of "Annie" this Saturday.

The SCYC was established in November 2004, and is directed by Quincy residents Meghan and Cailin Driscoll, and Erin and Sean Glennon.

Houghs Neck Garden Club Home, Garden Tour June 13

A home and garden tour sponsored by the Houghs Neck Garden Club of Quincy will be held Saturday, June 13 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Five beautiful homes, one dating back to 1910, with 3 additional gardens will be shown. The homes will be decorated as if awaiting special guests to a dinner party.

Each house on Sea Avenue and Mears Avenue has a different spectacular view of Boston, Quincy Bay and the Harbor Islands.

The tour will take place rain or shine.

Those with advance tickets can start the tour at any home - walking or driving - ending at Nut Island, where light refreshments included in the tour will be served. While enjoying the refreshments relax and check out raffle prizes and bird houses for sale.

For tickets and information call Gay at 617-472-2800 or Marie at 617-481-2111.

Advance tickets may also be purchased at: Barrett's Gifts 1360 Hancock St. Quincy Square

Louis Crossing 1269 Sea St. Houghs Neck
Bernie's 1149 Sea St. Houghs Neck

Tickets are $20 in advance and $25 day of tour.

Tickets can be purchased day of tour at Nut Island, 149 Sea Avenue, where there is plenty of parking.

The four-year old Houghs Neck Garden Club has been a positive influence on the appearance of Houghs Neck. Wild flower seeds were purchased and planted in the gardens at Nut Island and are maintained by the club.

Garden club members have cleaned and planted at the Manet Community Health Center and Brill Field. The club was also instrumental in having the planters placed on Sea Street at the Willows by the City of Quincy.

The club has received funding and is rehabilitating Leo Kelly Park and the plot of land at the corner of Crosby and Sea Streets.

Music Students To Perform Tonight At Montclair/Wollaston Meeting

Students of the combined Montclair and Wollaston School Music Instrument program will perform at the Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Association meeting tomorrow (Thursday) at

Farmers' Market Opens Season June 12

The Quincy Farmers' Market will open its new season Friday, June 12 at 11:20 a.m. and continues through the summer at the John Hancock Municipal Parking Lot, across from the Quincy District Court House, Quincy Center.

A ribbon cutting at 1:30 p.m. will officially welcome the farmers and consumers to the weekly festive activity in Quincy Center. Among those attending the ribbon cutting will be Mayor Tom Koch and Dean Rizzo, director of the Quincy 2000 Collaborative.

Students from the Point Webster Middle School are planning to visit the farmers and are invited to plan beans along with the children who accompany their parents to the market.

Wollaston Garden Club members will be on hand to assist and answer questions on gardening.

The season is opening with Ohan Farm free-ranged eggs from Holbrook; Stillman Farm and Greenhouses on Lunenburg; Freitas Farm of Middleboro will return and start the season with sweet field-ripened strawberries and spring vegetables.

There will also be baked goods featured.

In addition, Ferrara Greenhouse and Alquist Flower Land will offer bedding plants and perennials. Hallowed Herbs will make ice tea and scones available.

At this time, consumers can also look for bright green lettuce, radishes, summer squash, herbs, scallions, bedding plants, tomato plants ready for the garden or patio.

Quincy Farmers' Market features only locally grown produce and sold by the farmers themselves. Farmers can also answer questions and offer information for those planning to grow their own vegetables.

Anneli Johnson, founder and manager of the market, says more and more consumers are interested in locally produced and grown products.

"It makes common sense to buy locally in that it saves on travel and cost of fuel, not only on the customers' side but also on the producers' side, as the fruits and vegetables come from nearby farms rather than across the country or overseas," Johnson adds.

Firemen's Memorial Services June 14 At Mount Wollaston Cemetery

The annual Quincy Firemen's Memorial Services honoring departed firefighters will be held Sunday, June 14 at 9 a.m. at the Firemen's Memorial Monument in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Sea St., Quincy.

Firemen's Memorial Sunday is held the second

Sunday in June by all fire departments throughout the state, in order to pay respect to all deceased members.

A detail will form at the cemetery gate on Sea Street at 8:30 a.m. The procession will then march to the Firemen's Memorial Monument and the program will commence at 9 a.m.

Following the service there will be refreshments at Adams Heights Men's Club, 24 Bower Rd., Quincy.

In the event of inclement weather, the program will be conducted at Quincy Fire Headquarters, 40 Quincy Ave.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Natalie's Whole Wheat/White Bread

(Editor's Note: The following recipe published in last week's Quincy Sun omitted one of the ingredients -- 2 cups of whole wheat flour. The entire recipe appears below.)

On a recent game show, one of the questions was what is your favorite kind of aroma coming from a kitchen? And the top answer was the smell of bread baking.

My niece Natalie called me one day very excited about her recent recipe for baking bread. She uses a blend of both whole wheat and white flour with amazing results.

She said although the recipe is easy, it takes a little time to get it right, but well worth it.

Whole Wheat/White Bread

1 package of dry yeast (use with 1/4 cup water and 1/4 teaspoon sugar)
3 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons salt
2 cups . milk
3 tablespoons butter
2 cups white flour
2 cups whole wheat flour
cooking spray
Preheat oven to 400 degrees

Follow the directions on the yeast package and let set for five minutes

In a bowl, add the sugar, salt and the wheat flour.

In a sauce pan, heat the milk and the butter until warm. Do not boil.

Using a hand mixer, add the liquid into the dry mixture and the yeast mixture also. Add in the white flour until it forms a dough. Knead the dough and shape into a ball. Use cooking spray and in a large bowl turn the dough over in the bowl so the ball is well greased. Cover and put in a warm place for about one hour.

After the dough has doubled in size, punch it down and pull in the sides. Cut into two pieces for two loaf pans, and place onto a floured surface. Leave for about 15 minutes.

Roll out the dough and roll into a loaf size pinching the ends to keep it closed. Put in a greased loaf pan with the seam down. Cover the pans and let it rise (for about two hours and she said it rose beautifully.)

Bake for 25 to 30 minutes. Take out of pans and let cool. Serve warm. enjoy!

After reading a basic recipe for white bread, Natalie actually made the change by blending the two flours and was pleased with the outcome.

Dorothy Quincy Homestead Open House

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead, a National Historic Landmark, will be open for public tours Sunday, June 14, between 1 and 4 p.m.

Tours will start on the hour and half hour beginning at 1 p.m. The last tour begins at 3:30 p.m.

All tours are free, but a voluntary contribution is suggested.

The Homestead is located on Butler Road at the corner of Hancock St., Quincy.

Dating from 1686, the house is 322 years old. During the 17th and 18th centuries, this mansion was considered the grandest estate in Quincy. During the Revolutionary War era, it was a meeting place for such patriots as Josiah Quincy, John Hancock and John Adams. It was the childhood home of Dorothy Quincy Hancock, the wife of John Hancock.

The Homestead is operated by the Colonial Dames of Massachusetts in conjunction with the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR).

June 14 is the only Sunday opening. Other public open house dates this season are Saturdays June 6, July 11, Aug. 1 and 22, Sept. 12 and Oct. 3.

Beechwood Knoll School Receives National Grid Green In-Action Award

The Green Education Foundation (GEF) announces the Beechwood Knoll School in Quincy has been granted the National Grid Green In-Action Award.

National Green Week 2009 mobilized over 400,000 school-aged children in 48 states to participate in green lessons and activities from Feb. 2 thru April 22 (Earth Day).

A record quarter of a million students participated in the programs nationwide waste reduction campaign where kids pledged to carry their drinks and snacks in reusable containers for the week, effectively eliminating over 100,000 lbs of trash.

National Grid was a key sponsor of the program and the award. Teachers joined in on the effort by spearheading a multitude of environmental projects including planting trees to offset river erosion, running e-recycling campaigns and walk to school days and turned off lights during class time, all in an effort to save resources.

Kids embraced their role as green keepers and tested the quality of creek water, sent letters to President Obama, created mini solar and windmill homes; and built pond eco-systems.

National Grid selected the Beechwood Knoll School for the National Grid Green In-Action Award due to its efforts in teaching environmental lessons to its students.

Beechwood Knoll School participated in National Green Week 2009 by reducing their use of drink containers by a whopping 87%.

To augment their waste-reduction program, they built a prototype vehicle for picking up containers that included six solar lights. These carts also had generators in the wheels that produced electricity when they turned.

Students explored the dynamics of wind power by building individual wind power model houses. Their National Green Week experience will culminate with a recycling book fair in June that will enable children to purchase books for their summer reading at 50 cents a book. The $250 award will go their Arts Enrichment Program.

Michael Berry To Receive Koch Award At Flag Day Parade

Longtime Boy Scout leader and Houghs Neck resident Michael Berry will receive this year's Richard J. Koch Memorial Youth Service Award at the 58th annual Flag Day Parade and celebration on June 13, the Flag Day Committee announced Tuesday.

"Mike has done tremendous work and contributed countless hours on behalf of our young people, and he truly exemplifies the spirit of this award," said Mayor Tom Koch, chairman of the Flag Day Committee. "His passion for the Scouts and love of Quincy set great examples for our youngsters and he is truly deserving of the award."

The award is named for the late Richard J. Koch, founder of the Koch Club and originator of the Flag Day Parade and Celebration when it was first held in Quincy 57 years ago.

An Eagle Scout himself, Berry has worked with Boy Scout Troop 6 for the last 22 years, attending summer

To date, that program has raised more than $300,000 and promotes a strong relationship between labor and the Boy Scouts.

His service to the Boy Scouts has been recognized on several occasions, including as Outstanding Scouter of the District, the District Award of Merit, the highest award given out by a Scout district, the Silver Beaver Award for volunteer ship, the Troop 6 Waldorf Statler Award for his years of service and the national George Meany Award, which is given to union members active in Boy Scouts.

Berry is also an active youth sports coach and community leader in Houghs Neck.

Phelan Announces Candidacy For Mayor

hope for Quincy's future."

Stating that, "We can and will continue to move Quincy forward," Phelan said that what he heard "over and over from people was the sense that under the current administration Quincy has somehow gone off track; that we have lost momentum. That we are headed in the wrong direction."

Phelan said high property taxes were the major complaint from Quincy residents with whom he spoke. He said people were concerned with the fact that in just one year in office Mayor Koch had increased taxes more than any mayor in city history, and that Koch "had increased Quincy's taxes nearly twice as much in his first year as I had in my six years as mayor."

The former mayor also pointed out that according to the state Department of Revenue, Mayor Koch increased taxes more than every city in the state, despite the fact that Phelan had left him with over $15 million in the city's rainy day account.

"I heard from senior citizens who had raised families here and helped build this city, and who were now being forced out of their homes by unfair property tax increases. I heard from small business people whose taxes have skyrocketed just at a time when a lousy economy already had them on the ropes."

"I heard from hundreds of residents who complained of pot-holed streets wrecking their cars, and crumbling sidewalks endangering their kids' safety. And I heard from parents and teachers about a lack of support for our public schools that is halting the educational progress we have worked so hard to achieve."

Along with concerns about Koch's high taxes, crumbling streets, and failure to fix public schools, Phelan referred to a "culture of entitlement" at City Hall.

"Over and over again, I heard a growing resentment of the old-time politics and self-serving cronyism that has returned to our City Hall. That it has again become a place where 'who you know' is the most important question when you are seeking a city job, or a contract, or the services every citizen has an equal right to expect."

Phelan said he is upbeat about the city's future. "After hearing from so many good, solid citizens of this city, I come away more convinced than ever that this great city's best days are still to come!"

"We can and will continue to move Quincy forward as a great place to raise a family, a place to live out a well-earned retirement, a place to invest in a new business, a place where everyone gets a shot at their American dream," Phelan said.

"But we cannot move forward with crippling property tax increases and uncontrolled spending," he continued. "We cannot move forward with crumbling roadways. We cannot move forward without a renewed emphasis on creating the very best public schools in the state."

"And we cannot move forward with leadership that treats City Hall like some exclusive club with special privileges reserved for friends and family," Phelan continued. "Quincy City Hall must once again become the people's hall, where every citizen gets a fair hearing, and a fair and equal shake."

Phelan said he was invigorated by the experience of talking to so many residents, "and I have been reminded yet again of how many concerned, involved, intelligent people live in this city, and love this city. People were very frank with me about what they felt I did right as mayor, and what I did wrong, and where we should go from here. And I listened. And I learned. And, as I have said before, sometimes you learn more by losing than by winning. I certainly have."

Phelan also spoke of Quincy's historic role in creating America's form of government, and of the city's "uniquely" democratic charter.

"Living here one's entire life, one can sometimes forget Quincy's enormous contribution to American democracy," he said. "But from this very place came the courageous, ingenious work of John Adams and other patriots who fought for and helped build a completely new form of government...a government by the people."

"When I was growing up here, attending Quincy's public schools, one of eight kids, the son of a clam digger and postal worker, I couldn't yet understand the importance of that legacy that inheritance. But looking back after meeting people who had grown up elsewhere, I realize that Quincy was uniquely a place where everyone was more or less the same. It didn't matter how big your house was or what kind of car your dad drove."

"Every one of us sitting in those classrooms knew that we had a shot at the American dream. Everyone had an opportunity to go as far as our hard work and drive would take us. And with a great public school education, even a clam digger's son from Hough Neck could work his way through college and law school and one day perhaps even become mayor."

"And above all it is that sense of opportunity, of progress, of equality, before the law, that we must preserve if Quincy is to move forward," he said.

For the entire text of Phelan's statement, visit his website www.phelanforquincy.com.

Fontbonne Academy Congratulates Kayla McGonagle '09

Captain of the soccer, basketball and tennis teams, Kayla McGonagle of Quincy is headed to Loyola University of Chicago in the fall, having been accepted into their School of Business. Highlights of her Fontbonne career include being involved in athletics, being a peer minister, a student ambassador, a representative in the Student Council and a member of the Spanish National Honor Society and the National Honor Society.

"Fontbonne helped me grow into a young independent woman. I have developed into who I am and not who others want me to be, and am now able to handle situations on my own. Fontbonne helped me discover myself and what I would like to do with my future. It challenged me and taught me to push myself to do more and always try to be successful."

Councillors unanimously approved several portions of the proposed ordinance, but were split regarding wind power for homes.

Councillor Joseph Finn suggested language that would allow homeowners to apply more easily for permits for small or rooftop turbines, but the measure did not pass.

"No one has asked for wind turbines on a house," said Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro.

Finn and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin voted for the ordinance, but said they will work on an amendment to cover home wind turbines.

Noise Ordinance

When Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee first proposed a noise ordinance in February, he described the noise assaulting his constituents at Marina Bay from the Neponset River Bridge reconstruction and nightclubs on the boardwalk.

Since that time, McNamee has adjusted his anti-noise proposal and presented research on noise meters and varied ordinances.

This week, Councillors unanimously approved a noise ordinance Monday but McNamee said after the vote he was not pleased.

Councillors revised the proposed ordinance and approved an amendment by Councillor Michael McFarland increasing the noise levels in all categories by ten decibels.

McNamee said the increases approved by the council raised the acceptable noise levels above Boston's limits.

"This is in keeping with scores of ordinances across the country," McNamee said of the noise levels described in his proposal.

The new ordinance, also, includes the appointment of a Noise Control Advisory Board which would file an annual report and recommend changes in the ordinance.

When reviewing the proposal Monday, Council President Jay Davis and Councillor John Keenan said one of the problems is the subjective nature of noise.

KOCH

FOR QUINCY

Honest Leadership

- Working Together: Mayor Tom Koch brought the City's unions together to save $10 million on health insurance costs and another $1.7 million in a wage freeze because everyone worked together for Quincy's best interest.
- Solving Problems: Mayor Koch spoke openly about the City's finances, making tough decisions to correct millions of dollars in hidden deficits, unpaid bills, and inappropriate accounting that seriously threatened our future stability. And he did it without using shell games.
- Protecting Public Safety: Mayor Koch's new budget maintains neighborhood police patrols, expands the Drug Unit and preserves emergency response times without raising property taxes in the next fiscal year.
- Investing in Education: While other cities face school closures and devastating cuts to school programs, Mayor Koch's budget keeps his commitment to the classroom amid the worst fiscal crisis in a generation. He is rebuilding relationships with the state to secure funding for a new Central Middle School.
- Fighting For Us: Mayor Koch challenged the 2007 Honeywell deal and its millions of dollars in inflated bills, prompting the ongoing investigation by the state Inspector General; and he ordered spending cuts on the new Quincy High School project, already costing us $46 million more than it should.

"Friends,

Our City today faces challenges and tough decisions the likes of which we have not seen in a generation. We have kept our promise to talk honestly, make those hard decisions and do what is best for the future of our great City. This is no time for the personal politics and dishonest antics of the past, and I welcome the opportunity to talk truthfully about our record and our vision for the future."

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On June 6, 1683, the Ashmolean, the world's first university museum, opens in Oxford, England, with collections donated by English archaeologist Elias Ashmole. Today, the collection at the Ashmolean Museum of Art and Archaeology ranges from 500,000-year-old man-made implements to 20th-century works of art.

• On June 4, 1876, a mere 83 hours after leaving New York City, the Transcontinental Express train arrives in San Francisco. Suddenly, a journey that had previously taken months using horses could be made in less than a week. Amenities varied from plush velvet seats to narrow wooden benches.

• On June 7, 1893, Mohandas K. Gandhi, a young Indian lawyer, commits his first act of civil disobedience. Known as Mahatma, or "the great soul," Gandhi's persuasive methods of civil disobedience influenced leaders of civil-rights movements around the world, especially Martin Luther King Jr.

• On June 5, 1922, George W. Carmack, the first person to discover gold along the Klondike River, dies in Vancouver, British Columbia.

Unlike many prospectors, Carmack was not consumed by the lust to find gold. He enjoyed playing the organ, reading periodicals and writing sentimental poetry.

• On June 2, 1935, Babe Ruth, one of the greatest players in the history of baseball, ends his Major League career after 22 seasons, 10 World Series and 714 home runs. When Ruth died on Aug. 16, 1948, his body lay in state at Yankee Stadium for two days and was visited by more than 100,000 fans.

• On June 1, 1949, Lawrence Welk's band begins a two-year stint as the house orchestra for radio show "High Life Review." Though often lampooned for his saccharine style, Welk eventually developed an army of loyal fans and hosted one of the longest-running musical variety shows in history.

• On June 3, 1961, Clarence Gideon is arrested and charged with breaking into a poolroom in Florida. The appeal of Gideon's subsequent conviction lead to the establishment of one of the chief principles of American criminal justice in what are known as our Miranda rights.

Kober said one lane north and one lane south will be closed during the reconstruction, which is expected to last three years. He acknowledged that there will be traffic impacts but stressed the urgency of the repairs.

"We do not want chunks of concrete falling off," said Kober of the 40-year-old span, which accommodates 64,000 vehicles daily. "We're hoping the residents of Quincy understand."

Kober estimated the traffic impact in terms of minutes while the area's councillors predicted major problems.

Councillors Kevin Coughlin, Ward 3; Brian McNamee, Ward 6 and Doug Gutro, Ward 5, suggested changes in the plan, particularly in the closing of one lane north and south.

However, Kober said such a change would add at least another year to the project.

Coughlin said that he and McNamee already lose considerable time in traffic during their commute to Boston when their cars wait on the bridge.

McNamee predicted the Phase 2 construction will add "a whole new dimension of stress to our constituents" who live in the area. He also sought additional community meetings.

Gutro feared the already heavy traffic on Hancock Street and the bridge will repeat "Easter on the Mass Turnpike."

Councillors recommended that MassHighway develop and publicize plans for re-routing the traffic before it reaches either Neponset River Bridge or Fore River Bridge.

Gutro asked that the signs be posted "before you get to Quincy. Early and often. You don't want to get to Quincy and see your first sign when there's bridge work ahead."

MassHighway is also overseeing construction of a new Fore River Bridge at Quincy's south entrance.

The Fore River Bridge project is slated to be advertised in 2010 and, once underway, last 40 months "on the conservative side," according to MassHighway's Walter Heller, director of Accelerated Program Delivery.

Heller told councillors that the public process has just begun and a meeting is scheduled Tuesday, June 23 at Thomas Crane Public Library.

"I see us having numerous meetings on this," said Heller who described two potential plans for the new bridge and said public input is essential.

As for the traffic impact at the new Fore River Bridge, Heller does not expect any major problems. He predicted minor traffic problems during the installation of utilities at the bridge.

"We're going to keep the temporary bridge operating during construction," Heller said.

The total $300 million construction costs for both bridges will be funded through Governor Deval Patrick's $3 billion Accelerated Bridge program approved by the legislature in 2008.

Phase 1 of the Neponset River Bridge project cost $20 million and Phase 2 of the project is expected to cost $40 million, according to Heller.

ing to Mark Griffin, Bridge Section Head, Department of Conservation and Recreation.

Heller said the total cost of the Fore River Bridge project is expected to be $255 million. That sum includes the cost of dismantling the temporary structure.

Hearing Monday On Updating Meals On Wheels

State legislators will hold a public hearing Monday regarding efforts to update the Meals on Wheels program to accommodate seniors with dietary needs.

The 10 a.m. hearing will be held in Room A2 at the State House. Senator Michael Morrissey submitted the petition, Senate Bill #321 at the request of Sabina Stenberg of the Silver Legislature.

The proposed bills would amend Chapter 19A, Chapter 37 which defines the duties of the Department of Elder Affairs.

Stenberg has long warned that there will be an influx of diabetic seniors in the coming years and that Senior Centers should be prepared to adjust to their needs and to the problems of all seniors citizens.

According to Stenberg's petition, the Meals on Wheels program should offer safe meals for all authorized seniors with special dietary needs.

Quincy DAV Meets June 10

Quincy Disabled American Veterans (DAV) will meet Wednesday, June 10 at 7 p.m. at the Morrisette Legion Post #294, 81 Liberty St.

Refreshments will be served at no charge.

The DAV offers qualified veterans information on assistance and entitlements and current legislation that could affect veterans' benefits.

The local chapter meets the second Wednesday of each month except for summer months, July and August, and the month of December.

PATHWAYS TO HEALTH

In this era of escalating health costs, it is preferable to maintain health than to ignore it and risk a health crisis. In accepting responsibility for one's own health, there has been a decided shift toward increased exercise, improved dietary habits and stress reduction. As the world's oldest, drug-free healing profession, chiropractic encourages this natural approach. By eliminating restrictions on the flow of nerve energy as it courses through the spinal column on its way to virtually every area of the body, the doctor of chiropractic hopes to free the body's natural recuperative powers. The more the public knows about the chiropractic approach to maintaining health, the better it can make informed decisions about every one's number one priority—good health.

We are pleased to welcome you to our column. Are you concerned about your health? The structure and function of your joints, muscles, nervous system, and other systems of your body must be balanced and working together properly. Let us assist your body to heal itself. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, you will get the most updated care in a safe and comfortable environment. You will be listened to and respected. Your questions will be answered, and your concerns will be addressed. We look forward to seeing you at 112 McGrath Hwy. Call us at 617-472-4220 to schedule an appointment. No matter where you live in Eastern Mass., we can offer you exceptional chiropractic service.

P.S.: Nerve energy, emanating from the brain either directly or indirectly, controls every organ and function in the body.

At the commencement, the college honored Richard T. Pitts, D.O., with a Distinguished Alumnus Award for a lifetime of excellence in the field of medicine and a life-long dedication to learning.

Elaine Beaupre was recognized with the Faculty Member of the Year Award for 2008-09 for excellence in education and outstanding service to the Quincy College community and its students.

Dr. Pitts delivered the spring commencement address to graduates. He encouraged students to "fill up their dash" between their birth and death with a lifetime of valuable actions.

Ms. Beaupre served as mace bearer during the ceremony.

Dr. Pitts' (A.A. '67) distinguished career as a physician, professor, medical director and author spans some 33 years. He is currently the assistant medical director/chief of occupational medicine at Kaiser Permanente Orange County Service Area in Anaheim, CA and associate clinical professor of Medicine at the University of California, Irvine.

Dr. Pitts is a diplomate of the American Boards of Emergency Medicine and Preventive Medicine and president of the Orange County Medical Association.

In addition to his associate degree from Quincy College, Dr. Pitts earned a bachelor of science degree in chemistry from Chapman University and a doctorate of osteopathy degree from Des Moines University.

He is a doctoral candidate at Walden University where he is studying applied management and decision science.

Dr. Pitts served in the U.S. Navy Reserve Medical Corps from 1998 to 2006.

Ms. Beaupre has served as chairperson of Nursing for three years and a faculty member for a total of 30 years at Quincy College. She holds a B.S. in nursing from West Virginia Wesleyan College, M.Ed. in health education from Bridgewater State College and M.S. in nursing administration from Regis College.

Simple Safety Tips To Protect Your Home

(ARA) - Home may be where the heart is, but it also is where the hazards are.

A survey of 1,000 Americans revealed startling statistics indicating that many of us are at risk of incurring injuries in our own homes every day, some of which could even be fatal, according to a recent study by BRK Brands and The Lehigh Group -- makers of the First Alert brand and Crawford-branded garage and home workshop organization products, respectively. As proud supporters of the nonprofit Home Safety Council (HSC), First Alert and Crawford are joining with HSC to recognize Home Safety Month in June and help spread the word about potential home hazards and tips for protecting loved ones.

The HSC research reports that Americans suffer nearly 21 million preventable household injuries each year.

"Sadly, many home accidents might have been prevented with proper planning and simple safety precautions," says Deborah Hanson, director of external affairs for First Alert and The Lehigh Group.

Focusing on some of the most common household hazards, Hanson offers three easy ways to increase the level of safety at home:

Be armed with alarms

Installing smoke and carbon monoxide (CO) alarms will immediately help improve the safety of your home and family. According to the HSC, alarms that detect smoke cut the risk of fire-related fatalities nearly in half.

Although the BRK/Lehigh survey revealed 95 percent of Americans have smoke alarms in their homes, the study also showed that one in 10 Americans have never changed the batteries. Further, more than half have dangerously silenced smoke detectors by removing batteries or removing entire units from walls or ceilings.

"After installing alarms, it is critical to check them regularly to make sure they are in good working condition," says Meri-K Appy, president of the HSC. "We advise homeowners to test alarms monthly and to install fresh batteries at least once a year. Also, if smoke alarms are more than 10 years old, replace them. Home Safety Month, in June, is a great reminder to test alarms and replace as needed."

The BRK/Lehigh study revealed even more alarming findings about Americans' use -- or lack thereof -- of CO alarms. Despite nearly daily media reports of deaths and injuries from CO poisoning, nearly half -- 47 percent -- of all U.S. homeowners do not have CO alarms in their homes.

"Consumers are generally more aware of the dangers of home fires because fire is something they can see, feel and understand," says Hanson. "Carbon monoxide is especially dangerous because it attacks without warning and can be deadly."

Known as "the silent killer," CO exposure is the No. 1 cause of accidental poisoning in the U.S. The colorless, odorless gas can originate from anything that burns a fossil fuel -- such as a gas furnace, stove, water heater, barbecue grill, woodburning fireplace or car.

For the best protection smoke alarms and CO alarms (or a combination unit) should be installed on every level of the home (including the basement) and in every bedroom or sleeping area. For whole home protection, Hanson suggests interconnected alarms, which signal alarms through multiple alarm stations in the home if a threat is detected in a single room. This gives residents more time to react and get everyone to safety. First Alert's ONELINK wireless offerings provides homeowners the protection of interconnected alarms without needing to call an electrician to install them in the home's electrical system.

Extinguish fear (and flames)

Another home safety must-have, according to Hanson, is a fire extinguisher, especially critical during the early stages of a fire. Still, more than a quarter of Americans report not owning a fire extinguisher, according to the BRK/Lehigh survey. And, more than one-third of those who do own a traditional home extinguisher say they would not feel "very confident" operating it should a fire ignite.

One easy-to-operate solution is Tundra Fire Extinguishing Spray. Effective on cooking oil, fabric, wood and electrical fires, this 14-ounce point-and-spray can covers a wider surface area and provides users with more time to fight a fire than conventional fire extinguishers.

Get a grip on garage dangers

When it comes to home safety, one of the most often overlooked areas of the home also is one of the most dangerous. Each year, the garage is the site of thousands of unintentional injuries ranging from punctures and poisoning to fatal falls.

According to the BRK/Lehigh survey, nearly four in 10 Americans have tripped over an item in their cluttered garage; more than a quarter have hit an object when opening a vehicle door; and 22 percent have accidentally hit or run over something when parking.

Hanson suggests giving your garage a quick safety makeover with these tips courtesy of the HSC:

- * Store shovels, rakes, lawn chairs, gardening tools, bikes and other sharp and large objects on the wall and out of high-traffic areas.

- * Store ladders horizontally. This prevents tipping and discourages children from climbing on them.

- * Make sure poisonous products have child-resistant caps, are clearly labeled and are stored out of sight and reach of children.

- * Keep floors and steps clear of clutter and immediately clean up grease and spills.

- * Mount a fire extinguisher and an emergency preparedness kit in the garage and make sure every family member knows where they are and how to use them.

Use Snow to Clean Oriental Rug?

Q: I know it's a bit late in the season for this one, but when I read your column on cleaning oriental rugs, I had to write. I think you missed it on this one. Soaking and shampooing those area rugs is difficult and time-consuming. Water and chemicals rot the webbing. Instead of all that work, try cleaning rugs with snow. That's right, snow!

After a fresh snowfall, vacuum both sides of the rug indoors as you indicated. Then, take the rug outside and lay on a clean patch of snow. Throw snow on top of the rug and sweep off with a broom or brush. Repeat until the snow comes off clean, then flip the rug and do the other side. The dirt will pour off using this method.

If you live in an area without snow or it's past snow season, use crushed ice on a deck or clean garage floor instead.

The rug will not get soaked through, and it looks and smells clean. No chemicals, no taking days to dry. Tell your readers to try it! -- Ruth, via e-mail

A: Wow, that's definitely a cool suggestion! I've never heard of this method, but then I grew up down south. If anyone else has cleaned an oriental rug in a similar manner, I'd love to hear from you.

I suppose the tiny ice particles that make up fallen snow work like scrubbers, getting deeper into the rug's nap than a brush could and picking up dirt particles. As always, I recommend rug owners doing this for the first time test a small section of the rug or clean a rug that's not a highly valued antique, for obvious reasons. And afterward, do hang the rug up or lay out to make sure it dries thoroughly.

HOME TIP: When cleaning a stain or spill on carpet or rugs, never rub the spot roughly. Instead, blot up the liquid or cleaning solution with a soft cloth.

Send questions or home-repair tips to homeguru2000@hotmail.com, or write This Is a Hammer, c/o King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Dressing Your Home With Designed Exteriors

(ARA) - Whether you're building a new home or remodeling for a different look, one of the first things you need to consider is your home's curb appeal. Common curb appeal updates include landscaping, walkway and patio renovations. Another remodeling practice that can lead to major curb appeal is updating the surfaces of a home's exterior walls.

A designed exterior is one of the hottest trends in the exterior cladding category, and it's one of the most dramatic upgrades you can make to a house. Adding flair to your home by mixing a variety of materials on your exterior wall surfaces, including siding, stone, brick and shingles, can considerably boost resale value.

Builders and remodelers pull these solutions from textbooks as well as portfolios of some of the world's most creative designers. Designed exteriors combine several looks and styles to create a unique and eye-catching first impression. Mixing materials gives a home character and sets it apart from other homes in the neighborhood.

The hottest home fashions

Buyers are always looking for the biggest return on investment. Technological advancements in home exterior materials allow builders to decrease installation time and use products that can stand up to harsh weather conditions. Stone veneer products -- the fastest growing home exterior category -- offer customizable cut and color options, and they're growing in popularity across the nation. Michael E. Nelson, founder and president of Nelson Design Group, LLC, uses stone veneer products in many of his designs.

"In new homes, 90 percent of projects use stone veneer when considering mixing exterior materials," says Nelson. "The material is rapidly replacing the previous choice of brick."

Armed with huge product catalogs, companies like United Stone Veneer by Ply Gem create stone veneer products made of cement that weigh a fraction of actual stone and are simple to install. According to Dave Barrett, president of United Stone Veneer by Ply Gem, the company offers eight different styles of stone in more than 38 different colors to meet custom building needs. "We offer a wide variety of stone styles because stone preferences vary around the country," says Barrett. "The variety ensures that all customers can find a combination of stone veneer styles and colors that will match the style in their area."

"The rustic look of mixed materials using stone is taking over across the U.S. and replacing traditional brick-styled homes," says Nelson. These materials are often used around the bottom quarter of a house or on accent walls in combination with vinyl siding or polypropylene shakes and shingles.

A vintage look

Another building material used in creating designed exteriors that promotes the popular rustic look is board and batten siding. Unlike traditional siding that attaches horizontally across a home, the board and batten look creates vertical lines. According to Jerry Blais, vice president of marketing for Ply Gem, a building products company, the board and batten look is growing in popularity.

"Many of our customers are using vertical board and batten siding to differentiate their home from neighbors," says Blais. "We are also seeing customers use board and batten in the main area of a wall and then accent it with shakes or shingle looks in accent gables, or peaked areas just below a roof."

Blais recommended Cedar Discovery Hand Split Shakes and Quest Signature cedar-look siding, both from Mastic Home Exteriors by Ply Gem, as two options that have a real wood look with the benefits of durable vinyl siding.

According to Nelson, housing developments that previously did not allow vinyl siding are beginning to permit products like this because of their realistic and aesthetically-pleasing designs.

Increased value

Value and upkeep are two important advantages to keep in mind when building a home with a designed exterior. Blais offered some key points for those considering designed exteriors.

"Although the initial cost of a designed exterior may be higher than purchasing siding alone, the increase in curb appeal translates to higher sell-value and competitive differentiation," says Blais. "The key is to deliver a high-quality product that requires little to no maintenance and will continue to look great for years to come."

New Home Buyers Can Pocket $8,000

As part of the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009, a new tax credit will allow first-time home buyers to claim up to $8,000. Unlike the tax credit plan of last year (which allowed an interest-free tax "loan" of $7,500), this one doesn't have to be paid back.

Qualifying homes must be purchased between Jan. 1, 2009, and Dec. 1, 2009. "Purchased" means that you actually close on the home, with settlement completed and title transferred to you.

The credit is 10 percent of the purchase price, with a cap of $8,000.

Any type of home can qualify, whether it's a resale, a new one, one you have constructed, a condo, a mobile home, single family or townhouse.

"First-time buyers" are those who haven't owned a principal residence during the previous three years. A principal residence is one where you live more than half the time. Owning a vacation home won't disqualify you, as it's a place you stay sometimes, but not where you live.

There are income caps: If you're single, income cannot exceed $75,000. For married couples, that amount is $150,000. Depending on your modified gross income, there is a phase-out of the credit amount near the top of the income range.

To keep the credit, you need to live in the home (use it as your principal place of residence) for three years. If you sell the home, you have to pay back the full credit.

Use IRS Form 5404 to claim your credit when you file. Beware: The form is for both the old ($7,500) and new ($8,000) credits. Read the form carefully as you fill it out. That credit amount is then transferred to your Form 1040.

If you qualify for the full $8,000, but don't owe that much in taxes, you'll end up with a credit at the bottom of your Form 1040, and a check for the balance will be sent to you from the Internal Revenue Service.

If you bought a home and qualified under the $7,500 pay-back scenario and filed your 2008 tax forms, you can file an amendment to your taxes (Form 1040X) to claim the new credit. Look online for IRS news release 2009-27 for details.

New Deck Trends Help Define Your Outdoor Living Area

(ARA) - Just as your home's decor is a statement of your taste and personality, so is your backyard. As the trend for enjoying customized decks and outdoor living space grows, personalized outdoor living areas are the latest in home improvement upgrades.

Building or updating an existing deck isn't simply a great investment: It provides opportunities to personalize your backyard and customize the look to your taste. And with many families staying home this summer thanks to the economy, why not create your perfect location for entertaining?

"By designing your deck with accents, lights and unique accessories, you can transform your backyard into an outdoor retreat you'll never want to leave, whether you're catching up with friends over a grilled dinner in the evening or are curled up with a book in a lounge chair on a sunny afternoon," says Chris Fox, marketing manager at Universal Forest Products.

With a new emphasis on value, durability and ultra-low maintenance, many homeowners seek deck materials that resist fading and staining. New Latitudes Capricorn Tropical composite decking, sold through dealers nationwide, is a good choice. Low-maintenance, eco-friendly composite decking material is made from a mixture of recycled wood fiber and postindustrial high-density polyethylene, which looks natural and feels great on bare feet.

Add unique touches to really make the deck your personal haven. Change your deck's look with interesting balusters to match other decorative accents on your house or in your yard. You'll find traditional bronze balusters, classic rounded rails or even scenic glass balusters, which give your outdoor room a clear view.

Then consider breaking up the wooden look of your deck with faux stone post covers, to help match the look of your deck to a stone house, to a backyard with stone pavers or to a stone wall. Easily installed over a wooden post, faux stone post covers come in several colors.

Finish off your railing system with post caps. Decorators post caps, by Maine Ornamental, are functionally and artistically decorative. Maybe you're interested in the more traditional black, stainless or pewter colors, topping a solar LED light to illuminate your deck for evening use. Or try a creative look with stained glass post caps, bringing a colorful flair to each deck post.

With so many new products and options available, you can transform your deck into a new outdoor living area. And because you designed it, it will perfectly fit your lifestyle.

Presidents" because Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams and their wives are entombed in the church crypt.

Identical flags were stolen in August and September of 2008. Last October, the flag was taken down and burned, with fragments and ashes left on the porch steps.

United First Parish Church displays the flag as a well-recognized sign of equality and solidarity with the gay, lesbian, bi-sexual, transgender community. For this reason and because of prior acts of vandalism, church officials consider the vandalism as a crime of hate against a minority group.

The church has also filed a report with the Quincy

Human Rights Commission and Rev. Bennett has spoken with the Civil Rights Division of the Attorney General's office.

"It is sad that there are still people who resort to such mean-spirited acts," Rev. Bennett said. "We will keep the flag flying. We will keep standing on the side of equality and respect."

'Health Care Decisions Made Easier' Topic Today

John Adams Healthcare Center, 211 Franklin St., Quincy, will offer a free program to the public on "Health Care Decisions Made Easier" Thursday, June 4 at 2 p.m. at the John Adams facility.

Refreshments will be served.

The program will address the importance of health care proxies, advance directives and other medical treatments that will make health care decisions easier for individuals and their loved ones.

Guest speakers include Rev. Dr. Gordon Postill, director of the Ethics Program and spiritual counselor at Old Colony Hospice, and Kathleen Diamond, R.N., CHPN, certified in hospice and palliative care and also works with Old Colony Hospice.

For reservations, call Jane or Linda at 617-479-0837.

Morrissey Office Hours Friday At City Hall

Sen. Michael Morrissey will hold office hours Friday, June 5 from 9 to 10 a.m. in the second floor conference room on Quincy City Hall.

Residents are welcome to discuss legislative proposals or other issues with Morrissey.

The senator can also be contacted by calling 617-722-1494, by fax at 617-722-1055 or by e-mail at Michael.M.Morrissey@state.ma.us.

Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Surgery
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

A ROYAL PAIN IN THE FOOT

There are numerous causes of foot pain, and nearly all can be grouped under one of three general categories. First are ill-fitting shoes. For example, high-heeled shoes concentrate pressure on the toes and can aggravate, if not cause, problems with the toes. Second are certain medical conditions, including arthritis, diabetes, obesity, and pregnancy. Any medical condition that causes a disturbance in the way a person walks can contribute to foot pain. Some medications, such as drugs used for high blood pressure, can cause foot swelling. Third is high-impact exercise. This sort of exercising, such as jogging or strenuous aerobics, can injure the feet. Common injuries include corns, calluses, blisters, muscle cramps, acute foot and ankle injuries, and plantar warts.

When adverse conditions hinder mobility and activity by causing pain, the entire body can be affected. Don't fall victim to this situation. Seek professional podiatric diagnosis and treatment before little problems grow into big ones. If your foot problem concerns pronation, we invite you to consult with us about HyProCure™. I am one of only two podiatrists in Massachusetts who has the advanced training necessary to perform this pain-saving, minimally invasive procedure that requires no casting and has patients back in their regular shoes in just one week. Please call us at 781-986-3668 for an appointment at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221.

P.S. Neurological disorders, such as Parkinson's disease or cerebral palsy, can lead to pain or numbness in the feet.

A Job Well Done

On Friday, May 15, 2009, Detective Brian Coen obtained a search warrant for a home on Ellerton Road in Quincy.

At approximately 6:05 P.M., Detectives Brian Coen, William O'Brien, Edward Ryan, and Bill Ward, along with Officers Edward Hartnett, Patrick Calabaro of the Special Operations Unit (SOU), and Officers Michael Duran, Dennis Keenan, and Paul Foley of the Uniform Division, executed the search warrant.

Upon entering the property, the Detectives spotted the suspect seated inside the detached garage at the end of the driveway to the left of the house. Detective O'Brien seized the suspect while Officer Duran spoke with the suspect's three-year-old child, who was playing in the driveway. Officer Keenan and Detective Ward knocked on the front door of the residence several times while announcing Quincy Police. After a brief period of time a female voice from inside the residence yelled something.

Detective Ward again announced Quincy Police but no one came to the door, so he then turned the doorknob of the front door and entered with Officer Keenan. A female later identified as the suspect's mother met them in the hallway and she was advised about the search warrant. Detectives Coen and Ryan entered into the residence from the unlocked back door. A copy of the search warrant was given to the occupants and their Miranda Rights were provided.

Detective Coen interviewed the suspect, who said that there were no narcotics and was not concerned about the Police searching his home. Massachusetts State Trooper Keith Pantazelous and his narcotics trained K9 Rocky arrived and conducted a search of the garage area where suspect #1 was still seated. K9 Rocky indicated a positive response for narcotics in the right side of the garage, so Detectives Coen and Ward, along with Officer Hartnett, searched the garage and found a nylon bag inside a Rubbermaid container, holding two shot guns wrapped in clothing.

Officer Keenan asked the suspect to produce an FID card or License to carry a firearm but the only card he showed was an I.D. card for a gun range. While inspecting the shotguns it was discovered that one of the shotgun barrels was "sawed-off." Suspect #1 was placed under arrest for two counts of "Illegal Possession of a Firearm and Possession of a sawed-off shotgun."

The suspect, awaiting the wagon transport, stated that he wanted to talk and then admitted to having narcotics on in the house. He offered to show where the narcotics were if the Police agreed not to search any further and disrupt his family. The Detectives informed him that they were going to search the entire property but if he told them where narcotics were, it would make the search go much quicker. He also asked for a low bail but was told that would be the decision of the Bail Clerk. The suspect led Detectives to his bedroom and said that the narcotics were in the pocket of his jacket on the wall.

Detective Ward retrieved a plastic bag containing three plastic bags which appeared to be both crack cocaine (two bags) and powdered cocaine (one bag), then asked the suspect how much cocaine was here and he said, "About 20 grams." Officer Peter Clancy transported the suspect to the station for booking.

Detective Coen went back to searching the garage and found another firearm and 9mm ammunition inside a Chiavari Regal box. This firearm was a 9mm. Sig Sauer with a defaced serial number. The ammunition was marked "law enforcement use only" 9mm hollow-point ammunition. Trooper Pantazelous and K9 Rocky conducted a search of the residence and found the presence of narcotics in the ceiling of the basement.

The Trooper opened up the drop ceiling and removed a box that contained $1100.00 in $100 bills. He also discovered two small digital scales with white residue in the same location. A further search of the home uncovered numerous rounds of ammunition, 59 vials, a Stun Gun Backpack and a Police scanner. As a result of the above stated facts and items seized, the suspect was charged with "Trafficking cocaine, Possessing a controlled substance with intent to distribute within a school zone and Possession of a Sawed-off Shotgun, 3 counts of possessing a firearm without and FID or License, Defacing a firearm se-

NQ Drops 1st Round Playoff Game, 5-0 Raiders Fall To Walpole; Season Still A Success

By SEAN BRENNAN

A successful season came to a sudden end for the North Quincy Red Raiders last Saturday afternoon at Adams Field following a 5-0 loss to Walpole High School in a Division I South Sectional tournament game.

The defeat in the state tournament may have closed the book on the season quicker than was expected for the Red Raiders, but this team has nothing to be ashamed of. The 2009 Red Raiders helped get North Quincy baseball back on the map and, in the process, helped the program get back on track after several years of average to below average play.

North Quincy finished the spring with a record 16 regular season wins (one victory shy of the all-time school record of 17 set in 1998). The team also captured the school's first division title since 1989, winning the Patriot League's Fisher Division crown in their first year playing in this ultra-competitive league. The Red Raiders also earned their first tournament appearance since 2002, breaking a streak of seven years without playing a meaningful post-season game.

Pretty good stuff and according to NQ head coach John Fidalgo, it should only get better next season.

"We set a goal at the beginning of the season to make the tournament, and we did just that," Fidalgo said. "It was disappointing to lose in the first-round, but the team's attitude this season went from 'hoping to win,' to 'expecting to win.' That was the biggest improvement the coaching staff saw all season from this team.

"We will be back next year and we expect to be just as good, if not better."

Last Saturday at Adams Field, North faced a talented Walpole High School squad in the first-round and came up short. Junior pitcher Ryan Louis did his best to keep the Raiders in the game, pitching eight strong innings and striking out eight Rebel batters, but despite his performance on the hill, North Quincy could get very little going at the dish.

Senior Matt Rodriguez (two hits) and junior John Ainsley (two hits) both finished with multiple hits, but it was not enough to carry North past Walpole.

"It was the first time playing in a post-season game for any of my players and before the game we talked about holding them (Walpole) to a 1-2-3 first inning and then getting out there and getting some hits to help take some of the pressure off. But Walpole scored four runs in the first, and it seemed like after that, the game kind of started moving in fast forward.

"Instead of slowing the game down and playing the way we had all season long, we started to try and do too much. It was understandable. Everyone wanted to be that batter who got us going. That stuff happens in baseball and unfortunately we couldn't get anything against them. We kind of reverted back to 'hoping to win' instead of 'expecting to win,' and it showed on the field.

"Walpole was a post-season tested team, having played in the South finals last year against BC High, and most of their players have played in the tournament for the last four years. It was tough to lose, but my staff is very proud of what this team did accomplish this year."

Fidalgo and his staff will have to contend with the departure of nine seniors when the 2010 season gets started next March. These nine players include Rodriguez, Joe Vialpando, Joe Edgerly, Danny Russell, Frank Flora, Lamonte Toombs, Paul Reardon, Matt Jay and Ben Leahy, and all nine have left the program in better shape than when they first arrived in the scene.

"These nine will be missed, but we have a great collection of talent coming back," Fidalgo added. "And to be honest, many of these seniors were role players. Losing Rodriguez, our starting catcher may hurt, but we do have a very good jayvee catcher coming up in Mike Stille. Edgerly was our #3 starter, but we also have pitching talent at the jayvee and freshmen levels, so we are expecting them to make the jump to varsity. But all of our graduating seniors have helped to get North Quincy baseball back where we want it to be.

"Next season we should be just as good and our goals will be even higher. These kids are all committed to baseball throughout the year, be it playing legion ball or fall ball, and I am certain that our team will be just as good next season."

Win or lose, North Quincy baseball is back, and that can only be a good thing for the school and the city.

"It was a banner year for North Quincy baseball," Fidalgo said proudly. "I am so proud of what this team accomplished and we are already looking forward to getting started up again in 2010."

Note: The NQHS and QHS baseball teams will be holding the 1st Annual Alumni Game on August 22 at 7 p.m. at Adams Field. Any past player should email nqhsbaseball@yahoo.com for additional information about the game.

Bill Dunn, Jr. Memorial Road Race June 27

The Bill Dunn, Jr. Memorial Road Race will be held Saturday, June 27 in Houghs Neck. This event is a great time for friends and family of Bill Dunn, Jr. to gather in honor of his life and share memories with each other.

This is the third year that the road race is being held and each year the support and participation is remarkable.

Registration for the annual event will begin at 7 a.m. at the St. Thomas Aquinas Hall on Darrow Street in Quincy. Those interested can participate in a five-mile run or a two-mile walk, beginning at 9 a.m.

Prizes will be awarded for the first place male/female runner and the first Houghs Neck resident (male/female). The first 600 people to register will receive a free race t-shirt.

Following the road race, a barbeque will be held courtesy of local donations. There will be a DJ and a 50/50 raffle, and the race committee will be giving away a scholarship the day of the race.

Proceeds from this year's race will benefit the Bill

Dunn, Jr. Memorial Scholarship, which provides scholarships to Quincy High School students, and also other local organizations.

Day-of-race registration is $20, however, for those that sign up before June 15, the registration fee is $15. Registration forms are available at www.RememberB.com and can be mailed to: Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Road Race, 105 Edgewater Drive, Quincy, MA 02169.

For more information contact Margaret Dunn at 617-471-9075.

QRD Announces Sponsorship of Hershey National Track & Field Program

The Quincy Recreation Department (QRD) and Recreation Director Barry J. Welch announced Tuesday that the department will be sponsoring the Hershey National Track and Field Youth Program by hosting a community meet, open to boys and girls ages 9-14, on June 16 and 17.

Registration for the Quincy meets will be held at 5:30 p.m., Tuesday, June 16 for the boys and Wednesday, June 17 for the girls, at Cavanaugh Stadium (Birch St. off Hollis Ave near Atlantic Middle School in North Quincy). Both meets will begin at 6 p.m.

This program is open to all youngsters' ages 9-14 and participants do not need to have any previous track experience or be a member of a community track program. There are no entry fees.

The age of potential participants shall be his/her age as of December 31, 2009. Both boys and girls will compete in three age categories: 9-10, 11-12 and 13-14. Those youngsters currently eight years old, but who will turn nine before 12/31/09, may compete in the 9-19 age group. Youngsters currently 14-years old and will turn 15 before 12/31/09, are not eligible.

The events are as follows:

Age 9-10 Boys & Girls: 50-yard dash, 100-yard dash, 200-yard dash, 400-yard dash, 4 x 100-yard relay, standing long jump and softball throw.

Age 11-12 Boys & Girls: 100-yard dash, 200-yard dash, 400-yard dash, 800-yard dash, 4 x 100-yard relay, standing long jump and softball throw.

Age 13-14 Boys & Girls: 100-yard dash, 200-yard dash, 800-yard run, 1600-yard run, 4 x 100-yard relay, standing long jump and softball throw.

Welch noted: "Learning, participation, enjoyment and physical exercise are the main elements of this program. I must stress the importance of the basic philosophy of this program: to stimulate the participation of all eligible children. It is no way to be construed as an all-star program for chosen individuals. Through proper guidance and assistance from the QRD, it is our firm belief and hope that we may positively shape the direction of the future of these children."

For additional information, including a full list of the offered track and field events, contact the QRD at 617-376-1394.

Team Wins Double Dutch State Tournament Merrymount's "Tremendous 3" Jump To First-Place

Merrymount's "Tremendous 3," a double-dutch trio made up of Shannon Foley, Lauren Saccoach and Liana Cunningham, all third graders at Merrymount Elementary School, recently captured first-place at the Third Grade Level at the 17th Annual Massachusetts State Double Dutch Tournament held at Solomon Court on the campus of Northeastern University.

The annual tournament is run by the American Double Dutch League and is sponsored by the Red Auerbach Youth Foundation and Fitz Urban Youth Sport-Sport in Society.

Merrymount's "Tremendous 3" is part of the organization called the Beantown Jumpers and Patti Travers and Kathy Petrilli coach the girls. Foley, Saccoach and Cunningham have been jumping and performing together since the fall of 2007; the team, this year, improved so much and scored the highest overall, competing against two other third grade teams from Dorchester and Roxbury.

During the Singles Compulsory-portion of the competition, Cunningham did not stop the rope once and finished on time. Her performance was flawless, according to her coaches. Saccoach jumped the Speed-portion of the competition and only stepped on the rope once in two minutes of jumping.

During their Freestyle, the trio performed with such grace and precision that it was enjoyable to watch, said Petrilli and Travers. Foley started the routine by jumping over Saccoach into turning ropes and then performed several tricks, including pop-ups and kicks while her teammates turned the ropes and walked around the floor in a circle. Cunningham later executed her tricks with ease, including heel touches and speed dance moves; Saccoach then ended the routine with tricks that included holding her leg above her head, doing push-ups and forward crawls in the ropes.

The teamwork that the girls displayed at the competition was outstanding, according to their coaches.

The team, with their performance and standing, earned an invitation to the 2009 American Double Dutch League World Tournament in Sumter, South Carolina in June.

Last year, the Merrymount "Tremendous 3" won first-place at the local RAYF Double Dutch Tournament and this year the team also captured first-place, in the Singles Level 2-3rd-5th Grade level against ten other teams, at the local RAYF's 13th Annual Invitational Double Dutch Tournament back in April.

QMC Receives Heart Association Award

Quincy Medical Center recently received the American Heart Association's Get with the Guidelines - Coronary Artery Disease (GWTG-CAD) Gold Performance Award.

The award recognizes QMC's commitment and success in implementing a higher standard of cardiac care that effectively improves treatment of patients hospitalized with coronary artery disease.

Under the GWTG-CAD program, patients are started on aggressive risk reduction therapies such as cholesterol-lowering drugs, aspirin, ACE inhibitors and beta-blockers in the hospital and receive smoking cessation/weight management counseling as well as referrals for cardiac rehabilitation before they are discharged. Hospitals that receive the GWTG-

CAD Gold Performance Award have demonstrated for 24 consecutive months that at least 85 percent of its eligible coronary patients (without contraindications) are discharged following the American Heart Association's recommended treatment guidelines.

"The American Heart Association applauds Quincy Medical Center for its success in implementing the appropriate evidence-based care and protocols to reduce the number of recurrent events and deaths in cardiovascular disease patients," said Gregg C. Fonarow, M.D., national chairman of the Get with the Guidelines Steering Committee and Director of Ahmanson-UCLA Cardiomyopathy Center. "QMC has achieved a high level of performance in terms of implementing these life-prolonging treatments."

"QMC is dedicated to making our cardiac unit among the best in the country, and the American Heart Association's Get with the Guidelines program is helping us accomplish that by making it easier for our professionals to improve the long-term outcomes of our cardiac patients," said Aishia Springer, MS, RN, clinical manager of Cardiovascular Services. "We are pleased to be recognized for our dedication and achievement in cardiac care."

The American Heart Association's GWTG-CAD program helps hospitals increase the use of and adherence to the association's secondary prevention guidelines for coronary artery disease. Developed to assist healthcare professionals follow proven standards and procedures before patients are discharged, GWTG-CAD can help QMC reduce the risk of recurrent heart attacks and death in treated patients. The program mobilizes teams in acute care hospitals to implement American Heart Association/American College of Cardiology secondary prevention guidelines.

According to the American Heart Association, approximately 565,000 people suffer a new heart attack and 300,000 experience a recurrent heart attack each year. Statistics also show that within one year of a heart attack, 18 percent of men and 23 percent of women will die. Within five years after an attack, about 33 percent of men and 43 percent of women will die.

The American Heart Association's GWTG program is being implemented in hospitals around the country.

PREVENTIVE MEDICINE ASSOCIATES (PMA), a group of family practices located throughout Massachusetts, recently hosted an informational Open House at its newest office, the Quincy International Health Center, 275 Hancock St. Staff members met with members of the local community to educate them on PMA's philosophy and treatment practices. To Your Good Health
What to Drink When Exercising in the Heat

DEAR DR. DONOHUE:

I am taking my two teenage boys backpacking in the Southwest this August. It will be hot and dry, and I am preparing for those conditions. I need some guidance on what fluids to drink. I was taught that drinking plain water is the best way to stay hydrated. My older son says his class was told not to drink plain water, because it could cause brain damage. What is this all about? - F.W.

ANSWER: It's all about becoming sodium-depleted and having the brain swell as a result. The condition is hyponatremia.

It used to be taught that, when exercising in hot weather, people should guzzle water at every opportunity, even when they don't feel thirsty. That can be dangerous if the exercise lasts for hours and hours and if the only liquid drunk is water. Too much water dilutes body sodium. That, in turn, can cause brain swelling and, in the extreme, death.

Up-to-date advice is to let thirst be a rough guide for how much liquid you drink. If people are engaged in prolonged exercise, it is good to include some salt in the program. Half a teaspoon of salt and half a teaspoon of baking soda (sodium bicarbonate) in a quart of water can keep body sodium levels from dropping. For you and your sons, it would be advisable to salt your food and to eat some salty snacks -- another way to ensure body sodium doesn't bottom out.

Courtesy of ARAcontent
Hyponatremia is uncommon. Dehydration is common. For most, drinking water as a replacement fluid in hot weather is fine. It's not going to lead to a dangerous drop in body sodium. Only those who lose lots of sweat for long periods of time run the risk of hyponatremia by drinking pure water.

This is advice that doesn't apply only to athletes or backpackers. It applies to all those who are out working in hot weather and sweating up a storm.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have hypertension, and I go to the beach often. Can salt in salt water get through the skin as medical patches get through the skin? My doctors have increased my dose of medicine and have added additional medicines without much improvement in my blood pressure.

Could the salt water I swim in be keeping my blood pressure high? - G.S.

ANSWER: G.S., I know I answered this question before, but you must not have seen it. I'll do it again.

The salt in salt water doesn't get through your skin. Swimming in salt water doesn't raise blood pressure. It improves it. All exercise does.

If you miss the answer this time, G.S., I have to drop the question. People will think I'm obsessed with it.

The booklet on hypertension provides more details on this epidemic illness. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue -- No. 104W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Thwarting Summer's Little Creepy-Crawly - The Tick

(ARA) - For sheer skin-crawling summer creepiness, few experiences beat a tick bite. But worse than the unpleasant surprise of discovering you've been bitten by a tick are the health risks that come with the bite.

"I've been chomped by ticks multiple times, as has nearly anyone who's spent time in the outdoors," says Dr. Christopher Van Tilburg, editor of "Wilderness Medicine" magazine and the author of eight books on outdoor safety. "The tick drops onto your skin, burrows in painlessly and sucks. It's creepy to say the least. And beyond that, it's dangerous.

Tick bites can cause a variety of serious health problems, including Colorado Tick Fever, Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever, Tularemia and, of course, Lyme Disease."

Lyme affected at least 27,000 Americans in 2007, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC). And because it's often hard to diagnose, and many who are bitten by ticks don't even realize it until after symptoms appear, the actual number of Lyme cases is probably much higher.

So how do you avoid the disturbing, risky experience of a tick bite while enjoying all the great outdoor activities associated with summer fun? Van Tilburg offers a few tips for minimizing the risk of getting a tick bite:

Cover up

Unlike mosquitoes or fleas, the other top insect pests of summer, ticks don't jump or fly. They drop, fall or cling to humans from trees, bushes or long grass. When your summer adventures take you to an outdoor area that's a likely tick habitat, like the forest or a field of high grass, protect yourself with long-sleeved shirts and pants. Tuck the pants into your socks to protect as much skin as possible.

Use repellents

DEET is a very effective repellent for a range of insects, including ticks. Products like Ben's 100 pump enhance your overall protective efforts. Anyone who's ever tried to apply repellent to a small child will appreciate Ben's 30 wipes, offering a novel delivery method that puts the repellent in an easy-to-apply wipe that smoothes repellent onto the skin. If you're concerned about using a strong chemical on your own or your child's body, try a DEET-free alternative like Natrapel 8-hour, which contains 20 percent of the active ingredient Picaridin -- one of three types of repellents recommended by the CDC which has proven to be as effective as DEET in repelling insects. Natrapel's formula is also gear safe, so it won't damage your sunglasses or other plastic or synthetic materials.

OF GROWING RELEVANCE

If you were to lose a tooth due to trauma, infection, decay, or periodontal disease, wouldn't it be great if you could simply grow a replacement tooth? After all, when sharks lose teeth, the ones from the row behind them move in to take their places. Scientists doing research on the matter think that the possibility exists. In fact, geneticists have recently discovered the gene responsible for switching on the replacement-tooth mechanism. The so-called Osr2 gene resides below the top layer of gum tissue (epithelium) in mesenchymal tissue, where it combines efforts with two other genes to form budding teeth. Manipulating this gene is no doubt a tricky matter, but who knows what the future may hold?

This informative column has been brought to you as a public service. Early visits to your dentists can help ensure healthy and beautiful teeth. We provide a full range of dental treatments, including preventive, restorative, and cosmetic dentistry. Except in rare cases, gum disease can be prevented through daily plaque removal by brushing, cleaning between teeth with floss or interdental cleaners, eating a balanced diet, and regularly visiting us for professional cleanings. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Equally intriguing to scientists is the finding that the Osr2 gene is also associated with cleft palates. Further research may also reveal ways to prevent this birth defect.

W. Richard Smith Memorial Concert Sunday At Covenant

The fifth annual W. Richard Smith Memorial Concert will be held Sunday, June 7 at 4 p.m. at Covenant Congregational Church, 315 Whitwell St., Quincy Center.

This year's concert theme is "Celebrating Quincy Musicians."

Each of the performers regularly share their musical talents with the Quincy community. They include: Susan Bill, viola player; Lambert Brandes, organist at Wollaston Church of the Nazarene; Alan Thomas, organist at First Presbyterian Church of Quincy; Rock Whiting, organist at Faith Lutheran Church of Quincy; and Christine Fahey, pianist at Covenant Congregational Church.

"Quincy is blessed with many wonderful musicians in our churches and this year we made the decision to highlight some of them in this special way," said Rev. Karen Palmatier, pastor of Covenant Church.

The annual concert is named for a much loved former choir director and organist of the Covenant Church.

The concert is free and a reception will follow the concert.

OBITUARIES

Sr. Catherine T. Corcoran, 80
Order of Sisters of Charity, Author, Historian

A funeral Mass for Sister Catherine Theresa Corcoran, 80, of Quincy, was celebrated May 29 in the Mt. St. Vincent Chapel, Wellesley.

Sister Corcoran died May 27 at the Mount St. Vincent Home for the Sisters of Charity, Wellesley.

Born and raised in the Upham's Corner-section of Dorchester, she attended St. Peter's Elementary School in Dorchester and St. Patrick's High School in Roxbury—both schools run by nuns from the Sisters of Charity of Halifax, Nova Scotia, an order founded by Elizabeth Ann Seton.

Sr. Corcoran then attended Emmanuel College and upon graduation in 1950, entered the order of the Sisters of Charity that had mentored her as a child and adolescent. In 1953, she professed her vows as "Sister Leo Claire." After Vatican II, when religious sisters were allowed to use their birth names, she also became known as "Sister Theresa."

She later earned her Master's Degree in History from Villanova University and a PhD in History from Georgetown University.

An accomplished historian, she is the author of a biography of Christian activist Vida Dutton Scudder, and of Mount St. Vincent University: A Vision Unfolding, a history of the founding of Mt. St. Vincent's University in Halifax. Established in 1873, Mt. St. Vincent's became the first degree-granting university for women in Canada, and was a pioneer in the field of women's education.

Sister Corcoran served on the faculty of Mt. St. Vincent's from 1965-1981.

Returning to Massachusetts in 1984, she served as Secretary of the General Counsel of the Sisters of Charity, one of the highest positions in the order, which then had over 1,400 members in the United States, Canada, Bermuda, the Dominican Republic and Peru. She retired from the General Counsel in 1992.

Sister Corcoran also taught in the public schools in Cape Breton, Nova Scotia, at the Academy of the Assumption in Wellesley and at Aquinas Junior College in Milton.

In 2003, the Corcoran Family endowed a scholarship at Emmanuel College in honor of Sister Theresa's many good works and accomplishments. That same year, Sister Theresa celebrated her 50th year as a Sister of Charity and again professed her vows before a large gathering of religious sisters and members of her family.

Sister of P. Leo and Joseph Corcoran, both of Milton, Claire Carten, Bernadette Richards and Frances Richer, all of Milton and the late Mary and John Corcoran.

She is also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Interment was in St. Mary's Cemetery, Needham.

A THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

Thomas Jefferson once said: "When angry, count ten before you speak, if very angry, a hundred."

Anger can be a helpful endowment if it is kept under control. Without it injustices in life would be allowed to pass by without either protest or understanding.

But anger can be tricky. It can easily get out of hand. When it becomes a burning rage, it becomes a distinct liability and can become troublesome and dangerous.

One cannot imagine life on this planet without fire. Yet fire, when it gets out of hand, is ravaging beyond description. Anger, like fire, can get out of hand and be ravaging, too.

A person who lets anger get out of control needs to call upon as many "fire departments" he can to help him get the burning rage under control.

Anger properly controlled can be good, but anger, like fire, can also destroy. Anger may be a necessary factor of life, but it performs only under strict control. Remember, anger is often more harmful than the injury that caused it!

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19)
There's nothing an Aries Lamb likes less than having to tackle a humdrum task. But finding a creative way to do it can make all the difference. A more exciting time awaits you this weekend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)
Finishing up a job on time leaves you free to enjoy your weekend without any Taurine guilt pangs. A romantic attitude from an unlikely source could take you by surprise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
Moving in a new career direction might be seen by some as risky. But if you have both the confidence to see it through and the facts to back you up, it could prove rewarding.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
Holding back on a decision might be difficult, considering how long you've waited for this opportunity. But until you're able to resolve all doubts, it could be the wiser course to take.

LEO (July 23 to August 22)
You still need to move carefully where financial matters are concerned. Better for the Lion to move slowly than pounce on a "promising" prospect that doesn't keep its promises.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22)
A rejection of an idea you believe in can be upsetting. But don't let it discourage you. Get yourself back on track and use what you've learned from the experience to try again.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22)
The early part of the week could find you looking to balance your priorities between your family obligations and your career responsibilities. Pressures begin to ease by week's end.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21)
An associate's problem could cause unavoidable delays in moving ahead with your joint venture. If so, use the time to look into another project you had previously set aside.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21)
Although a financial problem could be very close to being resolved in your favor, it's still a good idea to avoid unnecessary spending for at least a little while longer.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19)
Support for some unwelcome workplace decisions begins to show up, and continues to build, so that by week's end, the gregarious Goat is as popular as ever.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18)
Congratulations. Deciding to attend a social function you might have earlier tried to avoid could turn out to be one of the best decisions you've made in a long time.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20)

OBITUARIES

Nancy A. Webb Office Manager

A funeral Mass for Nancy A. (Stanton) Webb, of Abington, formerly of Quincy, was celebrated June 1 in St. John's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Webb died May 26.

She had worked as an office manager at Herb Connolly Auto Group in Framingham for over 35 years. Her life revolved around her family, especially her grandchildren. She also loved vacationing in the Berkshires and going to Nantasket Beach in Hull.

Wife of James Webb of Abington; mother of John Bartlett and his wife Kim of Weymouth, Cheryl Warren and her husband Greg of Milton and Charles Bartlett of Quincy; step-mother of James Webb, Jr. of Rockland, Kenneth Webb and his wife Lynne of Rockland, Stephen Webb and his wife of Elena of Abington and Cheryl Webb of Rockland; sister of Edwin Stanton of Quincy; grandmother of Joseph, Paige, Emily, Jason, Christopher, Zachary, Nicholas, Kenneth, Jr. and Michael.

Interment was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Keohane Funeral Home, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made in her name to Grief Weavers, LLC, 40 Edith Rd., East Weymouth, MA 02189.

Helen J. Mullett, 97

A funeral Mass for Helen J. (Ruane) Mullett, 97, of Quincy, formerly of Charlestown, was celebrated Tuesday in St. John's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Mullett died May 29.

A longtime resident of Quincy, she had lived at the Fenno House for many years. She enjoyed walking and loved to be surrounded by people, especially her family. Wife of the late Stanley J. Mullett; mother of Ellen M. Libby of Rockland and Mary A. Franzosa of Reading.

She is also survived by seven grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren.

Interment was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Keohane Funeral Home, Quincy.

A Job Well Done

rial number. Possession of an electric stun gun, 3 counts of unsecured firearms accessible to minors and Possession of a large capacity feeding device (15 round 9mm magazine) The suspect, a 32 year old Quincy resident has been found guilty on three separate occasions for Distribution of Class B and Possession of Class B with the Intent to Distribute. As a result of this incident, a 51A Child Abuse report was filed with the Department of Children and Families due to the suspect's daughters (3 and 9 years old) being exposed to this extremely dangerous situation.

RECENT SCAM: West Quincy resident John Chesna notified me that he received a letter with an $18,000 check from Ritchie Feed and Seed Inc. in Canada. He knew right away that it was a scam based on the following; he didn't recognize the company, he had no reason to believe that someone would give him this money, it wasn't a lottery, the envelope had a stamp on it rather than metered mail that companies use, the date was not in the format required, the paper was too thin and the signatures didn't look right.

Mr. Chesna then called the Ritchie company and they confirmed that the check was bogus, that the check number was issued to someone else and there were at least three other similar incidents. The Ottawa Police are investigating the incidents too.

This case was different though - in most cases, victims are instructed to cash the check and send a portion back to the scam artist. In this scam, there were no directions, so the scammers weren't too bright! A few days later, the victim learns that the check is bogus but, in good faith, has already sent a money order back and is now out thousands of dollars. The only reason this scam goes on is because there are still enough victims out there!

ANOTHER SCAM: This incident occurred in the Sumner Street area, with a male posing as a Department of Public Works employee checking water pressure inside the home. The elderly female allowed the male in and watched him closely and after a short period, he left. The DPW confirmed that they did not have anyone checking water pressure. This woman risked harm to herself as well as being robbed. BEST ACTION:

Do not open the door. Call the Police. Let us check him out. This will protect you and your neighbors!

Josephine R. Beauchamp Gourmet Cook

A funeral Mass for Josephine R. "Jo" (Cavanagh) (Colantuono) Beauchamp, of Quincy, formerly of Hyde Park, was celebrated Tuesday in St. Ann's Church, Wollaston.

Mrs. Beauchamp died May 28.

Wife of Hector "Beau" Beauchamp of Quincy and the late William Cavanagh; mother of Paul Beauchamp, William Cavanagh and his wife JoAnn of Ashland, Stephen Cavanagh and his wife Chris of Plympton, Thomas Cavanagh and his wife Cindy of Quincy, Denise Barbuto and her husband Frank of Lakeville, Peter Beauchamp and his wife Stefanie of Hanover and the late Joan Cavanagh; sister of Nicholas Colantuono of Dedham, Ann Ward of Sharon, Eleanor Barczak of Wakefield, Rosemarie Mariano of Wapole and the late Millie DeNapoli and Elizabeth Kelly.

She is also survived by 15 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren and many nieces and nephews.

Interment was in Forest Hills Cemetery, Boston.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Keohane Funeral Home, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made in her name to the Joan Cavanagh Memorial Scholarship Fund, c/o Eastern Bank, 348 Bedford St., Lakeville, MA 02347 or to the American Cancer Society, Central NE Region, 18 Tremont St., Suite 700, Boston, MA 02108.

Community Group Also Recognizes Lt. Dan Minton; Elects Officers At Annual Meeting

Ward 5 Association Honors Memory Of Henry Bosworth

The Ward 5 Community Association recently honored the memory of Henry Bosworth as its Ward Five Citizen of the Year for his dedication to making the City of Quincy a better place to work, live, and enjoy.

"Few people impact the day to day life of a community," said Ward 5 Association President Richard Gormley in presenting the award.

"Even fewer accomplish this in a quiet and unassuming way. Henry Bosworth did both during his lifetime. Henry's love and pride of Quincy was demonstrated through his journalistic talents and his commitment to the community."

Senator Michael Morrissey presented the Bosworth family with a citation from the Massachusetts' State Senate. He applauded the Ward 5 Committee for its selection.

"Henry Bosworth was a true community activist who appreciated the neighborhoods and their undertakings, tirelessly promoted community activism and supported local civic groups like the Ward 5 Association," Morrissey said.

Representative Bruce Ayers was unable to attend the event because of State House business. Ayers asked the Ward 5 Association to present a citation from the Massachusetts House of Representatives to the Bosworth family on his behalf.

"Henry Bosworth and The Quincy Sun have helped to chronicle and define the Quincy we know and love", said Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro.

"This deserving recognition as the Ward 5 Community Association's Citizen of the Year reflects the extent to which Henry and the entire Bosworth Family have shaped our neighborhoods and touched the lives of all Quincy residents."

Lt. Dan Minton of the Quincy Police Department was the recipient of the High Five Award for his outstanding leadership and contributions to the Ward 5 community and the city of Quincy. Lt. Minton provides quality safety awareness programs to our residents and is a mentor to the students of Quincy.

Morrissey said. "Lt. Danny Minton is an excellent police officer who grew up in Squantum and knows the ins and outs of Quincy. As a practical matter, his deep understanding of the town and its citizens allows him to better serve the community."

Receiving the City of Quincy Council award was Nancy Barron, past president of the Ward 5 Community Association.

"Nancy Barron has long served this city as an educator, administrator, and civic leader," Gutro said.

"She is quick to contribute, and equally quick to deflect praise - but she surely deserves it. It is a privilege to recognize and congratulate her for her outstanding efforts on behalf of our city, our children, and our neighborhoods," he added.

Elected to serve as the 2009-2010 Ward 5 Community Association's officers are:

President: Richard Gormley

Vice President: Neil McCole

Treasurer: Liz Tucker
Public Relations: Margaret Hall

Secretary & Newsletter Editor: Lisa Patacchiola.

Twenty-four graduates of the Drug Court program were applauded last Thursday at Quincy District Court by family, friends, program directors and public officials for completing the court's intensive program to combat substance abuse.

As the graduates rose to accept their certificates, they spoke a few words of gratitude for what the Drug Court had done to change their lives around, and how the program had sometimes gotten them off the streets or kept them out of jail.

Discuss Probe In Private Mayor Meets With IG On Honeywell

Mayor Thomas Koch met privately with the state Inspector General Gregory Sullivan for nearly two hours Tuesday to discuss an ongoing probe of the $32 million Honeywell energy program that was triggered by administration findings of wholesale failings with the 2007 deal.

"We had a very productive meeting, and I am greatly appreciative of the hard work the Inspector General and his team have clearly put into this investigation," Koch said in a statement. "When we took office, we immediately started taking a hard, honest look at this, and it did not take us long to conclude that it was a complete disaster. Our position remains unchanged. We will not stand for it."

The mayor did not divulge many details of the meeting, citing the sensitive nature of the state investigation, but did point to the city's original findings of widespread inflated billing and nonexistent oversight for a program that was originally pitched as a way to save money on energy costs.

Specifically, the city now view found that a flow meter

Art Commission Will Monitor New Center Views

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Beauty will be as important in the revival of Quincy Center as bricks and mortar under a Public Art Commission approved recently by City Council.

"This commission will work with StreetWorks to make public space more attractive," said Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly who collaborated with Planning Director Dennis Harrington to develop the Public Art Program ordinance affecting "only Quincy Center districts."

City Council unanimously approved the ordinance on May 25 after minor revisions affecting mitigation payments.

"We want it to make the best use of public spaces," Harrington said of the fund, which will be raised through payments of one-half of one percent of a project's cost from major developers in the urban renewal district.

Under the plan, developers may choose to commission art for their own public spaces and such designs will be reviewed and approved by the commission.

The Public Art Commission will review all space accessible by the public from exteriors to lobbies and atriums, according to Harrington who said of aesthetic decisions, "It should not be left to developers to decide."

The ordinance "excludes small property owners," said Harrington referring to Section 4 of the ordinance which cites "all development, redevelopment, remodeling or converting greater than

Parade Saturday At 7 P.M., Fireworks Over Black's Creek

Dan Quirk To Sponsor Flag Day Fireworks

Quincy auto dealer Daniel Quirk will sponsor the fireworks spectacular at Saturday's Flag Day Celebration, ensuring that the down economy will have no effect on the annual community event.

"We are truly lucky in Quincy to have so many business people who do so much every day to give back to the community, and Mr. Quirk has stepped up time and time again," said Mayor Thomas Koch, chairman of the Flag Day Committee. "We are very grateful for his donation this year."

The Flag Day Parade will step-off from Coddington Street in Quincy Center at 7 p.m. on Saturday and will proceed down Hancock Street before turning down Merrymount Parkway and disbanding at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park.

This year's grand marshal is U.S. Army Brigadier General James McConville and long-time Boy Scout leader Mike Berry will be honored with the Richard J. Koch Memorial Youth Service Award.

The parade will be followed by a flag-raising ceremony at Pageant Field with an impressive 30-foot-by-60-foot version of Old Glory. A patriotic performance by the American Belles, a fly-over (weather permitting), and howitzer salute will highlight the evening's celebration leading up to the dazzling 30-minute fireworks display over Black's Creek.

Families of deceased veterans may drop off their flags at the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Wollaston. The memorial flags will be placed on the "Quincy Salutes its Veterans" float in the procession.

Edward J. Keohane, chairman of the Quincy Partnership, one of the organizations sponsoring the parade, assures that all flags lent for display will be well cared for while in the parade committee's possession.

Gutro Seeks Inclusion Of Dorothy Quincy Homestead In Adams Historical Park

City councillors voted unanimously June 1 to support new efforts to include the Dorothy Quincy Homestead within the boundaries of the Adams National Historic Park.

"We think this is important," Ward 5 City Councillor Douglas Gutro said this week, citing "a number of compelling reasons" connecting the building and Dorothy Quincy to the Adams heritage and American history.

Gutro believes that the new administration in Washington may be receptive to joining the history and beauty of the Dorothy Quincy Homestead with the Adams National Historic Park.

Previous efforts to seek acceptance by the National Park Service have been unsuccessful.

The building is located just about a stone's throw from the borders of the Adams National Historical Park at the corner of Hancock Street and Butler Road on the banks of Furnace Brook.

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead served as a home for five generations of Quincys, one of the leading families of Massachusetts.

"This is the earliest surviving house of the Quincy family; all members of the family, including Abigail ultimately trace back to it," notes Gutro in his resolution.

One of the many connections.

Formal Garden Dedication At Upper Merrymount Park Saturday

The formal garden at Upper Merrymount Park—a project more than a decade in the making—will be formally dedicated in a ceremony at 2 p.m. on Saturday, Mayor Thomas Koch announced Tuesday.

The project's completion, including the centerpiece fountain donated by the Quincy Partnership, will make Charles Francis Adams' original vision of a passive parkland jewel for the entire city to enjoy a reality, said Koch, who restarted the project shortly after taking office.

"So many people contributed to make this a reality, we absolutely could not let it remain unfinished," said Koch. "I am so proud that Charles Francis Adams' vision for a beautiful, passive park is becoming a reality and I look forward to celebrating it on Saturday afternoon with all the people who worked hard to make it happen and the entire community."

In addition to the fountain, the project includes new walkways, the re-location of several memorials, benches, a new treescape and flowers. The project is being paid through a $100,000 state grant secured by state Rep. Ronald Mariano and a park improvement bond through the city's hotel room tax, Koch said.

Local contractor P.J. Kennedy and Sons donated thousands of dollars in plumbing work, and the first phase of iron fencing at the site was constructed by students from the Center for Technical Education. Officials believe students will continue that work in the future.

Charles Francis Adams II donated the 80-acre Merrymount Park to Quincy in 1885, and at about the same time he asked his friend, legendary landscape architect Frederick Law Olmsted to help design developments for the land. That plan was shelved for decades until two of Olmsted's associates complied a report that echoed the original design nearly 50 years later.

That report formed the foundation for planning the formal garden, which began more than a decade ago at a time when city parks were undergoing a major transformation. Landscape architect Mary Smith worked together with city officials on designs, calling the park "reminiscent of Olmsted's design style yet relevant to the needs of today's residents of Quincy."

Redevelopment Plan Before City Council

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Few proposals have sparked more excitement across the city than the billion dollar plan proposed by StreetWorks, LLC, of White Plains, NY, to reinvent Quincy Center with new business, housing and green space.

Mayor Thomas Koch told the City Council's Public Hearing recently that over 1500 residents attended nearly a dozen neighborhood meetings over the past months.

"The people of our city are more than ready to see a downtown we can be proud of," Koch said.

After Koch spoke, more than a dozen business leaders and residents wholeheartedly endorsed the renewal plan and spoke eagerly of the city's future.

Now, Quincy Center's redevelopment plan is in the hands of City Councillors who scheduled their first review of revised renewal plans beginning Tuesday after The Quincy Sun deadline.

The Downtown Committee headed by Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly will consider the proposed modifications as well as the designation of StreetWorks, LLC, of White Plains, NY as Master Developer.

Councillors must officially approve the city's master developer as well as changes in financial details, the redevelopment proposal, and reductions in the parking plan approved in the original Urban Revitalization District Plan (URDP) in 2007.

According to Planning

Director Dennis Harrington, the revised plan reduces parking spots in the area from 5,000 to 4,000.

Once the council and mayor sign off on a plan, state officials will, also, weigh in on conservation issues, the developer, and redevelopment plan changes.

StreetWorks partner Richard Heapes recently described changes that will highlight Adams Green, double the greenspace at Clividen Street and daylight Town Brook.

However, this plan, also, includes the rerouting of Town Brook which currently runs under the Hancock Parking Lot.

Under the revised plan, developers in the renewal area would apply for a Certificate of Consistency, rather than a Special Permit as originally required.

Councillors must also consider citizen input on such matters as a shadow ordinance affecting approval of the taller buildings and the requirement for affordable housing or mitigation funds.

In its report, the CAC questioned the different parking ratios set for leased and owned housing, as well as a section in the URDP that sets parking standards as a ceiling, rather than a minimum.

As Master Developer, Street Works would develop the city's public parking areas, the Ross Garage and the Hancock Lot, through a public private partnership.

The two lots, currently being appraised by Foster Appraisal Company of Leominster, raise revenues of $800,000 to $900,000 a year but those revenues have been diminishing in recent years as more business and agencies, such as the Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles, have left the city.

Heapes said new businesses will be invited to Quincy Center but the small businesses will be a major factor and Hancock Street will remain the major retail district.

Olin Taylor Honored With Special Day

City councillors recently honored Olin Taylor proclaiming June 1, 2009, "Olin A. Taylor Day" in recognition of his decades of work honoring veterans and protecting the city's environment.

Taylor, who is nearing his 93rd birthday, continues his volunteer work to this day repairing or replacing markers at veterans' graves.

According to Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, Taylor has refurbished, repaired or replaced more than 2,000 plaques and markers for veterans graves at the city's cemeteries.

Veterans' Agent Thomas Stansbury told councillors each damaged or weather-beaten marker is a challenge for Taylor who polishes and doctors each item to its original finish.

Raymondi cited the thousands of hours, money and time given to veterans and city programs by Taylor since his retirement from Polaroid in 1985 after 41 years.

In addition to his work for veterans, Taylor served on the conservation commission and as a Trustee of the Thomas Crane Library as well as in veterans' posts and as a member of the Knights of Columbus.

Taylor was also honored as Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year in 1996.

Koch Considers Noise Law Compromise

Mayor Thomas Koch said Tuesday that he is exploring a compromise or a potential veto of an anti-noise ordinance approved by the City Council, that he said appears to be "too watered down" to have any practical impact.

Koch said his office formally received the new ordinance on Tuesday and is now analyzing its provisions, specifically a narrowly approved amendment that raised allowable noise levels by 10-decibel points over the original proposal.

"That is a dramatic change, so much so that it may make the law moot," said Koch. "We are exploring our options right now, and perhaps there is a middle ground we can find. If not, we will seriously consider an outright veto."

The original ordinance, proposed by Ward 6 City Councillor Brian McNamee, included maximum noise levels of 65-decibels at night, but the amendment raised that to 75-decibels. The City Council approved the amendment with a 5-4 vote and the full law unanimously.

The ordinance was submitted largely on behalf of Marina Bay residents, whom have repeatedly raised concerns over the years about noise generated by the nearby bars and nightclubs in the neighborhood.

Koch has two weeks to act on the law, which was ultimately approved unanimously by the City Council. If he vetoes it, a two-thirds vote of the City Council would be required for an override.

- On June 10, 1752, Benjamin Franklin flies a kite during a thunderstorm and collects a charge in a Leyden jar when the kite is struck by lightning, enabling him to demonstrate the electrical nature of lightning. He coined a number of terms used today, including "battery," "conductor" and "electrician."
- On June 14, 1777, during the American Revolution, the Continental Congress adopts a resolution stating that "the flag of the United States be 13 alternate stripes red and white" and that "the Union be 13 stars, white in a blue field, representing a new Constellation."

- On June 8, 1945, President Harry Truman issues Executive Order 9568, permitting the release of scientific information from previously top-secret World War II documents. The new classification system was designed to help transition wartime industries to peacetime and create a robust post-war economy.
- On June 12, 1952, Maurice Olley, Chevrolet's chief engineer, completes his chassis, code-named Opel, which would eventually become the chassis for the 1953 Corvette. The Corvette got its name from an extensive search through an English dictionary, which found that a corvette was a small-sized, speedy warship of the Royal Navy.

Puleo Out; Second School Seat Opens

For the second time in three weeks, a seat is opening on the Quincy School Committee.

School Committeeman Nick Puleo told the Sun he will not seek election to his school seat this fall. Three weeks ago, it was Ron Mariano who announced he too would not be a candidate for his school seat. Mariano, who is also a state representative, said he wanted to focus on his duties and responsibilities as the House assistant majority leader as well as serving his House constituents.

Puleo said he opted out of this fall's election in order to pursue a master's degree from Boston College.

"The opportunity to serve the students of Quincy Public Schools and voters of Quincy has been an honor," said the 26-year-old lifelong Quincy resident. "This decision has been very difficult, but continuing my education is the best decision right now for me and my family."

"I value too much the mission of our school system to enter into another term not knowing that I can commit 100 percent of my time and attention."

Early last year, Puleo was appointed to the School Committee by a special joint convention of the City Council and School Committee to fill the seat vacated by former School Committeeman James Timmins after he became city solicitor. Puleo finished fourth (first runner-up) in the 2007 school committee final election.

Puleo, a 2001 graduate of Boston College High School, will begin his studies at Boston College's new School of Theology in September. He received a scholarship to study ethics and the relationship between politics and religion.

Since last October, Puleo has worked as the chief of staff for state Sen. Stan Rosenberg of Amherst. Sen. Rosenberg is the President Pro Tem of the state senate.

He did not rule out future political prospects. "I'm always interested in exploring new ways to serve my community," Puleo said. "I plan on staying involved. Who knows what the future will hold."

With Mariano and Puleo out of the running, that leaves incumbent Anne Mahoney as the sole sitting School Committee member on this fall's ballot. Voters will elect three school committee members this fall.

Mahoney will officially launch her bid for a second four-year term at a "School's Out for Summer Re-election Campaign Kick-Off" Thursday, June 18 from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Best Western Adams Inn, 29 Hancock St., North Quincy. Suggested contribution is $35.

With two open school seats, it's anyone's guess how many candidates will jump into the race.

As of Tuesday, three other candidates have taken out nomination papers for School Committee. And all three of them had announced their candidacies earlier this year. They are:

- Karl Roos, age 41, of 8 Park St. A graduate of the University of Massachusetts in Amherst and Bentley College, he works in the pharmaceutical industry.

- Matthew Lockwood Mullaney, age 39, of 180 Gledale Rd. A graduate of Harvard and MIT, he is a market manager for Harvard Pilgrim's Massachusetts business.

- Rebecca McWilliams, age 26, of 24 Newcomb St. A licensed architect, she is a graduate of Roger Williams University and is enrolled in the Suffolk Law evening division.

Some political observers are surprised more candidates haven't expressed interest in running for School Committee with Mariano's departure from the race. It would be more bewildering if the field of candidates doesn't swell now that Puleo is out, too.

"I'm surprised it's been this quiet in terms of the number of candidates for the fall election," said City Clerk

Joseph Shea. "But times have changed. The economy is different and public service is becoming more and more challenging in light of budget restraints. There doesn't appear to be as much interest in public service as there used to be."

Shea pointed out that two years ago there was no city preliminary election for the first time in Quincy's history.

But that could certainly change over the next eight weeks. Nomination papers — with at least 50 signatures — must be submitted to the city's Board of Registrars by Tuesday, Aug. 4 at 5 p.m. To have a preliminary election, there must be three candidates for mayor, three for ward councillor, seven for city councillor at-large and seven for school committee.

So far, the best chance of having a city preliminary election may be for mayor. Incumbent Mayor Tom Koch announced his re-election bid in May. Last week, former incumbent William Phelan, who lost a bid for a fourth term to Koch in 2007, declared his candidacy for mayor. Phelan pulled nomination papers Tuesday afternoon.

And two other residents have taken out papers to run for mayor: Christopher Clark, age 42, of 359 East Squantum St., and Joseph O'Malley, 43, of 63 Island Rd.

There may also be a preliminary election in Ward 4. Incumbent Jay Davis, age 43, of 33 Shawmut St. is seeking is fourth term. Two challengers have pulled papers: Michael O'Connell, 61, of 35 Ridgewood Ln. and Brian Palmucci, age 31, of 138 Willard St.

In terms of the school race, Shea said he doubts the field of candidates will approach the number running in 2005. That year, three open seats triggered a field of 12 candidates on the preliminary ballot. In the final, Mahoney topped the ballot followed by Kevin Mulvey and Timmins. Rounding out the fourth through six spots were Celeste McGlone, Ronald Iacobucci and Joseph Keegan.

In 2007, there were only five candidates for school committee. The winners were: Jo-Ann Bragg, David McCarthy and Elaine Dwyer. Puleo was fourth and Eileen Mullen fifth.

Puleo said he hopes more candidates join the school committee race. "I think the more people who run for the school committee seats the better. I would encourage more people to run," he said.

Shea is also scratching his head over the apparent lack of interest in the open Ward 1 council seat. Long-time public servant and incumbent Leo Kelly is not seeking re-election. So far, the opening has attracted just two first-time candidates: Martin Aikens and Margaret Laforest. Both have taken out nomination papers.

Aikens is chairman of the Zoning Board of Appeals and is a business manager for Local 103. Laforest is a community activist and former president of the Houghs Neck Community Council. Both candidates hail from Houghs Neck.

There may be a third candidate entering the Ward 1 field. Joe Keegan of Merrymount, a former Quincy police officer and now an attorney with a law office in Quincy Center, told the Sun he is still considering a run for the Ward 1 seat. If he tosses his hat into the ring, it would be Keegan's second bid for Ward 1. In 2003, he challenged Kelly but lost by 268 votes (Kelly 1,901, Keegan 1,633.)

So, it appears political opportunity is knocking in Ward 1 and on the School Committee. But the question remains: will anyone else answer?

THE FOLLOWING incumbents have also pulled papers as of Tuesday: Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, age 54, 19 Small St.; Mayor Thomas P. Koch, 46, 249 Newbury Ave.; Councillor Joseph Finn, 53, 15 Williams St.; Councillor Michael McFarland, 55, 140 Summit Ave.; Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, 44, 230 Marlboro St.; Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis, 43, 33 Shawmut St.; Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymond, 61, 88 Elm St.; Councillor John Keenan, 45, 37 Hobomack Rd.; Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee, 52, 133 Commander Shea Blvd.; and Anne Mahoney, 43, 12 Ferriter St.

SOUTH SHORE BUICK CO.
50 ADAMS STREET, QUINCY
GRANITE 4690

THIS POSTCARD was published in 1940 by the South Shore Buick Company to mark the opening of their new building on Adams Street in Quincy Square. Sleek looking new Buicks can be seen in the new showroom windows. Founded in 1923, the company was in business for 86 years when it closed in February. A message on the back of the postcard claims that Buick outsold all other automobiles except the three lowest priced cars at the time. They were Chevrolet, Ford and Plymouth. When South Shore Buick closed, Buick's market share had slipped to 1% of U.S. auto sales. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Quincy, Milton Republicans Collecting Items For Troops

The Republican committees of Quincy and Milton are joining Weymouth's CarePacks to collect items needed for care packages to be sent to US troops in Iraq and Afghanistan.

A collection day will be held from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, June 27 at the Heritage Hall American Legion Post, 114, Granite Ave., Milton.

Residents are asked to drop off items for the troops, such as deodorant, cereal bars, cookies, candy and gum.

"As we approach Independence Day, we wanted to do something to show our troops that they are not forgotten and that we appreciate their sacrifice on our behalf," said Richard Pilla, Chairman of the Milton Republican Town Committee.

In addition to toiletries, clothing, non-perishable food and other items, monetary donations as well as cards and letters thanking a US serviceman or woman may also be dropped off at the collection site.

"The Fourth of July is the perfect time for Americans to thank the men and women who devote their lives to protecting our freedoms," said Jennifer Logue, chairman of the Quincy Republican City Committee. Cards and letters may be addressed to 'US Soldier' or 'US Serviceman.'

Monetary donations may be made payable to CarePacks, Inc. and either dropped off June 27 or mailed to CarePacks, Inc. PO Box 536, South Weymouth, MA 02190.

CarePacks is a non-profit organization --staffed and managed entirely by volunteers who are dedicated to sending care packages to U.S. troops to Iraq and Afghanistan. Founded in 2004, their goal is to provide soldiers with supplies to help improve their morale, mental health, and quality of life, and to remind soldiers that they are remembered by people back home.

The following is a list of some of the other items needed.

They are: T-shirts, bandana's, socks, prepaid phone cards, disposable cameras, bug repellent, baby wipes, shampoo, razors disposable, shaving cream gel, granola bars, Frisbees, pens, envelopes, paper, tea bags, ziplock sandwich quart size bags, instant soups noodles, feminine products, AA batteries.

Also, blank greeting cards, letters from kids, hairbrushes, playing cards, suntan lotion, sunglasses, toothpaste and brushes, coffee/coffee filters, powdered drink mixes, tennis balls, magazines, soft cover books, small bags of chips, Doritos, Fritos, lip balm, hand and body lotions, boxer shorts, sports bras, mouthwash, sugar, sugar substitute packets and puzzle books, electronic games.

We condemn its occurrence and will continue to encourage and enhance human rights for all in Quincy. Ann Yeomans Chairperson

Pops Concert Friday, Koch Flag Day Parade Saturday

By FRANK MCCAULEY

A two-day "Pre Summerfest" sponsored by the Koch Club, began Friday, June 13 with an outdoor Pops concert and concluded Saturday, June 14 with the 27th annual Koch Club Flag Day Parade and Celebration.

The weekend events were planned to commemorate the 350th anniversary of the founding of Mount Wollaston and the 200th anniversary of the nation's birth.

Major General George S. Patton, commander of the Army Readiness Region One at Fort Devens was the guest marshal in the Flag Day Parade.

Patton was the youngest of three children of World War II General George S. Patton, "Old blood and guts" as he was known to the men he commanded.

The parade will conclude at Veterans Memorial Stadium with a flag raising ceremony and brief program to end the festivities.

Concerned Over Repeated Vandalism Of Rainbow Flag

We are writing to express our deep concerns about the repeated vandalism of the rainbow flag that flies at the Church of the Presidents.

As Quincy's Human Rights Commission, we strive to work with all residents of our City to promote human rights and to create further awareness of issues related to them. Among our efforts are programs that increase mutual respect and appreciation of our growing diverse population.

The pattern of hateful acts against the rainbow flag, which target Quincy's gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender community, is painful to all who endeavor to build understanding and respect. We welcome an opportunity to continue discussions with all on this issue.

Please contact us through City Hall to do so.

As a longtime participant in the Anti-Defamation League's No Place for Hate program, the Com-

Quincy Christmas Parade Theme Contest Underway

Even though the Christmas Parade is six months away, the 51st "Theme Contest" that plays a significant role in its planning and preparation is now underway.

According to George White, Festival Committee Chairman, the contest is the "first and very important step in the planning of the event."

All entries must be received by Friday, Aug. 7, and be mailed to Ms. Carol Flynn, 79 Freeman St., North Quincy, MA 02170. The winner will be chosen during the month of August, and then notified.

The winner receives a gift of appreciation and invited to ride in an open convertible along the three mile parade route.

The parade takes place on the Sunday following Thanksgiving Nov. 29 at 12:30 p.m. The rain date is Sunday, Dec. 6.

New Senior Center To Be Named For Kennedys

When the city sold the John F. Kennedy Health Center near downtown a decade ago, Quincy lost its only landmark dedicated to the late president's family whose ties to the community continue to run deep.

That will change this month when the city's first senior center will be formally named the Kennedy Senior Center, in honor of the Kennedy family, said Mayor Thomas Koch, who received permission from the Council on Aging on Tuesday for the senior center dedication.

The center at the former Myles Standish School, the first of its kind in Quincy, will feature artwork honoring the Kennedy family and quotes from brothers Edward, Robert and John in the lobby, Koch said.

COA, Lions Seek Glasses

The Council on Aging is joining the Quincy Lions Club to collect glasses for the needy who need them but can't afford them.

If you have glasses you no longer need and would like to donate them to a worthy cause, call the COA at 617-576-1306.

The Council on Aging is now officially moved into the renovated building, and Koch said the formal dedication and public opening would be scheduled in coming weeks.

"We never replaced Quincy's tribute to the Kennedys after the health center was sold, and we believe this is a most fitting way to honor a unmatched legacy of public service," Koch said. "It is also an important recognition of the Greatest Generation, our friends whose connection to the Kennedys is the closest and whom we hope will be regular visitors to the senior center."

The new Senior Center will feature fitness programs, a computer lab, game rooms, arts and crafts, a full kitchen, movies, a music room and an expanded meal program, said Council on Aging Director Thomas Clashy, whose programs have been scattered around the city for many years.

The Koch administration looked to the former school building to host the Senior Center as a cost-effective alternative to new construction. About $1 million in renovations includes no additional cost to taxpayers, as work was funded through an existing capital improvement bond originally budgeted to pay for a new garage at the Department of Public Works more than two years ago.

That project was cancelled after officials determined the plan was inadequate. Required renovations were more serious than the city originally envisioned, with a bulk of the work done to remove asbestos, replace windows, plumbing and heating systems and update handicapped access to the building. A major sewer project was also needed at the site, and that project was funded through construction permit fees via the Sewer Rehabilitation Fund.

The new facility will be several times larger and less expensive than the previous plan to house the senior center at the Park Department. Those plans were anticipated to cost as much as $3 million, Koch said.

"Our seniors have long deserved a place to call their own, and I am proud that we will be able to create a Senior Center that is both spacious and cost-efficient," Koch said.

Hydrants Off-Limits To Landscapers

Landscapers will no longer be tapping public hydrants for private projects under a directive issued last week by Public Works Commissioner Larry Prendeville.

"They will be required to come down to the DPW yard," Prendeville said of landscapers who had, previously, been issued permits for specific hydrants on city streets.

Those permits allowed applicants to rent meters which registered the volume of water taken from a hydrant. Users were sent monthly bills.

However, Ward 3 City Councillor Daniel Raymond last week charged that the longtime practice of issuing hydrant permits in Quincy and other municipalities " allows people the opportunity to steal water."

DAN RAYMOND

Raymond called for "an end to these kinds of arrangement."

Even close oversight of the permit process might not be enough, according to Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee who asked whether landscapers could take Quincy water and use it on jobs in other cities or towns.

Prendeville and DPW Business Manager Michael Coffey said the practice has been underway for decades. Coffey said only about a dozen permits are issued each year and there did not appear to be any billing problems.

Both Prendeville and Coffey urged residents to call the police to report anyone taking water from a city hydrant.

The discussion followed a report on the water and sewer enterprise funds at the Finance Committee meeting.

Coffey noted that the state is not likely earmark funds to stabilize rates this year, so the rates will likely go up.

Yard Sale Saturday At Most Blessed Sacrament Church

Houghs Neck Community Council will sponsor a yard sale Saturday, June 13 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Most Blessed Sacrament Church (Latin), Darrow St.

The sale coincides with the Houghs Neck F-Ball cookout and a house and garden tour sponsored by the Houghs Neck Garden Club.

The HNCC will host a "white elephant" table. Proceeds will benefit the HNCC, an all-volunteer corporation.

Proceeds from the event will also support events for community youth such as the July 3rd Family Day.

Spaces are still available for the public to sell their belongings for a $20 donation. Call 617-479-7413.

COA Seeking Wheelchairs

The Council on Aging is in urgent need of wooden or metal wheelchairs of all sizes and comes to help disabled seniors to get around.

If you have one, call the council at 617-576-1306.

Insurance STRATEGIES

by Jim Sullivan

INSURING OUR WELL-BEING

Traditionally, people have purchased insurance to protect themselves from possible losses arising from accident, theft and disaster. Insurance may also be used to provide for dependents' future financial needs in the event of a breadwinner's death. The fact is that insurance can play an important role in assuring financial well-being as in reducing risk. Properly designed insurance makes it possible for families and individuals to maintain a desired standard of living. Whether used to provide health or death benefits, a vehicle for savings, a plan for retirement or protection of home and automobile, insurance is an important factor in our lives. The intent of future columns in this series is to provide information about insurance products and buying strategies.

JAMES J. SULLIVAN (JES) is a 30-year veteran in the insurance industry. He is a past president of the Quincy Chapter of the National Association of Insurance Writers. Beach Water Sampling Starts June 17

The Quincy Health Department will begin its summer beach water sampling program Wednesday, June 17.

Water samples will be collected every Wednesday thereafter, through Sept. 3 at 13 beach locations. The results will be analyzed for enterococcus counts by a private laboratory and will be made available to the media throughout the summer months.

The Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR) will conduct and analyze water samples at four locations along Wollaston Beach. The sample results will be reported to beach managers and the Quincy Health Department by Thursday Friday of each week.

If a period of rainfall occurs after the water samples are taken each Wednesday, it is important that people understand that such samples may not represent an accurate reflection of the water quality that will be reported on Fridays. Contaminated storm water flows can be discharged into the harbor from pipes and drains after 1/4 of an inch of rainfall or greater occurs in a given day. We therefore recommend that people refrain from swimming or bathing for a period of 48 hours after a significant rainfall to allow for the natural flushing action of the tides to dilute and cleanse the water.

The City of Quincy has been involved in a Bathing

Water Quality Improvement Program over the past several years. This program involved the detection and repair of problems with in those sewer and storm drainpipes that adversely affected Quincy Bay. This program, administered by the City's Department of Public Works, continues to day, with ongoing, routine maintenance practices such as street sweeping, drain cleaning and tide gate inspections.

For more information regarding the beach testing program, contact 617-776-1278. A 24-hour recorded message will be available at 617-776-1288 to obtain the weekly beach sampling results.

Art Commission Will Monitor New Center Views

20,000 sq. ft.

Harrington said the concept of public art is not limited to statues or paintings but includes the design of sidewalks, streets, the placement of trees and fountains, and the choice of materials, such as brick for sidewalks or pressed concrete for intersections.

The ordinance specifically excludes reproductions or unlimited copies of original artwork, mass produced art objects and functional elements of architecture or landscape.

In discussing prior to the vote, Harrington cited the lobby of the Granite Trust building as an exciting model for the commission. In that building, the lobby features enormous photographs of historic sites.

This is the historical perspective Harrington expects to foster in the renewal area.

In 2005, StreetWorks purchased the Granite Trust building for $8 million. Bank of America offices are on the first floor of the 10-story building.

"They've committed a significant amount, $5 million over 10 to 15 years," Harrington said of the StreetWorks team. "We need to have a commission to review plans and get what's promised."

This is all about public places, Harrington said of plans designed to enhance the public view whether on public property or visible to public view.

The commission will have authority over all public spaces from streets and sidewalks to public lobbies where Harrington envisions tributes to the city's history of shipbuilding and granite works as well as prominent historic figures such as John Hancock or Dudley Boyntown along with the Adamses.

75 Residents Graduate Quincy Police Asian Academy

The Quincy Police Department recently held a four-week police academy for Cantonese speaking residents.

The program, coordinated by Officer Kent Yee, was hosted by Steve Buckley, director at the North Quincy Community Center.

The purpose of the program was to provide information in the Cantonese language on topics related to federal, state and local laws.

Officer Jimmy Chen spoke about motor vehicle laws, including seatbelts, crosswalks and recent changes in the laws.

Officer Bennett Chin reviewed domestic violence and elder abuse laws, while Officer Greg Mar discussed city ordinances, focusing on illegal apartments.

Officer Kent Yee brought up current cases of crime and crime prevention techniques, how to report a crime and how the incident will be investigated.

Sergeant Phillip Yee from the Braintree Police Department spoke on criminal law while Customs Deputy Chief Ted Woo discussed immigration laws and answered many questions pertaining to importing and exporting goods.

During the graduation ceremony, 75 residents received diplomas and congratulations from Mayor Thomas Koch, State Rep. Bruce Ayers, Quincy Police Chief Paul Keenan and Braintree Deputy Police Chief Russell Jenkins.

installed at the Wollaston branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library cost the city $224,000 in 2007 when a contractor estimated the project would cost only $50,000.

"I left the meeting with Inspector General confident that he shares our concerns and that he and his staff are as committed as we are to protecting the taxpayers of Quincy," said Koch.

The mayor said he is expected to meet directly with Honeywell officials later this month, adding, "We will keep our residents updated on developments as appropriate." He did not say when the state investigation is expected to conclude.

The administration review of the Honeywell deal began shortly after Koch took office in 2008 when a bill for $2.8 million in costs for the project landed on his desk because it was not included in the prior year's budget, according to the Koch.

The administration team spent the next eight months conducting an exhaustive review of the work completed by Honeywell, its costs, and how officials approved certain aspects in 2007. As problems continued to be uncovered, Koch said he enlisted a clerk of the works to be devoted full-time to the project, providing oversight that did not exist during the time most of the work was completed.

"The more we learned the worse the picture became," Koch said. "It finally got to the point where we called the Inspector General and he and his staff have been working on this for the last six months. I am confident of the ultimate outcome, particularly after today's meeting."

Gutro Seeks Inclusion Of Dorothy Quincy Homestead In Adams Historical Park

tions to the Adams heritage is President John Quincy Adams, himself, who was, also, a Quincy descendant as was Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes.

The homestead is currently owned by the Massachusetts Society of the Colonial Dames of America who are supporting efforts to join the site to the Adams National Historical Park, according to Gutro.

During the American Revolution, Quincy's home served as a meeting place for such American patriots as John Adams, Josiah Quincy and John Hancock who married Dorothy Quincy.

In 2005, the house was approved as a National Historic Landmark. Parts of the house were built in 1685, in 1706 and, again in the mid-18th century. As a result, the architecture is a combination of Colonial, Georgian and Victorian.

While the old homestead has much historic value, there are also reminders that real people lived there.

In fact, John Hancock's message to Dorothy Quincy, "You I Love and You Alone," remains scratched in the glass of a window pane. Legend has it that Hancock wrote the message just before he fled to Lexington on the eve of the Revolution.

Farmers' Market Opens Friday

The Quincy Farmers' Market will open its new season Friday, June 12 at 11:20 a.m. and continues through the summer at the John Hancock Municipal Parking Lot, across from the Quincy District Court House, Quincy Center.

A ribbon cutting at 1:30 p.m. will official welcome the farmers and consumers to the weekly festive activity in Quincy Center. Among those attending the ribbon cutting will be Mayor Tom Koch and Dean Rizzo, director of the Quincy 2000 Collaborative.

Students from the Point Webster Middle School are planning to visit the farmers and are invited to plan beans along with the children who accompany their parents to the market.

Wollaston Garden Club members will be on hand to assist and answer questions on gardening.

Quincy Group Gets First-Hand View Of Street-Works Project

million project completed recently by Street-Works, and to talk to West Hartford business and municipal officials about the project and the experience of working with Street-Works, the company proposing a massive renovation of Quincy center.

"We felt it was important to provide the opportunity for the Quincy business community to kick the tires, so to speak," said Edward Keohane, president of Quincy 2000 and owner of Keohane Funeral & Cremation Service. "I think it's fair to say that people came away very impressed."

The group began the day at the Best Western Adams Inn for a continental breakfast hosted by inn president Bob Galligan. After a send off from Mayor Thomas Koch, the group boarded the bus for the 110-mile trip to West Hartford. The group disembarked at the giant statue of Noah Webster, the early American grammarian and West Hartford native, where they were met by Street-Works founding partner Richard Heapes.

Heapes led the group, which included city council president Jay Davis, Ward V councilor Douglas Gutro, planning board chairman Bill Adams, and Adams National Park Superintendent Marianne Peak, through Blue Back Square, pointing out design features that Street-Works intends to incorporate into new Quincy Center. The features included 18 to 20-foot-wide sidewalks, attractive public and civic gathering spaces, street-level retail shops and restaurants, a mix of condos, apartments and lofts, mature trees and bright, well-lit parking garages.

The Quincy contingent also visited one of Blue Back Square's office buildings, its wellness center and its fitness club.

"What you're seeing was designed for Blue Back Square and for West Hartford. We're not going to take this and just plant it in Quincy," Heapes told the group. "Quincy is a different city, with a different history, a different population, a different downtown structure and a different traffic dynamic. The Quincy design will be unique to Quincy, but will include some of the elements that have made Blue Back Square such a success."

Street-Works purchased its first piece of Blue Back Square property in 2001, shortly after the 9/11 attacks. The company began construction in 2006 and finished in 2008. Blue Back Square, which is about one-fifth the size of Quincy Center, has become a magnet for shoppers, diners and residents, giving the area of vibrancy far different from the abandoned car dealer lots that once filled the space.

"What we wanted to do here is create an area that would work day and night, all seasons, for all types of people, including residents, visitors, workers, shoppers and families. We wanted it to be reflective of its history while giving it a look and feel that will stay consistent with the times," Heapes told the group.

A CROSS-SECTION of Quincy business people, residents and city officials took a bus trip to West Hartford, CT last week to tour Blue Back Square, an urban development project completed by Street-Works LLC, the New York company behind the $1.2 billion proposal to redevelop Quincy Center. The group viewed many of Blue Back Square's design features and talked to residents and government officials.

Blue Back Square features a mix of local and national retailers, including a Cheesecake Factory restaurant and a Crate & Barrel homegoods store. It also features a cinema, a public gathering area where concerts and other civic activities are held, and two parking garages on either side of the square, making accessibility for residents, workers and visitors easy.

of working with Street-Works.

"I can tell you that everything Street-Works said they were going to do, they did," Rowlson told the group. "Some developers have their own agendas and you find yourself suddenly confronted with unexpected issues. That didn't happen with Street Works. They were up front with everything they wanted to do and they were true to their word."

After lunch the group returned to the Webster statue to board the bus and to hear some final words from Heapes.

"It's a great credit to Quincy that this many of you found the time in your busy schedules to come and take a look at Blue Back Square. It shows how much you love your city," Heapes said.

Street-Works hopes to have the final site plan approved for new Quincy Center before the Quincy city council by January of 2010.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons

Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Unattended Candles Can Start Fires

Did you see where there were two recent fires, one in the Fenway, and the other in Roslindale? Both began when candles were left unattended. 60% of all candle fires start that way. Lit candles are too easy to forget when one walks out of a room or out of a house. We've witnessed individuals leave a house while candles are left lit.

Fortunately, in these two instances, occupants evacuated both buildings safely. Unfortunately, the 9 occupants of the Fenway building will be without their home until smoke and water damage is corrected; the Roslindale home sustained $100,000 damage. Unattended candles!

There's more to learn from the Roslindale fire. A 7-year-old boy was awakened by the sound of the alarm within their unit. He in turn responded by notifying others within that same apartment. He then proceeded to the unit below, the first floor apartment, waking his uncle and grandfather and alerting them of the fire, all occupants, 5 in number, safely evacuated.

Working, properly located smoke detectors apparently gave these occupants the early notification they needed to evacuate the building safely. While the child was directed toward the first floor by his father, he witnessed the fire raging in the second floor kitchen. There is typically very little time to safely evacuate a fire within a residence, which is why it is essential to have detection. Please test your smoke detectors monthly, and change the batteries if applicable, yearly.

The other aspect of this story that caught my eye was the awareness that an occupant required assistance to evacuate the building where he was blind. Whether this family had a preconceived emergency evacuation plan or not, they did arrive at a plan during the incident. The child escaped onto the first floor, below the fire as ordered by his father. This would have taken him out of immediate harms way while he notified those relatives on the first floor, including his blind grandfather. The father then assisted the blind grandfather exit the building. To me this story emphasizes the importance of E.D.I.T.H., Exit Drills In The Home. That being a preconceived plan where two means of exiting a room or building are agreed upon by all family members, while accommodating those needing assistance. A meeting place is essential within this plan where all members can be accounted for at an agreed upon location outside the building.

Candle use is something I think would taper off during the warmer months, apparently not. I recently included them in an article on summer outdoor living, emphasizing the need not to taken them for granted.

There should be no vacation from vigilance and basic household fire safety any time of year. It is just as relevant during these upcoming summer months when outdoor activity is more prevalent, while potential interior household safety issues deserve the same consideration you give them the rest of the year.

Have a great summer!

Carpenters Local Union 424 Endorses Davis For Ward 4 Councillor

The United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America Local 424 announce their endorsement of incumbent Jay Davis for Ward 4 city councillor.

According to a release from the union, Business Manager Richard Braccia said Davis should be held an example for all elected officials with regard to respecting the ideals of organized labor while at the same time finding solutions that are in the best interest of all Quincy citizens.

"Jay Davis has consistently proven that he will stand up for the working families of Quincy on quality of life issues and will not cave to outside pressures," Braccia said. "For that reason, the officers, delegates and members of Carpenters Local Union 424 voted unanimously to endorse Jay Davis for city councillor."

Carpenters Local Union 424, based in Randolph, represents carpenters from Quincy and throughout Eastern Massachusetts.

In the statement, Davis said he is proud to add this endorsement to those other unions that have previously come out in support of his re-election.

"I am very grateful to have the backing of the Carpenters Local Union 424," Davis said. "I believe in the values held by all working families and use them as a guide for every action I take as a councillor. These values include the worker's right to decent wages, benefits, safe working conditions, and respect for his or her quality of life."

These values include the worker's right to decent wages, benefits, safe working conditions, and respect for his or her quality of life."

Brian Palmucci, candidate for Ward 4 city council, recently hosted a community-wide drug awareness forum at the Morrisette American Legion Post.

Palmucci, a former assistant district attorney and current state prosecutor, said the goal of the event was to inform parents on how to recognize the signs that their children are using drugs.

"As a prosecutor, I have seen how drugs can destroy a community," said Palmucci. "Drug abuse and addiction is a serious problem that deserves our immediate attention. If elected to the City Council I will use my law enforcement experience to fight the city's growing drug problem."

At the forum more than 20 city residents listened to presentations from a veteran law enforcement officer, parents whose children suffer drug addiction, and a drug abuse prevention specialist.

Recently retired Detective Lt. John F. McDonough shared his experiences from the nearly four decades he spent dealing with the city's drug dealers and addicts.

McDonough said the city is not giving the police department enough money and resources to fight the drug battle.

"People are dying in Quincy, and what are they worried about? They are worried about the bottom line," said McDonough.

"Other than homicide and rape, what crime hurts more people?" said McDonough. "Drug abuse affects everyone, from family and friends and neighbors and loved ones. Drug abuse affects everyone."

"We have a war in Afghanistan, we have a war in Iraq, we have a war here too. It's a drug war, and people are dying. And our politicians claim to represent us, but they don't seem to be doing a very good job."

McDonough, who headed the Quincy Police Department's Drug Control Unit before retiring earlier this year, also offered suggestions and advice for parents on how to prevent drug use.

"Control their time, control their money, and you can control your kids," said McDonough.

Julie Howard, the director of Baystate Community Services Inc., a non-profit substance abuse counseling program Quincy, said drug abuse is a "nightmare" for the parents of addicts.

"Addiction is sort of like bipolar disorder," said Howard. "When you are stable, you are stable. But when you are off and running, it's hard to stop."

After the event information was also provided regarding substance abuse treatment options and how to go about arranging for treatment of a loved one.

A Job Well Done

On Tuesday, June 2, 2009, at approximately 2:15 a.m., Officer A.J. Carthas was on patrol southbound on Hancock Street, directly behind Officer Matt Hockney and as they approached the intersection of Hancock Street and Elm Avenue, a male in front of Kentucky Fried Chicken flagged them down.

The male's face was covered in blood, so Fallon ambulance was called. The officers interviewed the male victim, who stated that he had been "sucker punched" a few streets away. The officers attempted to get further information but the victim appeared reluctant, then said he was "not a snitch."

Fallon Ambulance EMTs arrived and as they were assisting the victim, he said, "I don't know what happened," then proceeded to tell the officers that he was at the Wollaston train station when he was approached by an unknown male party who had asked him if he wanted to buy a laptop computer. The victim stated he was interested and they both went over to the CVS located on Beale Street in order for the victim to get some money. From there, they walked back to St. Ann's Road, where the computer was.

The victim described the male as a "big guy, an ex-football player," and that his name was allegedly John. He said when they arrived at this location, an argument began over the price and this was when the suspect punched him in the eye and immediately tried to take his money. The victim said that the suspect was unsuccessful throughout the fight. The victim was transported to Quincy Medical Center to be treated for an apparent eye injury that was going to require stitches.

The officers, along with Sergeant Gerald Connolly went to St. Ann's Road in an attempt to get the other side of the story. Once there, they saw lights on so they knocked on the door and window for approximately five minutes. The officers saw that there was a male and a female moving around inside, and at one point the female looked out the window directly at Officer Hockney and still did not answer the door.

Moments later, Officer Carthas noticed the female party sit in a chair and at a desk remove items which he believed to be pills. At this time, a different male opened the door and stated that he was working in the back office and did not hear anyone knocking. Once inside, the officers asked the female why she didn't open the door and she said she was nervous and left to get the other male.

When asked why she would be nervous to open the door for the Police, she did not respond. When asked who else was in the building, the male said "John" was in the back office. The officers knocked on that door and a large male opened the door. He was led outside by Officer Carthas and Sergeant Connolly and asked for identification, but he said that he did not have it on him. He then provided the officers with a name, but there were no warrants. Officer Carthas asked the suspect why he was locked in a back office after being seen sitting at a desk in the front office and why he didn't open the door. His answer was he was working in the back office.

Officer Carthas asked the suspect what happened at the train station and he said "some kid overheard me on my cell phone talking about a computer, and asked me out of the blue if I had one for sale." The suspect told the victim that he did it and it was back at his work. A price of $100 was agreed upon, so the victim and suspect went to an ATM, then back to the suspect's office.

The suspect said that once they arrived at the office, the victim "started acting weird, staring at the computer like he was going to grab it and take off." The suspect learned that the victim only had $70, not the $100 they agreed on, so he grabbed the victim and "booted" him out of the office. Officer Carthas questioned the female, who turned out to be the suspect's girlfriend.

Her story was the same until she said that the victim "flipped out and started throwing things, including a sandwich all over the office." The officers noted that the office appeared to be in order with no signs of an altercation. The girlfriend said there was no fight and that "John just threw the kid out."

Officer Carthas then questioned the other male, who said that he arrived at the office at 8:00 P.M. and that there was no one else present besides the three who worked there, and there was "definitely not a fight."

Girls Basketball Games At Merrymount Courts

The Quincy Police Crime Prevention Unit and the Quincy Recreation Department will sponsor a girls basketball program over the summer at the Merrymount basketball courts, located at the intersection of Hancock Street and Fenno Street.

The program, funded by the Shannon grant, will run every Tuesday night, beginning Tuesday, June 16th, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., weather permitting.

The purpose of the program is to give girls who are going into the 7th, 8th or 9th grade an opportunity to play in organized basketball games.

For additional information, contact Lieutenant Dan Minton at (617) 745-5719.

At 52nd Annual Commencement

17 Quincy Students Graduate Fontbonne Academy

Seventeen students from Quincy were among the 111 students who graduated from Fontbonne Academy at its recent 52nd commencement ceremony.

Class of 2009 Quincy graduates and the colleges they will be attending are:

Catherine Abbott (Stonehill College), Shannon Cleary (High Point University), Nicole Curtis (University of Massachusetts Boston), Monica DeVera (Boston University), Ashley Heffernan (Southern New Hampshire University), Taylor Hughes (University of Oregon), Jee-Sun Kim (Suffolk University), Corine McGarty (University of Massachusetts Boston), Kayla McGonagle (Loyola University of Chicago), Lindsay Mulvey (Blaine), Lauren Murphy (Bunker Hill Community College), Victoria Neville (Saint Anselm College), Katelyn O'Brien (Bentley College), Brittany Potter (Hofstra University), Ahreum Song (Fordham University), Therese Sullivan (Saint Anselm College), Jenna Valcourt (Quinnipiac University), Kaitlin Wright (Curry College).

Welcomed by Class President, Catherine Callahan of Bridgewater, 1,200 people watched as the graduates received their diplomas under a large white tent on the Fontbonne Academy lawn.

Two Honors Speakers from the Class of 2009 were chosen to speak at the graduation ceremony. To be considered, they must have a 3.5 grade point average or above for all four years live the Gospel values, demonstrate leadership, citizenship, character and service, and contribute to the Fontbonne community.

Geeda Houranieh of Milton, and Julia Vannoni of Winthrop were the Honors Speakers, and both gave inspiring speeches to the audience.

Geeda Houranieh told her class, "We have to keep breaking the stereotypes.... Conforming is simple; it is standing out that will be difficult. In many respects you will find yourself sur-

QUINCY'S ALISON FOLEY receives the Fontbonne Award at the school's recent commencement. She is surrounded by the same people with the same clothes and the same ideas.

"At times, complying with their ways will seem ideal. But when have we ever taken the easy way out? The world needs us. It's yearning for new thoughts and new ways. Its well being relies on people like us—people who are willing to question the narrow-minded and challenge the conventional."

Dr. Anne Malone, Fontbonne Academy president and Milton resident, gave out diplomas and special awards including the Fontbonne Award given to Allison Foley of Quincy.

A representative from West Point Military Academy, Mr. Al Barese USMA '79, was present to give an appointment to graduating senior Alicia Phillips of Holbrook.

M. Elaine Tarbox, a Fontbonne graduate of the class of 1959, was the commencement speaker.

In her remarks, she encouraged the graduates to make the most of every situation.

"What will define you is how you handle the opportunities you are given and how you maximize what you have." She added, "Each of you needs to determine what success means to you. Pursue that goal with vigor and patience; and enjoy life's journey."

The class of 1959 celebrated its 50th reunion and participants joined in the commencement festivities.

The class of 1959 made a gift of $20,000 toward technology at Fontbonne Academy.

Highlights From North Quincy High School Commencement

LAUREN BROOKS, president of the 2009 senior class at North Quincy High School, welcomes city officials, school administrators and teachers, fellow classmates and other guests to last week's commencement held at Adams Field. Platform guests (from left) are: Mayor Tom Koch, state Rep. Bruce Ayers, state Sen. Michael Morrissey, Principal Earl Metzler, II; Rep. Stephen Tobin and School Committee Vice Chairman David McCarthy.

REMEMBERING PATRICK - The family of the late Patrick Toland White - sister Meghan White, mother Barbara White, father Paul White and sister Katie White - acknowledge the dedication of North Quincy High School's commencement in memory of their inspirational son who would have graduated last Tuesday. Patrick died Nov. 30, 2005 at age 15 after a courageous battle with cancer. Class President Lauren Brooks dedicated her speech to Patrick, a well-known baseball player and honor student. A seat among the graduates was left intentionally empty in Patrick's honor. As a senior class gift, the graduates made a donation to the Patrick White Foundation.

JIN LEM (seated) was recently honored as the Outstanding Vocational Technical Student of the Year from Quincy High School. With him are (standing from left): Ed Holmes, Information Technology Teacher, QHS; Brian Smith, Robotics Coach, QPS; Keith Segalla, Director of Career and Technical Education QPS; and Peter Swanson, Department Chairperson Science, QHS.

Quincy High's Jin Lem Honored As Outstanding Vocational Technical Student

Jin Lem, the son of Judy and Henry Lem, an Information Technology student from Quincy High School, was recently recognized as the Outstanding Vocational Technical Student of the year.

Jin is a straight A student, with a 99% average in Information Technology. He is a member of the IT Advisory Board, the National Honor Society, and the Science National Honor Society.

In addition to being the Teacher Assistant for Information Technology I, where Jin works alongside his teacher preparing class activities, Jin is invaluable to the QHS Science Department, where he troubleshoots computer problems.

During his junior year, Jin interned at the Quincy Rehab and Nursing Center, where he instructed senior citizens on computer activities. Because of his commitment and professionalism, he was offered an internship this year at Quincy Medical Center, where he acts as Information Support Technician.

Jin is a four-year member of the Quincy Public School Robotics Team where he works with Procter Gamble and Gillette engineers and mentors other students, while performing his task as the head electrical crew member. He is also a four-year member of the tennis team, two years at the Varsity level, one of the starting seven, playing second doubles.

In the words of his Information Technology teacher, Ed Holmes, "I often must remind myself that Jin is a student and not a professional IT colleague. If I teach for 50 more years, I don't know how I could ever recommend anyone more highly than I recommend Jin for this award."

Jin was recently honored at the 23rd Annual Awards Banquet at Mechanics Hall in Worcester, along with 48 other students from all of Massachusetts, being recognized for that award. Jin attended along with his family and members of the Quincy High School community.

New Rules Affect Your Credit Score

If it's been a while since you checked your credit and FICO scores, you might have some surprises in store. Fair Isaac, also known as FICO, recently changed its method of calculating credit scores. Its new plan, FICO 08, is said to offer a better way to determine which consumers will be unable to meet their repayment obligations.

There are a few important changes in the new scoring system. "Authorized users" are those who are allowed to use credit cards of those with a good credit history (such as a working husband). That information has been reported on the user's file (such as a stay-at-home mother with no credit of her own.) In the past this has raised the scores of those no-credit users. This "piggy-backing" will no longer be used in a score's calculation.

Another change in the FICO scoring method concerns payment patterns. If a consumer has only made a late payment in one area but otherwise has a good record, the credit score won't be affected as much as it was before. At the same time, those with a track record of being late with payments will take a bigger hit to the credit score.

If you apply for credit and your FICO score is lower than you expected, ask the lender if the old FICO method was used or if it used the new FICO 08.

If you're curious about your current FICO score, you can go online and use MSN Money's Credit Score Estimator, but don't expect it to zero in on your actual score. It gives a wide range of likely scores, but at least you'll know if you fall in the 590 area or if you're closer to 750 or higher.

Each year, we're allowed by law one free credit report from each of the three major reporting agencies. To order your free annual credit reports, go to www.AnnualCreditReport.com online or call 1-877-322-8228. If you chose the telephone method of ordering your credit reports, be patient. It's a fairly lengthy process involving speaking into the telephone and pressing buttons.

Read about the free credit reports on the Federal Trade Commission's Web site at www.ftc.gov/ftcreports. To learn more about FICO scores, go to www.myfico.com/CreditEducation/.

Make Life Easier With Little Effort

the action or jokes again.

Another technology making life in your living room easier is a VoIP (Voice over Internet protocol) home phone, which plugs into your home's broadband line, is interactive and offers functionality similar to that of a traditional cell phone. The Hub from Verizon features a 7-inch touch screen which can sit on a table. From it, you can view local traffic information and send and receive text, picture and video messages. You can even view TV schedules, check the weather, play music or upload your contacts and calendars, making it a one-stop-shop for all of your home communication needs.

Bathroom

Think technology for the bath isn't possible? Think again. In the past, technology made specifically for the bathroom has been somewhat lackluster, like waterproof CD players for the shower; or cumbersome, like televisions built into the tile for bathtime viewing. Now, Moen is bringing innovative, easy-to-use digital indulgences into the bath with iODIGITAL. This truly unique digital showering and bath system is like having your own personal digital "butler." You can program your vertical spa to deliver your personalized, precise temperature and flow; turn on your shower with a remote from across the room or while still in bed; or even top off your bath with warm water with the touch of a button. Once you've found your perfect combination, you can save it as one of your iODIGITAL's pre-sets and forget about fiddling with the temperature every time you step in the shower. And the best part is that you can do all of this as easily as if you were programming a car radio. It's that simple.

One of the greatest advantages of this technology is the ability to program preferred settings into memory. iODIGITAL is "set and forget" technology at its finest, with up to four different pre-sets that can be easily programmed within seconds. Every member of the family can have their own unique setting -- from an invigorating morning shower to a relaxing evening escape, and even the perfect bedtime bath for the kids. With intuitive controls and simple operation, iODIGITAL is as easy as it is innovative, and effortlessly transforms the bathroom into the most tech-savvy room in the house.

Kitchen

According to Iconoculture, a leading cultural trend research firm, consumers still like to find the look that's right for their space, but their lifestyles and life stages are dictating buying decisions more frequently. "Set and forget" technology is a major factor when it comes to making life easier in the kitchen. The GE Profile Dishwasher has Smart-Dispense technology, which holds up to two months' worth of liquid dishwasher detergent and automatically dispenses the right amount based on water hardness and soil levels. Since it's programmed to start on its own, the only thing you have to worry about when it comes to the dishes is whose turn it is to put them away.

Make all of your appliances smart by coordinating your dishwasher with another great option -- the Frigidaire Professional Freestanding Electric Range. This smart stove features a delay start option, perfect for "setting and forgetting." You can set your oven to begin cooking on your schedule -- it can be programmed from one to 24 hours in advance. Another innovative feature includes "My Favorite" settings, allowing you to cook family favorites like chicken nuggets and pizza with the touch of a button.

Regardless of where you incorporate digital technology, remember that these user-friendly and convenient options will help you save time and start living a worry-free digital life.

For more information iODIGITAL from Moen, visit moen.com/iodigital, or call (800) BUY-MOEN.

"Green" Tips Can Save Money, Too

Q: I read your column a couple weeks back about starting an "eco-friendly" home. I have some more tips for your readers that are easy to follow and can save money too:

- For the refrigerator, in addition to keeping the coils underneath or in the back clean, also clean the rubber seals around the inside of the door so it closes tightly.

- Move the refrigerator a few inches away from the wall so air circulates around the condenser.

- When cooking on an electric stove, just before something is completely cooked, turn off the burner and let the residual heat do the work.

- Don't keep opening the oven door to check on something that's cooking, as you'll release heat into the kitchen, making your air conditioner work harder. It also changes the temperature inside the oven, which means cooking results may be unpredictable.

- If you have a dishwasher, only run it when it's full to save water and energy. Use the air-dry rather than heat-dry setting. Also, don't pre-rinse dishes; just scrape them well.

- And of course, keep all your appliances clean. They will work more efficiently and last longer, too.

I hope these tips will help your readers. — Dale in San Diego

A: These are great tips! Many of these are things that most of us already do, and we can quickly adjust to add other techniques such as scraping instead of rinsing.

Cleaning the refrigerator seals (and the dishwasher seal while you're at it) should be done with a mild soap and water solution; scrubbing could damage the seals. So, if you have a stubborn bit of gunk on the seal, soak it with the soapy water for a few minutes and try cleaning it again.

HOME TIP: Make a kitchen compost pail using an old coffee can with a couple of holes punched in the plastic lid. Empty the pail into a large backyard compost, daily if possible.

Strapped For Cash? HVAC Solutions Keep Costs Low And Comfort High

(ARA) - You may find the economic climate less than balmy right now, but that doesn't mean the climate inside your home can't be comfortable.

Like many Americans, you're probably thinking about ways you can reduce your living expenses. Heating and cooling costs account for more than 40 percent of the average home's energy bill, so finding ways to become more energy efficient can save you real cash. In fact, nearly two thirds of respondents in a recent Energy Awareness Month survey cited reducing their heating and cooling bills as a top concern.

There are many ways to improve the performance of your home's heating, ventilation and air conditioning system, even if you're on a tight budget. Here are a few:

Tip 1. Take advantage of tax credits by replacing old appliances with ENERGY STAR Qualified appliances.

One of the best ways to improve home energy efficiency is by replacing your outdated air conditioner or furnace, especially if it's more than 10 to 15 years old. Newer, more energy-efficient models that are ENERGY STAR qualified are readily available and can be up to 40 percent more efficient. What's more, tax credits will be issued to homeowners who install ENERGY STAR qualified appliances in 2009, offering a dual cost-saving benefit for you and your budget. The more efficient your air conditioner is, the more money you can save annually.

When looking for efficient appliances, consider a model such as the Trane XL20i communicating air conditioner. Traditional systems usually deliver a Seasonal Energy Efficiency Ratio (SEER) of around 8. With a system like the XL20i, which has a SEER rating of 20, your family could save up to 60 percent on your annual energy bill, depending on the type of equipment the high-efficiency system is replacing. Of course, your actual energy savings will also vary depending on factors like your lifestyle, system settings, maintenance, climate and installation.

In fall and winter, consider upgrading with an XC95 furnace. With this product's three stages of heat, you can achieve an Annual Fuel Utilization Efficiency rating of up to 95 percent, which means that up to 95 cents of every dollar actually goes to heating your home.

This is especially important when you consider that the average household will pay $2,300 this year on energy costs, with heating alone accounting for almost 45 percent of that total, according to the Alliance to Save Energy.

Tip 2. Consider automated technology so you can have peace of mind that you are taking control of your own energy management.

Incorrect air flow and improper refrigerant levels within a heating and cooling system are two of the biggest issues affecting home energy efficiency. So when shopping for new appliances, consider those that will eliminate these common errors with automated systems to monitor those levels for you.

Manufacturers such as Trane are making this possible with heating and cooling systems that come complete with communicating technology. Built-in interfaces enable all communicating components of a heating and cooling system to be automatically and properly charged, configured and calibrated to ensure homeowners will always receive the ultimate in reliability, efficiency, comfort, convenience and peace of mind.

Tip 3. Adjusting room temperature by just a few degrees will help yield big savings in your household budget this year.

You can save about 3 percent of your heating and cooling costs for every degree you lower your thermostat in the winter, and for every degree you raise your thermostat in the summer.

Programmable thermostats are another great option to maximize the performance of your heating and cooling system. Because you can program these thermostats to raise or lower the temperature while you're away from home, you save energy while still maintaining your standard of comfort. In addition to this flexibility, ENERGY STAR models can also yield savings as high as $115 per year.

If your heating and cooling equipment is less than 15 years old, routine maintenance is an easy yet important step you can take to ensure efficient heating and cooling performance. Having a professional perform maintenance in the spring and fall, before cooling and heating seasons begin, will increase the life of the system, improve energy efficiency, reduce pollutants and save you money.

Be sure you also contribute to your system's continued efficiency by cleaning or replacing filters on schedule, and by keeping outdoor units clear of snow, ice and other debris.

10-Day Event A Success

27th Annual Quincy Senior Olympics Recap & Results

The 27th Annual Quincy Senior Olympics, which were called "an unqualified success with an increase in both participants and medal winners," concluded ten days of events with an Awards Ceremony on May 21.

Over 150 seniors, between the ages of 55-95, were enrolled in the Senior Olympic Games. These seniors competed in five-year age groups; events featured included the 1/2-mile, one-mile and three-mile walk, the one-mile run, eight-ball (billiards), darts, bowling, bocce, swimming, basketball free throw, horseshoes, shot put, standing long jump, javelin, softball throw, putting and golf. There was also a volleyball match, in which the Olympians defeated the Mayor's "Celebrity" team by a score of 2-0.

The Mayor's Office, the Department of Elder Services, and the Quincy Recreation Department organized the ten-day event.

A major highlight of the Senior Olympics was the Sportsmanship Luncheon, sponsored by The River Bay Club.

This year's guest speaker was Attorney George Burke, the 2009 Quincy Sun "Citizen of the Year" and a member of the University of Massachusetts Basketball Hall of Fame. Burke spoke fondly of his youth in Quincy and the opportunities that sports and coaches provided for him.

Also at the luncheon, Mayor Tom Koch addressed the Olympians and congratulated them on their participation in the games and their choice of active and healthy lifestyles.

At the Awards Night, held on May 21, Tom Clasy, Director of The Council on Aging, presented Rob Sokoloff of the River Bay Club with a plaque in appreciation of his Club's support of the games. Barry J. Welch, Director of QRD, presented an award to Frank Brillo, vice-president of the Torre Dei Passeri Social Club for sponsoring the bocce tournament and Bay State Community Services Director Ken Tarabelli was recognized as the principal sponsor for the games and it was noted that without their generosity, the games would not have been possible. Awards were also presented to Olindy's Bowling and to the Executive Director of QATV, Elizabeth Campbell.

The Senior Olympic planning team consisted of Helen Murphy of the Mayor's Office; Barry Welch and Michelle Hanly of the QRD and Tom Clasy and Nancy DiPaolo of the Department of Elder Services.

Council on Aging Chairman John Malloy and Park and Recreation Board Chairman Connie Driscoll officiated at the Opening Ceremonies, which included the torch lighting.

This year's "Don Strong" Awards, which are named after the co-founder of the event, went to Warren Kirkland and Ruth Kundsins, as winners of the Men's and Women's One-Mile Walk.

The following are a list of the medal winners from the '09 Senior Olympics:

Mini Fenway Park Project Moving Forward

RED SOX HALL OF FAME Luis Tiant (left), Red Sox principal owner John Henry, Julia Ruth Stevens, daughter of the legendary Babe Ruth and Iacobucci hold up Henry's lucky number '11' Mini Fenway license plate. According to Iacobucci, the project is moving forward after two years of delays due to environmental concerns.

The following is a message from Mini Fenway Park CEO Ron Iacobucci:

"We are very grateful for your continued interest and support of the mini Fenway Park Project. A special thank you to those of you who have purchased a Fenway Park Plate! The project, featured on the website www.redsox.com/minifenywaypark, has been on hold for more than two years due to environmental concerns.

This baseball season we are hopeful to have an announcement that will move the project forward. At that time we will update this website with all the details. When our project first began it was like the 1967 Red Sox, 'The Impossible Dream.' As the project progressed and we achieved significant milestones it became more like the 2004 Red Sox 'Believe!' Our message now is simple don't stop believing! Thank you!"

NQHS Football Alumni Assoc. To Hold 16th Annual Golf Outing

The North Quincy High School Football Alumni Association announces that its 16th Annual Golf Outing will be held at the Hyannis Golf Club on Tuesday, June 30. The focus of this year's event is to raise money to provide scholarship opportunities for students at NQHS.

The event this year will honor legendary basketball coach Robert "Knobby" Nolan, who passed away in the spring of 2008.

The cost of the outing is $100 per golfer and $400 per foursome. To reserve a start time or to receive additional information, contact Sue Stamos at 617-833-7624, Ed Miller at 781-740-1205 or log in to www.northquincy-football.com. Registration will be at 7 a.m. on June 30 with a 7:30 a.m. start time.

Nolan, who coached both basketball and football at North, compiled 143 wins during his 11 year tenure as the Red Raiders basketball coach. His teams won four Greater Boston League championships and qualified for tournament play seven times.

Girls Lacrosse Games To Be Held On Monday Nights

Starting on Monday, June 15, a 'Monday Draw of girls' lacrosse pick-up games will be held at Veterans Memorial Stadium from 6:30-8:30 p.m. All Quincy girls, ages 13-18, are welcome to attend.

Further details will be given on June 15. All participants are required to wear goggles and mouth guards and footware is allowed. Cost of equipment will be provided.

SENIOR OLYMPIANS take time for a picture before the start of the three-mile walk during the 27th Annual Senior Olympic Games, which were held for ten-days at the end of May.

Rec. Dept. Testing for Swim/Boating/Sailing Lessons June 18

The Quincy Recreation Department and Barry J. Welch, Director, announced Tuesday that the QRD will be conducting an advanced-testing program in preparation for registration for its' summer instructional swimming program at the Lincoln Hancock Community Pool.

Children are registered for lessons according to their swimming ability; the testing program is for Quincy residents unfamiliar with the swim program or for a child who may have had additional instruction during the winter.

The schedule for swim testing is Thursday, June 18 from 6-8 p.m.

The QRD's boating and sailing pre-requisite swim test will also be offered during the same time period.

Pool lessons are open to Quincy residents over the age of six who have a current pool participation card issued by the QRD.

Additional information can be obtained by calling the QRD at 617-376-1394 and the normal recreation-swimming schedule will be canceled during these hours of testing.

Annual Squirrel Run to Be Held Saturday At Pageant Field

The 12th Annual Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run for ALS (the Squirrel Run XII), a five-mile run, 2.5-mile fitness walk and family fun day will be held Saturday (June 13) at Quincy's Pageant Field.

Proceeds from the Squirrel Run will benefit The Angel Fund, a non-profit organization dedicated to funding ALS research at the Cecil B. Day Laboratory for Neuromuscular Research at the UMass Medical Center in Worcester. Jimmy Kennedy lost his courageous battle with ALS, better known as Lou Gehrig's Disease in 1997 at the age of 31.

Kicking off this year's run, as the official race starter is former BC High School football coach and ALS patient Jim Cotter of Quincy.

"It is great that Jim will be joining us again this year," said Rich (Ratt) Kennedy, President of the Angel Fund and Jimmy Kennedy's brother. "Jim looks forward to greeting his former BC High players and students at the event. We encourage everyone to come and say hello."

Runners and walkers, of all ages and abilities, are welcome to participate in the five-mile run and 2.5-mile walk that begins with registration at 8 a.m. The 2.5-mile walk will start at 9 a.m., followed by the five-mile run at 10 a.m. The USA Track & Field, NE Association, officially sanctions the course.

The cost is $20 on the day of the event. All participants will receive a t-shirt and numbers will not be mailed prior to the race.

In addition to the race and walk, the day will be filled with entertainment for children, plenty of refreshments and awards for competitive runners in the 15 different age divisions for both men and women.

For registration info., call Kennedy at 781-383-6008 (tytaylor@aol.com) or Marty Levenson at 781-278-1127 (mlevenson@adt.com).

SENIOR NEWS LINE

On the Right Path: Treating Alzheimer's

I like to follow researchers when they're working on medical issues that affect seniors. No, I don't tag along in their labs. But when notable researchers come up with something good, I try to trace back a few years to see what they were doing before. Are they following the money, as in research grants, and changing specialties? Or are they following their heart?

That last test is one to watch, and I have been that to a professor of Neuroscience at MIT's Picower Institute for Learning and Memory in the Department of Brain and Cognitive Sciences. As a child, she witnessed her grandmother's decline into dementia. That's a powerful incentive. Now she's studying Alzheimer's disease and memory loss.

The newest research out of Tsai's lab indicates that she's found a drug that can reverse the effects of Alzheimer's disease, at least in mice. But these are genetically modified mice, bred to give scientists more of an indication of how the drug can work in humans. The drug they've been researching restores long-term memory in mice with Alzheimer's. (One of the tests used for mice involved swimming through a maze and determining whether the drug helped them remember the path.) The technical language talks about circuits and synapses and a gene called homo decelerase. The bottom line is that the drug restores memory and the ability to learn new tasks.

Next step: Determining whether that drug will do the same in humans and lead to the recovery of memory. Treatment is still 10 years away. I hope Tsai keeps following her heart with this research. It seems that she could well be on the right path to finding a treatment for Alzheimer's disease.

Living A Healthy Lifestyle On A Budget

(ARA) - Health and wellness is a privilege that everyone should be able to afford even in difficult economic times. With the right experience and know-how, anyone can make smart choices about healthy living while also being wallet wise.

Dr. Jennifer Fraichtenberg has mastered the art of staying fit, while also being financially responsible. Through her extensive experience of balancing work life and wellness, she has learned how to keep living a healthy lifestyle, while keeping on top of the red.

Dr. Fraichtenberg shares her top five tips for staying healthy on a budget:

Tip 1 - Buy Frozen for Good Nutrition

The fresh produce section at the grocery store can be a budgeter's nightmare as prices for fresh foods can really add up. The budget-conscious can find much needed relief in the frozen food section. Frozen fruits and vegetables typically have the same levels of nutrients as their fresh counterparts, because the produce is frozen at the peak of its ripeness, locking in the maximum amount of nutrients.

Tip 2 - Get Fit in the Great Outdoors

No matter what the season, the outdoors is a great place to move your body and bond with family and friends without the confinement and encumbering expense of a gym membership. Calorie-shedding activities can be enjoyed year round.

* Spring - Get some friends together and form a softball league, or ride a bike on weekends.

* Summer - Try to walk instead of driving short distances or take up swimming.

* Fall - Get some cardio by taking leaves or challenge yourself to participate in a local road race.

* Winter - Ice skate at a local rink or work the biceps with some snow shoveling.

On rainy or chilly days, visit the local library and check out a workout video. It can be a lot of fun and doesn't cost a thing.

Tip 3 - Let the games begin!

Lately, board games are making a major comeback with the reinvention of the traditional Family Night. Flexing your mental muscle by opting to play cards, trivia games or parlor games of yesteryear can help cut costs on expensive movie rentals and excessive cable charges. Plus, leisure time spent with friends, family and neighbors is always a healthy and fun way to de-stress.

Tip 4 - Drink to your health!

Water is a necessity and getting the recommended eight glasses a day is important to maintaining a healthy lifestyle. Switching from bottled water to tap can save hundreds of dollars (not to mention it also eliminates the amount of plastic bottles that get discarded!). To ensure tap water is healthy and clean, consider a PUR Water Filtration System, which could save up to $600 each year in comparison to bottled water. PUR is certified to reduce many unwanted contaminants to help ensure drinking water is clean and healthy. Visit www.purwater.com for more details.

Tip 5 - Sweet Dreams

Getting much needed sleep no matter what your age is crucial to mental, emotional and physical health. You will feel better, be more productive at work, have increased levels of physical and mental alertness, and your body will get the rest it needs to fight off diseases. For these reasons, make a commitment to schedule your day so you get the recommended seven to eight hours of sleep. Children, depending on age, might require more.

To Your Good Health

Building Strong Bones

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am a woman in her mid-40s with significant bone loss (osteopenia). I was completely unaware that bone loss can occur in premenopausal women. I was stunned by my poor bone-density score. Why doesn't the medical community inform the public that bone loss can be an issue for premenopausal women? — E.M.

ANSWER: Osteoporosis happens mainly to women after menopause, when there is a sudden and precipitous drop in their production of estrogen, the female hormone that works to preserve bone health. However, women attain their peak bone strength in their late 20s and early 30s. From that time on, bones begin to lose their calcium and become more fragile and prone to fracture. Osteoporosis can occur at younger ages. You don't have osteoporosis. You have osteopenia. It's a marker on the road to osteoporosis.

At young ages, girls should be on a program of building a bank deposit of calcium and strong bones by meeting the daily requirements for calcium and vitamin D, and by not doing things that lead to bone demineralization, like smoking. Daily exercise is another requirement for strong bones.

The booklet on osteoporosis explains the prevention and treatment of this debilitating disease. Readers can order a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue - No. 1114W, Box 338475, Orlando, FL 32833-8475. Enclose a check or money order (for cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

ANSWER: Stretch marks are scars. Your former weight stretched the skin beyond its limits, and the skin tore. Scars formed where the tears occurred.

Time is one of the best treatments for them. They lighten up and blend in with the rest of the skin. How long that takes is unpredictable, but it happens.

REIN A - an acne medicine - has been suggested as a treatment for stretch marks. I can't tell you if it's successful all the time or how much of the time.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I walk half an hour each morning. Lately, I have experienced chest pain, followed by gas and sometimes heartburn. The same thing happens when I shovel snow. I am 81 and do not take any medicine. I have had all the lung and heart tests without any problems showing up. What do you think this is? — F.J.

ANSWER: When you say "all the tests," does that include a stress test, the test taken while you walk ever faster on a treadmill and an EKG is constantly taken? If not, you need one. In fact, even if you have had a stress test, go back in the doctor. Undiagnosed chest pain that comes with exertion makes me leery of heart disease. Don't give up the pursuit of living to find an answer.

Dr. Donohue reports that he is unable to answer questions for his column unless they are sent to him in care of his column. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health materials at P.O. Box 338475, Orlando, FL 32833-8475.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

MEETING DIABETICS' NEEDS

Complications associated with diabetes involve the heart, kidneys, and eyes, but there are other potential concerns as well. The dentist can attest to the fact that diabetics are at increased risk for gum disease. This risk rises when blood glucose levels are poorly controlled due to the fact that diabetes can compromise the ability to fight off germs that collect in the mouth. For these reasons, diabetics should make an extra effort to keep their blood glucose levels under control and to brush and floss well and often. If you are diabetic, be sure to draw the dentist's attention to the fact, and ask the hygienist to show you techniques that will ensure optimum oral health.

Diabetics who receive good dental care and have good insulin control typically have a better chance at avoiding gum disease to help prevent tooth loss. Dentists can be among the first to urge patients to get tested for the chronic disease. We feel that dental visits should be positive experiences. Keeping teeth and gums healthy will contribute to overall health and enjoyment of life. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where teaching you how to preserve your natural teeth for a lifetime is our primary goal. Please call 617-479-8222 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.gripdentist.com.

PS If you are a diabetic, it makes good sense to schedule a visit to the dentist every six months.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman, Chiropractor

HAVING SOME REAL IMPACT

People who want to either increase or maintain their bone density should bear in mind that bone is living tissue that responds to exercise by becoming stronger. One of the best ways to exercise bone is to add running to one's exercise routine. According to a recent study of athletic men between the ages of 19 and 35, it was found that running had a more significant impact on bone mass than strength training did. Researchers found that while both runners and weight trainers had greater bone density in their spines than cyclists, much of the benefit among weight trainers seemed to stem from greater muscle mass. On the other hand, running seemed to build bone density beyond the level of muscle mass.

Bone is the scaffolding

PS: Greater bone density helps lower the risk of spinal compression fractures that lead to severe back pain and deformity of the spine that is "hunchback" shape.

We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy.

A THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

SCOTT DEWARE

We learn the words to the "Pledge of Allegiance" early in our lives. Yet many Americans do not know the history of the heritage of our flag. They are unaware that the first Flag Day was in 1777. On June 14 of that year, the Continental Congress passed a resolution, legally establishing the "stars and stripes." As a young nation, our new flag proved to be a symbol of strength and victory. We all link the name of Francis Scott Key and the then poem "The Star Spangled Banner." Key was held prisoner aboard a British man-of-war in Baltimore harbor during the war of 1812. The British were confident they would capture the Fort before sunrise. All through the night with the "rockets red glare" and bursting bombs the stars and stripes held fast. The Americans had been victorious.

In some cases, one flag can have many histories. Did you know that the same flag the flew over the U.S. Capitol in Washington on Dec. 7, 1941, at the beginning of World War II, was also flown from the mast of the USS Missouri during the final Japanese surrender on Sept. 2, 1945?

Let us on June 14 taken time to remember our flag and be proud of what it represents to all of us...

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19)
Try using that Aries charm to warm up the usual set of workplace naysayers, and then back it up with a solid block of facts and figures to sell your idea to your colleagues.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)
While nothing can deter a determined Bovine from following a course you believe in, it helps to have some supporting data and statements by trusted colleagues to make your case.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
Take advantage of new information that could help make your career transition easier. The weekend is a good time to re-establish relationships with people you haven't seen in a while.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
Personal matters demand your attention as once-stable situations begin to shift. Quick action to shore things up is called for in order to avoid more problems down the line.

LEO (July 23 to August 22)
Although your financial picture begins to brighten, "thrift" and "caution" are still the watchwords for fiscally astute Leos and Leonas to live by. Expect news about a family matter.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22)
Before you try to blame a colleague for a workplace problem, make sure you have the proof to back you up. Make some quiet inquiries on your own to try to solicit more information.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22)
Trying to cheer up a depressed friend or downcast family member can be difficult.

But keep at it, and your efforts should soon pay off in ways you might have never expected.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21)
Taking a new look at an old and frequently recurring problem might lead you to consider making some surprising changes in the way you had been handling it up till now.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21)
Despite what the naysayers might say, setting your sights on a new goal could be one of the smartest things the typically sagacious Sagittarian has done in a long time.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19)
Rebuilding an unraveling relationship won't be easy. But you can do it, if you really want to. Just remember to keep the lines of communication open between the two of you.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18)
A new friendship could develop into a close relationship. Meanwhile, reassure an old friend who might be feeling neglected that he or she is still an important part of your life.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20)
You might be feeling that you're still in over your head as you continue trying to adjust to your new situation. But the pressures ease by week's end, giving you time to come up for air.

BORN THIS WEEK:
You have a gift for sensing the feelings of others. You might consider a career in some aspect of counseling.

A Job Well Done

Officer Carthas was able to get this male to confirm that the suspect's first name was actually John. The officers were confident that the suspect was providing a fake first name and they were able to support this by matching up the height on the suspect's driver's license, which were completely different.

A further check provided the correct social security number of the suspect, showing that his first name was actually John and that he had five outstanding warrants, and his height was 6-foot 6-inches at 270 lbs. This description did match the suspect and he was placed under arrest and transported to the station by Officer Hockney.

The suspect, a 35 year old Worcester resident, was charged with "Unarmed Robbery- attempt to steal victim's money during their altercation, Failing to Register as a Sex Offender, discovered during booking, Misleading a Police Officer- Providing false name and date of birth." He also had a combination of five default and straight warrants.

QUINCY GIRL SCOUT Shannon Leary was the top Girl Scout cookie seller in Eastern Massachusetts this year -- selling 2,254 boxes. Congratulating Shannon is Girl Scout CEO Ruth N. Bramson. The Girl Scout Cookie Program allows girls to set goals, learn money management, and develop marketing skills. The entire troop sets a goal and follows a plan leading toward that goal. Girl Scout troops use funds from the cookie activity to fund a service project or to plan for an exciting trip.

24 Graduate Quincy District Court Program

Established in 2001, Quincy's Drug Court initially requires probationers to periodically appear for judicial reviews. They must complete a 6-month inpatient program, followed by a minimum 3-month stay at what is known as a Sober House.

Among the many other requirements of these candidates is frequent drug and alcohol testing, attendance of meetings, and participation in the Relapse Prevention and Relationships in Recovery Groups.

Probation Officer Jo Rothman welcomed the packed courtroom--graduates and family-members, public officials, law enforcement personnel, judges, past-graduates and others who assist in addiction recovery.

Mayor Thomas Koch thanked the members of Quincy's Drug Abuse Task Force, and praised the graduates, whom he "encouraged to continue to make good choices."

He said, "If you are faithful to your further studies, if you are faithful to that job and your colleagues, to your family and to your values, if you are faithful, you will be successful."

2008 graduate Mary Ann Burke addressed the graduates: "My life began the day I graduated from this program, and it got very, very hard. Having the tools that I have learned in this program have made me be able to stand up here today and thank all you people for everything you have given me."

Norfolk County District Attorney applauded the Drug Court Commencement, referring to it as "a fundamental day in terms of what the human spirit is all about and the court acts as a catalyst for great human achievement."

Judge Diane Moriarty, who presented the diplomas and special awards of appreciation, honored all of the graduates of the program, expressing her sincere respect for their commitment to Drug Court and to turning their lives around.

Of the 24 graduates of the Drug Court, each of the 13 who were able to attend the ceremony spoke to the results of their Drug Court experience. Several had been incarcerated at Framingham State Prison.

Renee Foisy's recovery recently lead to her regaining custody of her 6-year-old son. Graduate Michael Powers expressed wonder of his life now, because he has a seven-month-old baby and a driver's license!

Susan Kelly, clean and sober for nearly two years, said, "When I got here I was homeless, with the clothes on my back...warrants out, bouncing around...I was killing myself...drug court showed me how to live."

Paul Pike, clean and sober for over two years said, "This is a journey that I will be on forever, but I have to keep it in the moment."

Special achievement awards were presented to Tara Brown, an employee of the Norfolk County Sheriff's Department, for her extraordinary assistance to the Drug Court regarding medical issues and obtaining medical records.

Recently retired Probation Dept. employee Carol Queney received a special recognition award for her years of dedication to the recovery community.

Judge Moriarty closed the program with a quote for the graduates:

"The future is not a result of choices among alternative paths that is offered by the present, but a place that is created. Created first in the mind, in the will, created next in activity. The future is not someplace we are going, but what we are creating...paths are not to be found, but made, and the activity of making them changes both the maker and the destination."

City Celebrates Flag Day

AMERICAN BELLES sing patriotic songs along the route of Quincy's 58th annual Flag Day Parade Saturday. Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Noble

9/11 FLAG that flew from one of the World Trade Center towers in New York City on Sept. 11, 2001 and was later recovered at Ground Zero after the terrorist attacks is carried by Boy Scouts from Troop 42 along the route of Quincy's Flag Day Parade Saturday. The flag, which has been stitched together using other American flags, began a national tour in Quincy on Flag Day.

Council Prepares For Budget Vote School, Fire Dept. Forecast Layoffs July 1

By LAURAGRIFFIN

Both fire and school department officials last week forecast imminent layoffs while the police department will leave 11 openings unfilled due to level-funded budgets expected to be in effect July 1.

School Supt. Richard DeCristofaro and Acting Fire Chief Joseph Barron announced the expected layoffs last week during a Finance Committee meeting.

At the same meeting, Police Chief Paul Keenan submitted his budget which details 11 unfilled police slots.

Nearly all of the city's 23 departments have been allocated level-funding for 2010 and nearly all department heads have described adjustments needed to fund their programs. Beginning in May, Chairman John Keenan and his committee members began reviewing the 23 municipal budgets with city officials.

Now the Finance Committee must make a formal recommendation to the City Council regarding Mayor Thomas Koch's proposed 2010 municipal budget of $226,523,476.

City Council must formally approve a 2010 budget figure by June 25.

Council Approves Purchase Of 7-Acre HoJo's Site

City Council Monday unanimously approved the $95,000 purchase of the former Howard Johnson's site off the Southeast Expressway as an open space project under the city's Community Preservation plan.

"It's a bargain," said Ward 3 City Councillor Kevin Coughlin, referring to the low price for the substantial acreage. Coughlin also serves on the CPA committee.

The 7.13-acre property was purchased by the state after the site was declared too dangerous for a restaurant with cars entering and exiting off the highway.

Since its closure, the property has been considered for a state police barracks and, in 1993, as a location for a homeless shelter.

Coughlin said Tuesday that the land borders a residential neighborhood in Ward 4 and the open space designation will protect that neighborhood.

"Given the state's fiscal crisis," Coughlin said he feared the state could have

TWO QUINCY RESIDENTS were recently honored at the AFL Labor Awards Breakfast which raised $30,000 to benefit the Scouting Programs of the Boston Minuteman Council. The Council serves nearly 14,000 youth in their programs in the Greater Boston area, including Quincy. James Wool (second from right), Business Manager, Sheet Metal Workers Local 17; and Sen-Michael Morrissey (far right) were honored at the event. Wool received a Good Scout Award; Morrissey a Gompers Good Scout Award. With them are (from left) Jay Hansen, member of Sheet Metal Workers Local 17 and George Meany Award recipient; Kevin Gill, president, McCusker-Gill, Inc., a Good Scout Award recipient; and Mike Berry and Marty Vikens, also from Quincy who served as co-chairmen of the event.

Phelan Campaign Kick-Off Party June 25

The Phelan Committee will host a family-friendly Campaign Kick-Off party in honor of William J. Phelan, candidate for mayor, Thursday, June 25 at the Sons of Italy Hall, 120 Quarry St., Quincy, from 7 to 11 p.m.

The theme of the party is "Help Get Quincy Back on Track."

Donations are $10 per person or $20 per family and will be available at the door, or by calling Donna McGaughey at 617-974-3138.

Phelan, former mayor of Quincy, announced his candidacy for mayor June 2, almost one month after forming an exploratory committee. During that month, Phelan said he spoke to people throughout Quincy, at grocery stores, on ball fields, at coffee hours, and door-to-door.

The Phelan Committee extends an invitation to all Quincy residents, their friends, neighbors and relatives to attend the campaign kick-off party.

"It will be a great time for families," said Donna McGaughey, event planner. "We are making sure that everyone feels welcome and we have an evening planned that will be fun and entertaining, regardless of your age."

Entertainment and light refreshments will be provided with a cash bar.

"If the admission price represents a hardship for any individual or family, contact me to arrange to come as guests of The Phelan Committee," McGaughey said. "The main objective is for everyone to come to show their support for Bill Phelan, and get together and enjoy this party."

For more information, tickets, or for a ride to the event, contact Donna McGaughey at 617-974-3138 or visit www.taxpayers-forphelan.com.

United First Parish Church Wins $80,000 Grant

United First Parish Church, "Church of the Presidents," has won $80,000 in grant funding to help restore the bell tower and improve the public corridor to the crypt and tombs of the Adams Presidents.

Partners in Preservation announced the award at a press conference Tuesday at the Boston Park Plaza Hotel.

United First Parish Church is one of 12 historic sites in the Greater Boston area to win preservation grant funding in the recent online voting contest between 25 finalists held from April 14 to May 17 of this year. Altogether, a total of $1,000,000 was awarded.

Launched in 2006, Partners in Preservation is a five year program funded by a pledge of $5.5 million from American Express in partnership with the National Trust for Historic Preservation to promote and fund historic preservation throughout the United States. The Greater Boston area is the fourth region to host the program. For information about this year's award recipients, visit partnersinpreservation.com.

The Rev. Sheldon W. Bennett, Minister, said, "Our congregation is thrilled to have won this grant. We thank the Quincy community for their enthusiastic voting and wonderful support. The award will help us preserve this important historic national landmark.

"The gold dome of the bell tower soon will gleam in renewed splendor."

Rev. Bennett also said Tuesday's award will match an additional $80,000 in Community Preservation Act funds already committed by the City of Quincy.

An Advisory Committee comprised of Greater Boston civic leaders and preservationists made the final awards on the basis of the number of votes cast and the merits of project.

sold the property for a development that impacted destructively on the local residents.

The HoJo's site was one of nine projects recommended as CPA projects this year by the committee and Mayor Thomas Koch.

Among the expenditures is $40,000 for the second round of restoration and storage of city records.

Such restoration is essential, according to City Clerk Joseph Shea who described the success of a previous preservation project with CPA funds that saved vital records.

Also selected as Historic Preservation projects were the following:

- $10,000 for a fence at the Josiah Quincy House, 22 Muirhead St.
 - $10,000, a ruins stabilization study for Lyons Turning Mill.
 - $75,000, the restoration of Forbes Hill Water Storage Tower.
 - $5,000 for the repair and restoration of damaged headstones at the Sailor's Home Cemetery.
- In addition, the Commission on the Family will receive $25,000 for its transitional housing program and $9,900 will cover park improvement projects with $3,500 designated for nature trails through the uplands adjacent to the Germantown salt marsh and $6,400 for the East Squantum Street

Beautification Project.

Prior to the council's vote on the funds, members saluted Steve Perdios, Chairman of the committee and the Quincy Environmental Network.

According to Perdios's report to the mayor, local preservation funds totaled $1.25 million this year with a state match of $761,415 in October, 2008.

"This represents a 68% match to our local Community Preservation Act surcharge accrued in fiscal year 2008," according to Perdios.

The CPC members are Conservation Commissioner John Brennon; Park and Recreation Board member Connie Driscoll; Housing Authority member John Menz; Historic Commission Anthony Ricci; Councillor Coughlin, Planning Board member Patrick Foley and at large members Perdios, Maureen Mazrimas and Paul Kodad.

2010 Census Complete Count Committee

Local leaders joined Mayor Thomas Koch this week in a citywide effort by forming a Complete Count Committee (CCC) to ensure an accurate count of the Quincy residents during the 2010 Census.

The Quincy CCC will work with local community-based groups and business institutions to develop and implement an outreach program to create awareness of and participation in the 2010 Census throughout Quincy.

"This is about our community, our city, our future. This is why it is so important for us to work together," Koch said.

He also emphasized the importance of Census data ensuring a fair distribution of federal funds and political representation to all cities and towns.

Other community-based groups and organizations in Quincy are encouraged to join the citywide CCC to help raise awareness about the benefits of the Census and the need for the residents to respond to the questionnaire they will receive in March, 2010.

"This Complete Count Committee is a volunteer committee established by the City of Quincy, where a cross-section of representatives is selected to develop and implement a plan designed to target the unique characteristics of our community, with a specific focus on hard to count populations," said John Brothers, Executive Director of Quincy Asian Resources Inc, and a member of the Quincy CCC.

Brothers pointed out that the Committee could also educate the City's increasingly diverse population about the importance of being counted in the upcoming Census.

Bruce Kaminski, Deputy Regional Director of the Boston Regional Census Center, who attended Monday's kick-off event at City Hall and thanked Koch and the City of Quincy for the formation of the Committee:

"The Quincy CCC is composed of influential representatives who are trusted voices in their respective communities," Kaminski said. "We appreciate their efforts to inform the residents of Quincy that the 2010 Census is safe, easy and important. These Committee members understand the importance of an accurate Census population count which affects federal funding for many programs throughout the city as well as for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts congressional representation."

Council Will Revisit Noise Ordinance Plan

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Ward 6 City Councillor Brian McNamee Monday revived debate on a proposed anti-noise ordinance, charging that an amendment increasing allowable noise level basically invalidated it.

McNamee said no anti-noise ordinance was better than an ordinance with no teeth in it as previously passed by the council.

By the evening's end two hours later, the council, actually, had no anti-noise ordinance.

However, councillors did agree to hold a special meeting on a revised proposal in July after the amendments to the ordinance have been advertised.

McNamee sought changes in the ordinance after City Clerk Joseph Shea read a letter from Mayor Thomas Koch, indicating that he would veto the original ordinance due to the high allowable noise levels.

"He saw this as an opportunity to correct something that would cause enforcement issues," said McNamee.

Fellow councillors joined McNamee, voting with him for reconsideration by a 5-4 vote and, nearly, all the votes and the entire debate that followed would be that close.

City Council President Jay Davis was the swing vote on several close issues.

McNamee, Ward 3 Councillors Kevin Coughlin, Ward 3; Leo Kelly, Ward 1, and John Keenan all focused on decreasing the allowable noise by ten decibels or by re-wording the ordinance to protect residents during late evening hours.

McNamee said without a noise ordinance, Marina Bay would become "Lansdowne Street South."

Keenan proposed an amendment which set a 65-decibel noise level from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m.; a 60 decibel count from 5 p.m. to 11 p.m. and a 55 decibel count from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m.

In addition, the amendment allowed only written warnings and no fines for violations for the first 90 days of the ordinance.

During that period, Keenan said the Noise Ordinance Committee could study the results and file a report.

McNamee noted that Boston's law has a lower decibel level than that allowed under the original ordinance amended by Councillor Michael McFarland.

Coughlin Wins Mechanical Parking Ban

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin won unanimous support Monday for an ordinance banning outdoor mechanical parking apparatus.

Coughlin said that mechanical parking equipment was almost installed on property on Hancock Street, North Quincy, which would have diminished the gateway to the city.

Mechanical parking apparatus allows attendants to stack up to three or four vehicles on gates with automatic lifts and is used on open parking lots.

One of the leading companies of mechanical lifts is Park Plus, Inc. of New Jersey. The company began selling the high density parking in 1969.

Coughlin's parking ordinance prohibits such apparatus on outdoor parking lot.

The mechanical parking ban was one of three parking issues raised at Monday's council meeting.

Planning Director Dennis Harrington filed an amendment to the center's redevelopment plan, which will guarantee sufficient parking for businesses and agencies which currently use the Hancock Parking lot.

Under the amendment, the "master developer shall provide adequate parking to serve the patrons and users of the Hancock surface parking facility."

Harrington credited Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond with alerting planners to the issue.

At the same meeting, City Council President Jay Davis asked public works Commissioner Larry Prendeville to work on improving the aesthetics of the Hancock lot.

Davis asked that the grass be mowed and the lot lines be properly marked.

Arts On The Shore Saturday At Wollaston Beach

"Arts on the Shore" featuring sand sculpting and other activities will be held Saturday, June 20 from noon to 4 p.m. on Wollaston Beach near the South end and Rice Road.

Besides sand sculpting, the event will include an art show, chalk art, moon bounce, clown show, DJ, build your own sand castle, face painting and other fun activities. Bring a beach chair, blanket and toys for more family fun.

The event is being presented by the Friends of Wollaston Beach, state Department of Conservation and Recreation, Quincy Art Association, Ward 5 Association and the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission.

The event will be rescheduled to the fall if there is rain on Saturday. Visit www.wollastonbeach.org for rain out information.

Son Beams

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Happy Father's Day

Sunday is Father's Day. It also happens to be the Summer Solstice, officially the start of summer and the longest day of the year.

For me, it will be my first Father's Day without my Dad. Inevitably this Sunday will be tinged with some sadness. But I will also find solace filling the day with loving thoughts of Henry and the cherished times we spent together as father and son.

Before I go any further I want to thank the many readers who have made wonderful comments about my stories about Henry in this space. It has helped me through this grieving process and years from now I will be happy that I decided to share some of those reflections with our readers.

Hopefully this remembrance will not create any tears like some other columns. Not the intent this week.

Instead, I want to share some upbeat and perhaps amusing memories of time together as father and son over the years.

I call them:

Henry and Bob – six moments a son will never forget.

No. 1. First game at Fenway Park.

My father took me to my first Red Sox game at Fenway Park back in the early 1970s when I was 9 or 10 years old. We had grandstand seats along third base. The Texas Rangers were the opponent. Typical summer day. Kind of a forgettable game except for something that happened near us in the stands.

Behind us were two older men -- well into their 70s -- seated a few seats and a row apart. One must have been a fan of Billy Martin, the former Yankee player and at the time manager for Texas. This guy was in Yankee pinstripes head-to-toe. The other guy's in full Red Sox regalia.

Henry looks over at them. He knows a storm is brewing from the beers they're drinking.

Sure enough, a few innings later, they start fighting. One guy has a bloody nose, the other a fat lip. Security comes to break it up. More people are watching this than the game it seems.

Welcome to Fenway, Bob.

My dad and I would take in many Red Sox games in the ensuing years. He'd always spring for a hot dog and soda and if I pestered him enough, some popcorn sold in a mega-phone shaped cardboard container. Just don't cheer in anyone's ear.

Regardless of a win or loss, it was always a victory taking in a game at Fenway with your dad.

No. 2 Henry attends a Little League Game

Like a lot of kids, I played Little League baseball. Most of the games were after school before it got dark, or Saturday afternoons. Henry worked most of those times and rarely had a chance to see me play. Except one game when portable lights were set up at a field behind Lakeside School in Braintree.

My team – Comer Electric – played Filene's – under the lights. I was so excited because Henry could come and watch the entire game. Perhaps too excited.

I struck out three times trying desperately to get a hit for Henry.

After the game, Henry comes over to me and says "Well, you played okay. But I think that bat you were using was too short. You should have used a longer one."

I don't think it was the bat . . . but I got the message. Never quit. Get 'em next time.

3. First Time Fishing

When I was just a small boy, my Dad liked to take me fishing. Some times it was on a friend's boat in Quincy Bay. But the first time I cast a line was in Dennis Port while on vacation one summer. We went to the bait shop and got some sea worms. Dad showed me how to bait a hook.

Soon we were standing on a bridge over a salt-water stream ready to catch something. I dropped my line, waited for it to hit the water, then after it stopped I slowly reeled it in a bit. Within seconds (really, this is no joke) I felt some weight on the hook. My father excitedly told me to keep reeling it in.

Next thing I know there's a fish dangling from the end of my line. I take the line up and there on the end of it is the first fish I ever caught. Not sure what it was. But you know what? I didn't catch it in its mouth – I caught near its eye. Pure luck the hook snagged the fish.

I doubt we caught anything the rest of the day. But that first fish was a pure Kodak moment.

4. Parents' Weekend At UNH

My father was a huge influence on my decision to attend the University of New Hampshire. It was my dad who met with my guidance counselor at Braintree High School and went away thinking UNH would be a good fit: not too big, great journalism program and close enough that I could come home for a weekend.

It was Henry who took the last application for UNH available at Braintree High and handed it to me one day after school. "Go and fill this out. I know you like the school but you have to fill this out before it's too late," he told me.

Sure enough, I took the application and put it on my "to do" list.

Henry wasn't happy.

It was a Friday night and I had made plans to go out. But I soon realized Henry was right: the application came first.

I called my friends and said I couldn't go out. I had to get something finished. So I locked myself in my room and filled out the application. I soon realized Henry was just trying to help me set priorities. And before I could say "Let's Go Blue" my application was finished.

During my college years in Durham, my folks always made it a point to visit for family weekend. We'd sample the local fare on Main Street (the old Tin Palace was a favorite), ride around the campus and always take in a sporting event. Mostly football but sometimes a hockey game, too.

Both Mom and Dad were gamers – regardless of the weather, they would sit and watch sports with me. Not sure my mother really enjoyed going from the cold football stands to the wooden hockey benches inside Snively Arena within a matter of hours but we always managed to make the most of our time together. They did it for me.

5. Moving In Day at UNH

I moved into my first dorm in Durham on a hot, muggy August afternoon in the summer of 1983. Talk about being uncomfortable. Lugging boxes, bags, furniture, clothing, small refrigerator, etc up four flights of stairs (the elevator wasn't working) through a sea of dazed and confused, deer in the headlights, why-am-I-here freshmen.

We made countless trips from the family station wagon parked well beyond the dorm into the residence hall. I probably had two trips under my belt before I started sweating profusely. Not exactly the image you want to project to the freshmen women I might add.

So, after a few more trips, I decided to take a shower in the common bathroom and get into a change of clothes.

Henry, of course, is fresh as a daisy. Cool, calm, collected. I don't think I ever saw him sweat. That day or ever. I'm told I got his penchant for the pen but sweat glands . . . forget it.

After a few hours, I was all moved in. It was a tough goodbye as any parent of college-bound kids can attest. But I made sure to call home often.

6. Starting at the Sun

I began working full-time at The Sun 22 years ago this past May 25. It was the Tuesday after Memorial Day weekend. And it's memorable for one thing: what happened before I got to work.

As my father and I got ready to go to work together, he called me into his office at home. He took out a piece of paper and started scribbling numbers and notes on it. We hadn't discussed starting salary yet (should have done that my freshman year . . . could have changed majors . . . just joking).

So, he slips the piece of paper to me and says, "How's that to start?"

I look at it and wonder "is there a number missing?"

Not exactly what I was hoping for salary-wise but better than nothing so I say "sure."

It's enough to help pay off the student loans and buy my first new car.

But not enough to move out of the house and afford rent somewhere else.

This was Henry's genius. Keep the son in the house for a while. Soon I'm doing the yard work, cleaning the pool, even making pizzas for dinner.

To be fair, Henry was always good to me when it came to The Sun. More than good. Sure I was his only son. But more so because I treated him like he was my boss. I tried to show respect. I listened and learned. And there are some things he did for me that I probably didn't appreciate as much as I should have.

But I know one thing: part of whom I am is because of those cherished times together. Especially the 22 years I worked with him at the newspaper.

Happy Father's Day, Dad.

And thanks for everything.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1908 postcard view of the original Sacred Heart Catholic Church that was on the corner of Hancock and Hunt Streets in North Quincy. This now the site of a Hess gas station. Father Francis Frigugliette built this building as a mission church of St. John's parish where he was a curate in 1878; Archbishop Williams consecrated it. Fr. Francis as he was known later became pastor of St. John's and established two other mission churches: St. Francis-by-the-Sea in Houghs Neck and St.

Francis of Assisi in Braintree. He also served as pastor of St. Mary's Church in West Quincy. He was known and revered as Quincy's pastor for 32 years. Sacred Heart became a separate parish in 1903 and in 1924 moved to a new building located on the corner of Glover Avenue and Hancock Street. This old church was demolished in 1929 and the land was sold. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Annie Performers Thank Show's Director And Producer

Hi my name is Shauna Fox and me and my best friend Rachel Couture were in the cast of the Quincy musical Annie performed by the Squantum Community Youth Choir.

We would both like to thank our wonderful director and producer Erin Glennon and Meghan Driscoll.

Thank you so much Erin and Meghan for all the hard work that you put into this musical even though this has been mine and Rachel's first year working with you.

We think you are fabulous and can't wait to work with you next year so thanks for all the hard work and time you put into this musical.

It was a great success thanks to you too.

We love you so much. From Pepper and July aka Shauna Fox and Rachel Couture

A 'Thank You' From Quincy Youth Baseball To Granite Links

Quincy Youth Baseball would like to thank and acknowledge the tremendous work by Brad MacDonald and the Granite Links grounds crew this season in maintaining the Quarry Hills baseball fields.

Recently, heavy rains on consecutive days threatened the postponement of several playoff games. Mr. MacDonald and his crew were at the fields early each morning working on the fields and the games were played as scheduled.

Their efforts may go largely unnoticed but they are greatly appreciated by over 600 Quincy Youth

Baseball players who use these fields. Thank you again to Brad MacDonald and the Granite Links team for providing the kids with a baseball facility that they deserve.

Cat Nip Toy Sale Proceeds Benefit Quincy Animal Shelter

At the Spring Fair, sponsored by St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Parish on June 13, attendees were remarkably attracted to the Catnip-in-a-Bag Cat Toys on sale for "just 50 cents each." One woman bought a basket full of the bags for Christmas gifts and, by late afternoon, few bags remained unsold.

Several parish members worked together to create the cat toys and packaged each one with a tiny fact sheet about catnip. Among the interesting facts featured: About 10 to 30% of cats and even more kittens do not like catnip. A pinch of catnip on a new scratcher can entice the cat to use the object as a scratching site that all cats should have.

Cat toy sale proceeds benefit the Quincy Animal Shelter at 40 Broad Street where many wonderful kittens and other animals are now waiting for adoption into a suitable, caring home.

French Surrender; Hitler, Mussolini To Discuss Peace Terms

By FRANK McCAULEY

Marshal Henri Philippe Petain told the nation that it must lay down its arms and ask Adolph Hitler for peace. The aged general told France that "the battle must cease and that a communication to Germany asking for terms of peace already has been dispatched." Petain declared that he spoke "with a heavy heart."

His address to Hitler was sent a few hours after Petain assumed office, replacing Premier Paul Reynaud.

(Editor's note: Petain headed a government covering one-third of the country not occupied by the Germans, with a government located at Vichy. After the war, Petain was tried as a war criminal, found guilty and sentenced to death. Petain, who was the "hero of Verdun" in World War I, later had his sentence commuted to life imprisonment by President Charles DeGaulle. He died in 1951 at age 95.)

PROPERTY OWNERS TO RECEIVE TAX BILLS

Thousands of Quincy property owners were scheduled to receive their 1940 tax bills today. They will learn whether or not they have shared in large-scale adjustments in valuations that were announced by Quincy Mayor Thomas S. Burgin. The number of bills mailed out totaled 22,000. The total valuation of real and personal property for 1940 was $112,700,000, compared with 1939 totals of $113,200,000, a decrease of $500,000.

COUNCILLORS ASKED TO LOOK INTO LOCAL HOUSING ASSOCIATION SITUATION

Ward 2 City Councillor Louis A. George introduced a resolution in the City Council seeking the appointment of a special committee to discern the need for a housing authority in Quincy. Councillor George said a lack of housing facilities exists in Quincy. (Editor's note: A Housing Authority was established in Quincy in 1946. Mr. George was the first state appointed member, serving from 1946 until his death in 1964.)

Independence Forever Reenactment At Adams National Historical Site

A reenactment of the passage of the Declaration of Independence at the Second Continental Congress will be held Saturday, July 4 at noon and 3 p.m. in the Carriage House (Pennsylvania State House), located on the grounds of the Old House at Peace field, 135 Adams St., Quincy.

As a member of this history-making "band of brothers," participants may assume the roles of the delegates to the Second Continental Congress and engage in a debate that will culminate in the adoption of the Declaration of Independence and the signing of the historic document.

This interactive and engaging event is an invitation to adults and children to take part in the momentous event that John Adams recalled as the "great anniversary festival" that will be celebrated by "bonfires and illuminations from one end of this continent to the other from this time forward forever more."

Admission to the event is free.

For more information, call the Visitor Center at (617) 770-1175.

The Adams National Historical Park, a unit of the National Park Service, was established in 1946 to commemorate the lives of the distinguished Adams family including second U.S. President John Adams and sixth U.S. President John Quincy Adams.

For information about this or any other interpretive programs offered by the park, call (617) 770-1175.

39th Annual Quincy Center Summer Festival July 16-18

The Quincy Business Association (QBA), in cooperation with the office of Mayor Thomas Koch, will mark the 39th annual three-day summer festival July 16, 17 and 18.

Each year the city closes Hancock Street in Quincy Center to traffic to allow local vendors to display their wares.

The hours are Thursday and Friday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

On Thursday and Friday from 12 noon to 4 p.m. there will be music by Gerri DeLuca. Also on Thursday, a popular local group, Part Time Lovers Band will perform from 5 to 7 p.m.

The Bay Band will perform Saturday afternoon with 45 volunteer musicians, ranging from high school students, businessmen, teachers, homemakers and physicians to senior citizens. They will perform selections ranging from John Philip Sousa to jazz medleys by Harry James and others.

Also on Saturday, the Woods Auto School will sponsor an Antique & Classic Car Show, with a trophy award for the best in show.

For more information call the QBA office at 617-471-3232.

Ward 4 Association To Present Free Movie June 22

The Ward 4 Neighborhood Association will present a Free Movie Under the Stars called "Hotel for Dogs" Monday, June 22 at O'Rourke Park, Quarry Street at dusk.

Rain date is Wednesday, June 24.

Persons are asked to bring blankets, beach chairs, snacks and bug spray.

During the summer months, the Ward 4 Center will host workshops presented by the South Shore Camera Club, a babysitting course, cartooning workshops, and trips to the Boston Harbor Islands.

The Ward 4 Neighborhood Association is made up of members who live throughout Ward 4. They help create and support local programs such as Coffee and Conversations that help to education neighbors about the changes in their ward, holiday celebrations, workshops and more.

They also govern a Community Block Grant that funds many of the programs.

For more information, call the Ward 4 Center at 617-786-0696 or www.wardfour.org.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Don's Easy Chicken Casserole

Don McMullen, one of my faithful readers who loves to cook, recently sent me some of his favorite recipes.

Today's recipe is a very different chicken dish, which he calls easy chicken casserole, and can be prepared ahead of time. I almost never use any kind of dried soups, but it works in this dish.

EASY CHICKEN CASSEROLE

- 1 pound skinless, boneless chicken breast (cut bite sized)
- 3 cups baby carrots
- 3 potatoes (peeled-optional and sliced)
- 1 package Lipton onion soup mix

6 ounces of soda-any flavor (Don used lemon-lime)

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Slightly grease or spray a casserole dish. Start the process by layering some of the potato, chicken and carrots. Sprinkle with some of the dry onion soup and keep repeating until all of the ingredients are used, ending it with a layer of potato, and sprinkled with dry soup mix.

When this is all done, pour the soda down the sides, not over the ingredients. Cover tightly and cook for 2 hours or until potatoes on top of tender.

Quincy College Budget Calls For No Increases In Tuition, Fees

The Board of Governors of Quincy College announce the 2009-2010 budget of $19,303,482 will include no increases in student fees and tuition for the academic year.

The college has revamped its class schedule to realize potential cost savings for both the college and students. The 2009-2010 budget reflects a maintenance of current personnel costs and levels of enrollment.

Quincy College also announces the introduction of two new programs in its Natural Sciences division for the 2009-2010 academic year. Associate degree programs in Clinical Laboratory Science and Environmental Science will be available this fall and spring of 2010, respectively.

In other news, Quincy College will participate in the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs Yellow Ribbon Program, a provision of the Post 9/11 Veterans Educational Assistance Act of 2008. The program allows institutions of higher learning in the United States to voluntarily enter into an agreement with the Department of Veterans Affairs to fund tuition expenses that exceed the highest public in-state undergraduate tuition rate.

Benefits begin on or after Aug. 1.

Quincy College also offers a tuition discount to veterans enrolled in either Liberal Arts or Business & Public Service (excluding computer science) classes. Veterans may enroll at a rate of $100 per credit, which represents a savings of $65 per credit or $195 per course.

Veterans are eligible for this discounted rate regardless of the number of courses they take in a semester.

For more information, contact Lisa Stack at 617-984-1652.

Beechwood Knoll School Receives Green In-Action Award

The Green Education Foundation (GEF) announces the Beechwood Knoll School in Quincy has been granted the National Grid Green In-Action Award.

National Green Week 2009 mobilized over 400,000 school-aged children in 48 states to participate in green lessons and activities from Feb. 2 through April 22 (Earth Day).

A record quarter of a million students participated in the programs nationwide waste reduction challenge where kids pledged to carry their drinks and snacks in reusable containers for the week, effectively eliminating over 100,000 lbs of trash.

National Grid was a key sponsor of the program and the award. Teachers joined in on the effort by spearheading a multitude of environmental projects including planting trees to offset river erosion, running e-recycling campaigns and walk to school days and turned off lights during class time, all in an effort to save resources.

Kids embraced their role as green keepers and tested the quality of creek water, sent letters to President Obama, created mini solar and windmill homes; and built pond eco-systems.

National Grid selected the Beechwood Knoll School for the National Grid Green In-Action Award due to its efforts in teaching environmental lessons to its students.

Beechwood Knoll School participated in National Green Week 2009 by reducing their use of drink containers by a whopping 87%.

To augment their waste-reduction program, they built a prototype vehicle for picking up containers that included six solar lights. These carts also had generators in the wheels that produced electricity when they turned.

Students explored the dynamics of wind power by building individual wind power model houses. Their National Green Week experience will culminate with a recycling book fair in June that will enable children to purchase books for their summer reading at 50 cents per book.

Insurance STRATEGIES

by Jim Sullivan

LIABILITY INSURANCE FOR BUSINESSES

Business owners must protect their companies from lawsuits that are filed against them by their clients. Liability is the legal responsibility for damage to another party's person or property, and because accidents or injuries are difficult to predict and damage awards have the potential to be quite large, liability insurance is likely to be the most important coverage for any business. In today's litigious climate, it's quite possible for a judgment to bankrupt or at least disrupt, any business without sufficient liability coverage. General liability insurance, which protects companies against a wide range of exposures can be purchased separately or as part of a business owner's policy. Businesses that need more coverage generally purchase liability insurance as a separate policy.

If you own a business, your days are filled with phone calls, meetings, and decisions. Spend time operating and growing your business, not worrying about lawsuits. Please call JAMES J. SULLIVAN INSURANCE AGENCY at 617-328-8600 to schedule a consultation. We offer a full range of business coverage, including general liability, commercial property, and commercial excess liability. Our staff provides competitively priced proposals for your consideration and fast, courteous, efficient service and claim processing. We are located at 151 Hancock Street.

Note: In anticipation of a damage award that exceeds the limits of their liability coverage, companies may purchase umbrella liability insurance, which picks up where general liability coverage ends.

Recreation Department Announces Registration For Boating/Sailing Program

The Quincy Recreation Department and Director Barry J. Welch announced Tuesday that registration for the QRD's William F. Ryan Boating and Sailing program will begin at 9 a.m. on Friday, June 26. Registration will be conducted at the Pageant Field picnic pavilion, located adjacent to the Ryan Boathouse in Merrymont Park.

Registration for this program will continue throughout the summer as long as class openings exist.

This nationally recognized program offers rowing, sailing, canoeing and kayaking lessons for youth age 8-16 in the natural salt-water lagoon where Black's Creek meets the sea.

Children's lessons are offered on Monday and Wednesday or Tuesday and Thursday during July and August.

All participants must pass a one-time swimming proficiency test for enrollment. The proficiency test will be given today (Thursday, June 18) from 6-8 p.m. at the Lincoln Hancock Community Pool and then again on Tuesday and Thursdays during July and August at 7 p.m.

This program, under the supervision of the QRD staff, also offers adult programs in sailing, kayaking and canoeing. The QRD added to its adult kayak fleet this year with two new Tandem Kayaks; there are night and weekend activities for families and adults.

The 2009 summer fees are:

Youth Registration: Fee is $45, a second child is an additional $25, and a third child is also an additional $25.

Family Registration: Fee is $90

Adult Registration: Fee is $35 per adult and includes the first lesson, a fee of $5 for each additional lesson up to a maximum of $60.

There is also special fees for adults who wish to canoe or kayak only. Those options can be explained in person with the boating staff.

For additional information, contact the QRD at 617-376-1394.

Neighborhood Meeting June 23 On Hours Of Operation At Willard St. Home Depot

Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis will host a neighborhood meeting regarding the request of Home Depot to change the operating hours for its Willard Street store in West Quincy.

The meeting will take place Tuesday, June 23 at 6:30 p.m. in the second floor conference room, City Hall.

According to Davis, a neighbor called told him the store was opening at 6 a.m. The councillor also said he went to the store at 6:30 a.m. one morning and purchased an item "so I would have the receipt time stamped."

Davis requested a preliminary meeting with representatives from the Home Depot regarding the Willard Street store's opening hours.

Home Depot has been operating on Willard Street since 1991 when the City Council permitted the store by special permit. At that time, the store's operating hours were Monday through Saturday, 7:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Sundays noon to 5 p.m.

Home Depot has asked the hours of operation be extended to Monday through Saturday from 6 a.m. to 10 p.m. and Sundays 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

In the past when the store has changed hours of operation, it did so by informing the Licensing Board. The store's hours of operation have been changed, and the Council was never informed or acted upon the changes, Davis said.

Davis also said he reviewed the 1991 special permit for the store and discovered the permit directed store hours to be regulated by the City Council.

"I have no reason to believe that the Home Depot intentionally tried to bypass the Council," Davis said. "I think it was simply a matter of the store management not being aware of the requirements of the permit."

The meeting will allow neighbors the opportunity to meet with representatives from Home Depot, to discuss the proposed changes and how to handle any future requests to change the hours of operation.

For more information about the meeting, contact Davis at 617-834-3945.

Dr. Corliss McGee On Chamber Board

Dr. Corliss McGee, president of Eastern Nazarene College, has been named to the Board of Directors at the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

As member of the Board, Dr. McGee will assist in overseeing the direction of the not-for-profit association of 1,600 businesses in the communities south of Boston.

A resident of Quincy, Dr. McGee has served as ENC president for three years. She is the first female president of any of the eight Nazarene colleges in the U.S.

"We are delighted to announce Dr. McGee as a member of our Board of Directors," said Peter Forman, president and CEO of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce. "Eastern Nazarene College has long been a member of the Chamber and has consistently demonstrated a strong commitment to serving as a valuable resource for the communities of the South Shore.

"We welcome Dr. McGee and know her contributions will be many," Forman added.

For more information on the Chamber, call 617-479-1111.

Tall Ships Presentation Monday At Library

For five days in July, dozens of international tall ships will visit Boston, beginning July 8 and ending when the ships depart July 13.

At a free slide presentation Monday, June 22 at 7 p.m., at the Thomas Crane Public Library, tall ships author and photographer Thad Koza will highlight some of the vessels that will be part of the fleet. His discussion will include photos, statistics and tall tales as well as provide information about which ships have programs for young people with a paying adult guest, and how to contact ships directly for berths or enrollment.

Koza writes about marine subjects from his favorite port of call, Newport, R.I. He supplements his tall ship research with firsthand photography and sailing excursions on tall ships around the world.

Monday's event is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Call 617-376-1301 for more information.

Fontbonne Academy Congratulates Catherine Callahan '09

President of the Senior class, Catherine Callahan of Bridgewater is heading to The University of Vermont's College of Engineering and Mathematical Sciences to study Civil and Environmental Engineering. Highlights of her Fontbonne career include being a member of the National Honor Society, the Spanish National Honor Society, a member of the basketball, volleyball and softball teams, being a math tutor, a peer minister, and a member of the Environmental Club.

"Fontbonne has done wonders for me. There are not words of praise great enough for how I feel about this school. Not only did Fontbonne build my confidence, but it restored that confidence whenever I had doubts. Fontbonne has inspired me to follow my dreams, and it has also provided me with a strong and grounded foundation. The faculty, teachers, and students have opened my eyes to endless possibilities and the many different cultures, beliefs, and troubles of the world. No high school student could ask for a better education or group of faculty, teachers, and students to spend four years with."

Priorities

My priority has always been my family and the families of Quincy as we prepare our children to travel down their individual paths. Next year, I will have children at every level of the public schools. I know the pressures families face, and this understanding has shaped my perspective on the School Committee. My opinion has always been "a city is known by the schools it keeps. Great schools attract great people!" I have never been afraid to ask questions of any administration, and I never will. During most of my term we have made great strides, increasing funding for needed programs and updating outdated buildings. But recently, due to the economy, we have had to cut programs. I believe with your support, we can maintain the focus on the quality of our schools which only enhance the quality of life in this great city.

A.F Capt. Bai Lan Zhu Grade Officer Of Year

Air Force Capt. Bai Lan Zhu has been named Base Company Grade Officer of the Year.

Selection was based on the individual's exemplary duty performance, job knowledge, leadership qualities, teamwork, significant self-improvement, personal achievements, notable accomplishments, and community service and support.

Capt. Zhu is responsible for launch base mission assurance activities for the Atlas V launch vehicle and has more than two years experience in Delta IV.

Prior to assignment at Cape Canaveral Air Force Station, Fla., she was stationed at Hanscom Air Force Base, Bedford, where she was an avionics engineer for the Joint Surveillance Target Attack Radar System, and systems engineer for the Missile Defense Agency's Upgraded Early Warning Radar.

BAI LAN ZHU

Zhu, an electrical engineering section chief with six years of military service, is assigned to the 5th Space Launch Squadron, Cape Canaveral.

She is the daughter of Kwong Chu and Danna Li of E. Elm Ave., Quincy.

The captain graduated in 1998 from North Quincy High School, and received a bachelor's degree in 2002 from the Worcester Polytechnic Institute.

Zhu earned a master's degree in 2006 from the New York Institute of Technology, Old Westbury.

Councillors Bid Farewell To QATV Producer Liz Clancy

City councillors recently bid QATV producer Liz Clancy a fond farewell after saluting her for outstanding work as a producer and television host on Quincy's local television station.

Clancy married Navy Seal Allen Lerner June 6 at the Bradley Estates, Canton, and will live temporarily in Virginia. She will pursue her graduate degree next fall.

In honoring Clancy, Ward 3 City Councillor Kevin Coughlin said, "Liz answered the question, 'What is good journalism?'"

Clancy and Public Access Coordinator Jon Caliri won national honors for their QATV production, "This Is Taiwan."

Clancy, also, produced or helped produce such programs as "The Vietnam Ward," and "Quincy In Focus." She was well known as host of "Currently In Quincy."

AWARD-WINNING former QATV Producer Liz Clancy receives her City Council commendation from Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin.

"You will be sorely missed," said Coughlin while Councillors Michael McFarland and Doug Gutro, Ward 5, said the welcome mat is always down in Quincy.

Also, on hand for the ceremony was Bette Campbell, Executive Director of QATV.

After the meeting, Campbell cited the numerous programs produced with Clancy and her contributions to Quincy in her five years at QATV.

"Her stories on the environment, Vietnam, and 'This is Taiwan' are examples," Campbell said.

Gutro said he expects to hear more of Clancy's work in the future. You'll do great things if you stay in the business."

City To Purchase Bike Racks

The City of Quincy will be purchasing bicycle racks through the Metropolitan Area Planning Council's (MAPC) bicycle parking program.

The announcement was made Tuesday by Mayor Thomas Koch and Planning Director Dennis E. Harrington.

MAPA, which is funded through the Federal Highway Administration and the Boston Metropolitan Planning Organization, which administers this bicycle-parking program for its member communities. This program fully reimburses the City's investment in bicycle racks installed on public property.

"The MAPC Regional Bike Parking Program presents a tremendous opportunity for Quincy to address the bike parking shortage at the littlest cost," said Harrington.

According to the MAPC's 2007 Regional Bicycle Plan, bicycling is a sensible mode of transportation in the Boston region. Regional surveys conducted by the MAPC indicate that one of the barriers to bicycle travel is the lack of secure, safe parking accommodations.

During March and April

2008, the Planning Department staff conducted a thorough inventory of parks, community centers, libraries and city offices. This inventory entailed taking pictures of each site, which yielded useful information about existing bicycle accommodations throughout the City.

"Planning staff found that adequate bicycle parking is lacking in many of the City's key public places," Harrington said. "To encourage bicycle travel to and from our civic space, we need better, more accessible bicycle parking accommodations."

The plan to order 42 new racks has been reviewed carefully by the DPW, the Parks and Recreation Board and Quincy 2000. The racks should be installed by Nov. 1, 2009 and a full reimbursement for the cost of the racks will be obtained by the City from the MAPC.

Council Will Revisit Noise Ordinance Plan

Councillor Joseph Finn asked whether the reduced decibel level would make it "difficult for commercial interests to function." He cited his own amateur noise experiment to indicate the proposed decibel levels were too low.

Finn cited decibel levels as high as 85 in the daytime and 75 in the evening in an ordinance covering Fredericksburg, TX.

"We need data and we need it quickly," said Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro.

Keenan's amendment passed but than was rejected by City Solicitor James Timmins who said it would have to be advertised.

Timmins ruled after Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond questioned the legality of the change in the amendment.

The City Council's three lawyers then battled it out.

At one point, Keenan, an attorney, charged Raymond, another attorney, with railroading the debate by focusing on the process details.

"When you can't win with substance, turn to process," Keenan said.

Keenan then challenged a ruling by City Council President Jay Davis, another lawyer, but lost the council vote on the issue.

Near the debate's end, City Solicitor James Timmins issued his opinion and, basically, nullified the council's vote and the new amendment by ruling that the changes in the council's revised ordinance required new public notice and advertising.

UFP Church Wins $80,000 Grant

School, Fire Dept. Forecast Layoffs July 1

This year, councillors are not only dealing with reduced or level-funded budgets, but, have, also, been handicapped by the uncertainty of the state's local aid plan.

Chris Walker, Koch's Director of Policy, said Tuesday there has been no new information from Beacon Hill on local aid which leaves uncertainty.

Koch's budget anticipates a 15% or $7 million reduction in local aid, but that may not be sufficient. Neither the governor, the state senate nor the House of Representatives have reconciled one state budget.

As one example, the police department budget includes a $2.9 million Quinn Bill item for education credits which would normally be reimbursed by 50% from the state.

However, legislators are now debating the Quinn Bill benefits and costs.

If the state rejects the Quinn Bill reimbursement, the city will be responsible for the total $2 million tab, according to Walker.

DeCristofaro, Barron and Police Chief Paul Keenan were among nearly two dozen officials who met last week with the Finance Committee, many for the second time in six weeks.

While most departments are dealing with shifts in programs and some cuts in staff, several departments had some good news.

Tom Clasby, Director of the Council on Aging, reported that his department has already moved into the new Kennedy Senior Center and will begin offering programs in two weeks.

"We are compiling a list of volunteers," Clasby said of plans to offer new programs at the center without new staff.

In the City Clerk's office, the hikes in fees are increasing revenues and a retirement will cut the salary line, according to Clerk Joseph Shea who did warn councillors that, eventually, the city must purchase new election machines.

"It's coming down the pike very soon," said Shea who said of the city's machines, "They don't make them any more."

Chuck Phelan, Director of Information Technology, (IT) described plans for an enhanced city web site in July which will make agendas and minutes available to residents on the web.

Phelan said his department has cut city phone bills by $8,000 a month and the city is refurbishing computers donated by such companies as Boston Financial Data Services (BFDS).

The IT budget for 2010 is $2,005,638, down $200,000 from the current budget.

The education, police and fire department budgets account for over 53% of the 2010 budget.

A brief description of changes in those three budgets follows.

Education

DeCristofaro and Business Manager James Mul-laney, III, presented the school department's proposed $89.9 million for 2010.

This budget represents a six percent or $5.5 million increase over the current education budget of $84.4 million.

Despite an influx of $4 million in federal stimulus funds, the department budget lists a shortfall of over $1 million due to such factors as $4,738,620 in "negotiated increases net of breakage," an additional $620,000 increase in special education tuitions and a $218,000 increase in utility costs.

Koch's budget designates $81,083,562 while the school department describes $82,122,350 as the funds "needed from the City of Quincy after adjustments."

Due to this shortfall, the school department has announced layoffs of teachers and staff, curriculum cuts, athletic fees, reduced busing and increased lunch costs.

Ten academic programs and nine support staff will be cut as will a total of 9.8 teaching positions, which includes 1.5 Literacy teachers, 2 Health teachers, two Media teachers, one art and one music teacher and 8/10's of a Physical Education teacher.

The department's enrollment has remained fairly steady over the past 10 years and is currently listed at 8,662 students.

Fire Department
Acting Fire Chief Joseph

Barron anticipated five retirements when he originally presented his 2010 budget to the Finance Committee in May.

Last week, Barron said those retirements did not materialize and the budget now details four layoffs, two firefighters and two civilian positions.

Barron, also, announced Ladder 2 in Wollaston will be out of service July and August in an effort to protect overtime funds.

"I felt it was the most prudent (choice)," Barron said in response to Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro who questioned the move and its "potential impact on my district and (Ward 3 Councillor Kevin) Coughlin's."

Councillors questioned the wisdom of hiring five new firefighters in 2009 and the creation of a captain's position.

Barron said he wouldn't have hired the firefighters if he'd known the officers did not plan to retire.

Under the current plan, three lieutenant positions, one firefighter position, one signal maintenance position and one bookkeeper position will not be funded.

Persons with the most seniority will drop into open positions.

However, four of the five new firefighters have seniority rights due to such experience as the military. They will keep their jobs and bump firefighters with more seniority in the Quincy department.

The 2010 proposed budget designate $18.4 million for the department in contrast to the 2009 budget of $18.6 million.

Police Department

The police department has been budgeted for $21,596,917, a slight hike over the current budget of $21,306,874. Under the current plan, Chief Paul Keenan will not fill three lieutenant positions, one sergeant position and 10 patrol officer positions.

However, both the police and fire departments may benefit from federal stimulus programs, but the funding has not yet been approved.

Under those programs, the stimulus funds will pay the salaries of 13 patrol officers for three years with the city picking up the fourth year tab.

The city could retain firefighters under a federal Staffing for Adequate Fire and Emergency Response grant.

IG To Tour 3 School Buildings

Inspector General Gregory Sullivan will tour three Quincy Public Schools to review the boiler installations conducted under the 2007 Honeywell energy program that cost taxpayers four-to-five times more than standard prices, Mayor Thomas Koch announced Tuesday.

"After our meeting last week, I received a request from Inspector General Sullivan for a tour of Atherton Hough, Merrymount and Broadmeadows schools," Koch said. "We have arranged to have city personnel available to meet with, and tour, each of the three buildings with the Inspector General's team on Thursday of this week."

The Koch administration's ongoing review of the Honeywell deal uncovered the fact that the city paid over $8.5 million dollars for the installation of boilers in seven schools. At an average cost of over $1 million per school, Quincy paid an exorbitant amount of money for boiler replacements, Koch said.

Officials reviewed contract awards for boiler replacements around the state, through the Central Register and found the lowest price at $84,642 and the highest at $347,000, Koch said. Most were priced in the $150,000 to $200,000 range, he said.

Most egregious, Koch said, was the disclosure in the Honeywell contract that the $1 million payback to the City through energy savings achieved with the new Atherton Hough boiler would take 127 years.

"It is outrageous. How this contract could have been signed, and the touted to the taxpayers as costing nothing, is beyond my comprehension," Koch said. "We are committed to making Quincy whole, and protecting our taxpayers from what happened here."

According to Koch, if the city had simply bid each boiler job through the Central Register, the city would have saved millions of dollars, and still achieved a measure of energy management savings that met, or exceeded, the 127-year payback that Honeywell promised.

He stated that the Inspector General was particularly concerned with the schools he will be visiting due to the cost of the boiler replacements, and the savings recapture period.

"He wants to see for himself what the city paid millions for," Koch.

Koch and Honeywell officials are in the process of scheduling a meeting, expected to occur next week. In the meantime, the Inspector General's independent review is continuing.

Summer Safety Review

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Here's a quick review of some summer safety considerations. These warmer months reintroduce us to outdoor activities while we emerge from our spring and winter hibernation indoors. Meanwhile outdoor living requires its own specific safety considerations, which I'd like to touch upon here with you. Summer activities afford their own unique challenges and pleasures while a little forethought can make for safer summer season.

Yes the lawn will need attention again and you'll more than likely be cutting it with a gas mower. Consider fueling the mower prior to use, checking the fuel level before the engine gets hot. Avoid fueling a hot mower engine when fumes can ignite too easily. Keep hands and feet away from below the cutting deck while the mower is running.

Keep gasoline in approved safety cans; place them on the ground when filling them at a gas station and leave room for expansion. Gasoline is pumped out of the underground storage tanks in a cooler state than when stored within summer atmospheric temperatures. Thus it expands as the temperature rises. Expansion can lead to spills, a potential hazard, while vapors are highly volatile and can be easily ignited by a match, spark, excessive heat or a cigarette. Meanwhile store gasoline outdoors, in a shed or within a garage while avoiding storage within your home altogether.

Be mindful that while swimming and water sports afford great recreational moments, water must be respected. When in, on, or around the water, remind yourselves of the respect it demands. At pools and beaches keep close tabs on children and marginal swimmers. With 27 miles of coastline, we all must maintain some level of water safety awareness.

Think REACH, THROW, ROW & GO should someone need assistance in the water. Extend a pole, rope or branch to someone struggling in the water while using any lengthy object to extend assistance to someone in need. Throw a buoyant object like a life ring, personal flotation device or any object that will assist the individual remain at the surface. Row out to the individual to offer assistance if a boat is available. Your last option should be to assist a struggling individual while you yourself are in the water where a panicked individual can negate your best efforts. You cannot help that individual if you become part of the problem and a victim yourself. You must maintain control to effectively assist another.

When boating, have ample personal flotation devices on board. Have every safety feature readily accessible as required by the Coast Guard for your size craft. As statistics indicate, alcohol use and boating can lead to disastrous outcomes.

Relax with caution, while meeting this summer's demands and enjoying its gifts as fully and safely as you can. A little thought towards safety can assist you in this effort. Thank you for doing so.

MWRA Mails Annual Water Quality Report

The Massachusetts Water Resource Authority (MWRA) has begun mailing its Annual Water Quality Report to every household in its service area.

The report is required by the federal Safe Drinking Water Act and updates consumers on last year's water quality test results.

The MWRA and the local water departments test thousands of samples each week. The results for 2008 are excellent; for the 120 contaminants tested for, every standard was met.

The MWRA has confidence in the water delivered to your home and wants residents to have the same confidence.

"Your tap water is one of the best values around," said MWRA executive director Fred Laskey. "For less than about a penny a gallon, you receive some of the cleanest, best tasting drinking water in the country."

In the latest round of testing, the MWRA system was again below the Lead Action Level with the lowest levels ever. Recent tests have also shown that there are no traces of pharmaceuticals in the drinking water supplied by the MWRA.

The MWRA distributes the report to over 800,000 homes in 40 cities and towns. Community-specific interests also provide information about municipal water systems. The reports are being mailed between now and the end of June.

Drug Task Force To Host 'Prescription Drug Disposal Day

The Mayor's Drug Task Force and the Quincy Police Department will host an anonymous 'Prescription Drug Disposal Day' Saturday, June 27th from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the parking lot of the Quincy Police Headquarters on Sea Street.

"It is far too common for young people to begin abusing substances through finding prescription drugs in their own home," Koch said. "Through this event, we hope that we can help eliminate that from occurring."

End Drug Abuse Now (EDAN), a Quincy based substance abuse prevention group and member of the Mayor's Task Force, initiated the effort and will be present to help collect any prescription drugs.

Anyone who has old prescription drugs and would like to anonymously dispose of them in a safe environment is welcome to attend the disposal event June 27.

FOOT NOTES

by Joel Chariton, D.P.M.
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Surgery
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

ARCH PAIN

The most common cause for arch pain stems from structural imbalances of the foot, but it can also be due to the strain of any structure in the arch of the foot. Strain of one of the structures in the arch is often not enough to cause the problem, but in combination with other factors, arch pain may develop. Other factors related to arch pain are associated with overuse of running and/or walking on hard surfaces. Wearing inadequate or non-supportive footwear can also cause this problem. Arch pain is often felt as a burning sensation under the long arch of the foot. An accurate diagnosis early on by a podiatrist is important in managing arch pain. Pain may be one of the first and obvious signs of a foot condition, but it doesn't always reveal the exact cause of the problem. The best way to determine the cause, location, and seriousness of foot pain is to have a podiatric evaluation, including medical history, examination, and tests. And once a problem like arch pain is addressed, complete instructions for follow-up care and prevention are also an integral part of any treatment plan. Call us, 781-986-3668, for an appointment at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals.

P.S. The initial treatment for arch pain is using ice to reduce the swelling.

Phelan Asks Koch To Sign 'Fair Campaign Practices Pledge'

Former Mayor William Phelan has challenged incumbent Mayor Tom Koch to join him in signing "Fair Campaign Practices Pledge" in an effort, according to Phelan, to "end the mudslinging and ensure this campaign is not about personal attacks or dishonest antics."

Phelan hand delivered a letter to Koch's office last week urging him to sign the pledge and "let all your supporters know we want a clean election."

In his letter to Koch, Phelan stated "I have a record, and you have a record, and that's what we should be talking about."

"The people of Quincy deserve a spirited, truthful discussion of our respective records, and our visions for the future. It is time to end the old politics of character assassination and mudslinging," Phelan also wrote.

Responding to the pledge, Koch said: "My values have been instilled in me, and they can't be derived from a piece of paper.

"We took the high road two years ago, and stuck to the issues and we will do the same thing this year."

The pledge, which Phelan signed, is based on the 2008 State of Utah Pledge of Fair Campaign Practices. In it, candidates promise to campaign openly and honestly, to avoid slanderous attacks on other candidates and their families, to stick to the issues, and to instruct their supporters to do the same."

Laforest To Attend 'White House Project' Training For Women Candidates

Ward One City Council candidate Margaret Laforest has been awarded a full scholarship to attend The White House Project's Go Run! candidate training program, to be held June 19-21 in Minnesota.

Laforest will join with 80 other women in training sessions aimed at teaching the basics of running a political campaign, from organizing volunteers and fundraising to communicating effectively with voters. Founded by Marie Wilson - the co-founder of Take Our Daughters to Work Day - The White House Project is a national, non-partisan non-profit organization de-dedicated to helping women participate more fully in the democratic process by training them to run for office.

"I am honored to be selected and awarded a scholarship from The White House Project," Laforest said. "While I have been an active volunteer on many political campaigns, it's quite different being the candidate. I look forward to learning from and networking with other politically active women."

Laforest said she first learned about The White House Project from Jennifer Logue, who ran for councilor-at-large in the 2007 elections. Upon researching the program, Laforest learned that it was founded by Wilson, whose book on women's leadership she happened to be reading at the time.

"In her book, Wilson references the letters of John and Abigail Adams and refers to Abigail as a 'feisty potential president' who passed our way," Laforest said. "I'm very proud of my Quincy heritage and look forward to representing Abigail Adams' city at the Go Run! training in Minnesota."

Anne Mulligan Mahoney To Kick-Off Re-Election Bid For School Committee Tonight

School Committee Woman Anne Mahoney will officially launch her bid for a second four-year term at a "Schools Out for Summer Re-Election Campaign Kick-Off" tonight (Thursday) from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Best Western Adams Inn, 29 Hancock St. North Quincy.

Mahoney lives on Ferriter Street in West Quincy with her husband Kevin and their three children Maggie, age 14, Liam, age 11 and Rory, age 6. She is a life long resident of Quincy and attended the Gridley Bryant, Sterling and Quincy High School. Mahoney has a BFSA form Suffolk University and is a marketing communications specialist.

During her first term Mahoney said she has responded to emails, telephone calls and requests through personal contact from concerned parents looking for direction on how to advocate for a child to reach their full potential.

"I have drawn on my experience as a parent, a business woman, and my involvement in the community to serve the needs of students and parents of the Quincy Public Schools" Mahoney said.

Mahoney currently serves as chairperson of the Special Education Sub-Committee, and is a member of the

ANNE MAHONEY

Health, Safety and Security Committee, School Facilities Management Committee and the Ad Hoc Committee for Channel 22.

"I am proud of the work that has been accomplished in our schools," Mahoney said. "We have set goals and worked together which has enabled us to accomplish large scale initiatives such as full day kindergarten, construction of the new High School and establishment of a committee to build a new Central, as well as addressing ongoing communications issues to better serve the families of Quincy."

Mahoney said she is looking to win a second four-year term.

"During the upcoming months, I look forward to the opportunity of meeting with as many voters and parents as possible so that we can discuss issues involving their children and the Quincy Public Schools," Mahoney said.

"I believe a City is known by the schools it keeps' Great schools attract great people' Although it has been a hard road recently I believe if we work together we can weather the economic crisis and still protect our priorities and create a thriving educational system."

The kick-off event will be family-friendly Children are welcome to attend There will be a craft table and ice cream for youngsters.

A Job Well Done

On Tuesday, June 9, 2009, at approximately 8 p.m., Officers Jay Borden, Tom Ford, Jamie Greene and Paul Brown were dispatched to Elmwood Park for a disorder "possibly involving a gun or a knife."

While enroute to this call, an update was given to the exact apartment and a description of the male suspect, who was attempting to leave. Officer Ford arrived first and said over the police radio that the suspect was coming down the stairs inside the apartment building.

Officer Borden arrived and saw a male matching the description at the exterior door. The suspect saw the officer walking towards him, then attempted to go back inside. He then opened the door and again started to come down the outside stairs. At the same time, Special Operations Officers Greene and Brown came from behind the building and assisted Officer Borden as he ordered the male to kneel on the ground and put his hands behind his back. The suspect was then placed in handcuffs, searched for weapons (none) and detained pending further investigation.

Officer Borden then interviewed the victim, who was the suspect's former girlfriend. She said that the suspect had moved all of his belongings out of the apartment yesterday and she thought they were over. She said that she returned to her apartment with some friends and had a feeling that someone had been in her apartment. She stated that some items had been moved and that the toilet seat had been left up. She found this strange, because she was the only one who had been in the apartment during the day. She checked the apartment, didn't find anyone, so she went back to hanging out with her friends. Soon after, the victim started getting text messages from the suspect and then, all of a sudden, he appeared from the bedroom.

He first punched a door, putting a hole through it, grabbed the victim by the shirt, pushed her around the kitchen, and then grabbed a long knife from the kitchen drawer. The victim's friends immediately got up from the couch and attempted to help her, but the suspect moved towards them with the knife. One of the victim's friends fled the apartment and called the Police.

The victim ran out of the apartment, chased by the suspect, with knife in hand threatening to kill her. He was unable to catch up to her, so he stopped at her car and said he was going to slash her tires. He attempted to poke the knife into the tires, but it just bent every time he tried. The victim saw a female tenant and yelled for her to call the police.

At this time, the victim made a run to get back into her apartment and the suspect gave chase. She stated that she tried to lock the exterior door behind her, but he punched the glass, causing it to break. The victim was about to escape the suspect as she reached her apartment door, but it was locked! The victim was grabbed by her neck, held against the door, knelt in the crotch and threatened with the knife. The victim fell to the ground, where the suspect started kicking the apartment door around her. She stated that while he was kicking the door, she was able to pull the knife from him. She stated that it was at this point Officer Ford was making his way up the stairs and the suspect fled.

Officer Borden checked the apartment and determined that the suspect most likely climbed up the balcony, entered through a propped open bedroom window and waited for the victim to arrive home. Officer Borden retrieved the knife, which was approximately 14 inches in length with a blade of 8 inches. The blade was bent from the attempts to puncture the tires. Officer Borden then spoke with the victim's friends, who corroborated the victim's account.

Two of the male friends said they tried to stop the assault, but when the suspect came towards them with the knife, they stepped back and one of them said, "Don't do this, you don't want to do this man." The suspect yelled back, "I don't give a f@%*, I'll go to jail." It was at this point that the victim fled the apartment, with the suspect in pursuit. Her friends then locked the door so that the suspect couldn't get back in, which inadvertently resulted in the victim not being able to get back in when she returned after briefly eluding the suspect. The victim was informed of domestic violence laws and her options and she chose to get a restraining order. The suspect, a 22 year old Quincy resident, was charged with "Domestic Assault and Battery, 2 counts of Assault with a Dangerous Weapon (Knife), Breaking and Entering with intent to commit a felony, 2 counts of Malicious Damage under $250.00," for the door in the apartment, and the glass door at the front of the complex. Nice Work!

Phelan Says Koch

'Mismanaged' Fire Contract

Editor's Note: Former Mayor William Phelan, a candidate for mayor, issued this letter to the Quincy City Council at last week's Finance Committee meeting which discussed layoffs in the Fire Department.

A copy of the letter was submitted for publication.

Dear Members of the Council,

I write to you this evening to express my deep disappointment at the threatened teacher layoffs and huge cuts to vital education programs across our city.

The fact is the Koch Administration's proposed cuts, totaling $1.8 million, would not have been necessary but for the utter mismanagement by Mayor Koch of the City's negotiations with firefighters for their new contract, as well as his wasteful spending in the fire department.

As you know, my administration held the line on employee health benefits while negotiating the lion's share of outstanding collective bargaining contracts in 2007. That set the stage for entry by the City's employees into the Group Health Insurance Plan offered by the state, and $6 million in savings to our city.

You are also aware that each union with which my administration negotiated received an increase in pay totaling approximately 13% over a four-year period. One of the only contracts Mayor Koch negotiated was the Fire Department, and the total raise received by the firefighters in the first year of that contract alone totaled approximately 13%-15%.

Thus, Mayor Koch gave firefighters a larger increase in the first year of their contract than other public employees received over the total course of their four-year contracts.

Those increases included:

3% base pay increase equivalent of $450,000.00

$300 base pay increase equaling .5%, the equivalent of approximately $50,000.00.

Doubling shift differential pay from 6% to 12% of base pay increasing their total pay on average by $4,576.00 per year or 6%, the equivalent of $1,000,000.00.

Educational pay increase by which Mayor Koch unilaterally gave firefighters his own version of the "Quinn Bill," which on average increases the base pay by nearly 1.5% or the equivalent of $228,400.00 in the first year of the contract alone.

The total cost of the firefighters' contract over and above what other city unions received under contracts which my administration negotiated was over $1.25 million, nearly enough to have totally off-set these harmful education cuts.

Additionally, Mayor Koch's mismanagement of these important fire department related issues cost property taxpayers nearly another half million dollars in unnecessary spending. The mismanaged issues, and their cost, are:

Unnecessary hiring of five firefighters: $300,000.00

Creation of Captain position: $80,000.00

Filling of unnecessary Deputy Fire Chief position: $108,000.00

Total: $488,000.00

In this tough economy, and on the heels of the large tax increase in Quincy's history, I would respectfully urge the Council to reign in this Administration's continued excessive spending, and protect the struggling property taxpayers of our City.

Thank you.

Sincerely,
William Phelan

'Shifting Blame Of Fiscal Crisis On Firefighters' Backs'

Editor's Note: In response to William Phelan's letter to the City Council's Finance Committee, the Quincy Firefighters Association issued this statement for publication in The Quincy Sun.

To the Citizens of Quincy,

Politics is what our country is built on; it is how our government is run. Politics should bring out pride in all Americans, but in some unfortunately, it brings out the worst.

Former Mayor William Phelan has taken it upon himself to attack the administration and the Quincy Firefighters on a collective bargaining agreement. His venomous accusations and characterizations of the Quincy Firefighters are both untrue and unethical. During Mr. Phelan's administration, there was a constant turmoil and unrest due to his less than professional attitude towards those he felt were less than him.

In his latest attack against the Koch administration, Mr. Phelan attempts to shift the blame of the fiscal crisis now being experienced by the City of Quincy on the backs of the Quincy Firefighters. This is not only a blatant lie; it is just another example of Mr. Phelan's mismanagement of the finances of the City of Quincy and inability to accept responsibility for his own actions.

Let's look at the facts:

Health Insurance: The Phelan administration was unable to achieve the goal of lessening the burden of the public employee health care in the City budget because he was unwilling to negotiate in good faith with all

City unions. This was made evident by his inability to come to agreement with City unions by the State imposed deadline. Conversely, Mayor Koch's approach to the negotiation process was a breath of fresh air, where ideas and proposals were discussed in an atmosphere of dignity. Subsequently, Mayor Koch succeeded where Mr. Phelan failed.

Contract Negotiations:

Mr. Phelan negotiated only four labor contracts in 2007, giving a pay increase of 7% over three years to the lowest City employees, while offering grandiose increases of 13% over four years to the City's highest paid employees, which just so happens to be laden with relatives of Mr. Phelan. Quincy Firefighters received the same salary increase as every other union in the City.

Front-loading contracts:

Mr. Phelan complains that Mayor Koch gave the Firefighters higher raises in the first year of their contracts rather than the last year. Unfortunately, Mr. Phelan's failure to mention his implementation is nothing but a shell game. By back loading contracts, Mr. Phelan can buy things that he may never have to pay for. This practice is evident in his contract with Honeywell where he tied up City finances for twenty years on fraudulent repairs, while not including the first of many $3,000,000 payments in his election year budget. His omission of this line item along with the omission of contractual obligations as well as paying for fire and police services with money collected for the water and sewer fees completely exhausted the so-called surplus supposedly left to the next administration. This water and sewer shift cost Quincy taxpayers thousands of dollars in tax deductions.

Hiring more firefighters:

Mr. Phelan has touted his accomplishments of hiring more firefighters for Quincy, when in fact the number of firefighters in Quincy dropped under his administration from 218 to 208 causing the loss of in-service apparatus.

The Quincy Firefighters understand the fiscal crisis this City faces, and have come to the forefront in working with the Koch administration in lessening the burden on the taxpayers of Quincy.

The Quincy Firefighters were the first Quincy union to agree to a less comprehensive health insurance package, saving Quincy taxpayers millions of dollars in health care expenses.

The Quincy Firefighters were the first Quincy union to agree to a wage freeze, saving Quincy taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The Quincy Firefighters have been working short-handed through this fiscal crisis causing greater risk to Firefighters in their efforts to keep the citizens of Quincy safe.

The Quincy Firefighters have been and will always be there to serve and protect your life and your property with pride and honor.

Don't Toss Those Credit-Card Leaflets

Credit-card companies are scrambling fast and furious to get every dollar they can before new credit regulations take effect.

If you get a leaflet in your next credit card statement, read it. That information (which is required to be sent to you) is to let you know what is changing on your credit-card terms. Sit down with a red pen, read every single word and underline the important parts.

Changes described in those leaflets include:

- Less time to make your payment. The number days to make your payment could be reduced, so be sure mail it at least seven days before it's due. (The new regulation will require that statements be mailed to consumers at least 21 days in advance.)

- How your payment will be allocated. If you have both cash advance and purchases on your card, beware any notification saying that the one with the lower interest rate will be credited first -- while the higher interest-rate balance keeps accruing. (The new regulation will require that money be applied to the higher interest-rate balance first.)

- Your interest rate could go up. This is where we're seeing some dramatic increases in the leaflets. Not only are rates going up on new purchases, but on your existing balances as well. (The new regulation will ban credit-card companies from changing your rate on existing balances unless you've been late with payments.) Additionally, they won't be able to tack new fees onto existing balances.

- If you have a new card and are counting on introductory rates (perhaps to pay off a major purchase you made when you got the card), your rate could change before you get to the end of the introductory period. (The new regulations will ban this practice and require promotional rates to remain in effect for six months.)

The Credit Cardholders' Bill of Rights Act of 2009 won't take effect for one year after becoming law. That's a long, long time for the credit-card industry to play fast and loose.

Lenders do, however, have to keep sending those leaflets when they intend to make changes. That's going to be your only warning of changes to your account. So, keep your red pen handy.

Online Tools Can Help Sell A Home

(ARA) - Modern home selling has gone way beyond the "for sale" sign on the front lawn. Nearly 90 percent of home buyers look online when shopping for a home, according to the National Association of Realtors. So your home-selling efforts need to cruise the Information Superhighway at top speed.

"Despite a slowdown in the housing market, real estate consumers have increased their usage of the Internet as their 'go-to' real estate information source in order to successfully find the home they purchase," says Greg Healy, vice president of operations for ForSaleByOwner.com. "Consumers are becoming more independent in the home-buying process, and are educating themselves about real estate issues."

The number of buyers who ended up purchasing a home they first saw online has soared -- from just 8 percent in 2001 to 32 percent in 2008 -- according to NAR statistics. Meanwhile, the number of buyers who found their homes through a real estate agent has dropped from 48 percent in 2001 to 34 percent in 2008.

Buyers, however, aren't the only half of the real estate equation that is turning to more independent use of the Internet to close deals.

More sellers are using Internet tools to independently market their homes in an economy where keeping every dollar of a home's sale price is more important than ever.

"Home sellers need to know how to use the Internet's full marketing power to attract the growing number of buyers who go online to find their next home," Healy says. They're turning to sites like ForSaleByOwner.com that now allow them to list their homes on the Multiple Listing Service and Realtor.com, which were once only available for sellers who used full-service real estate agents. In addition, the real estate website also posts their customers' homes on Craigslist, USA Today.com, Yahoo Real Estate, Google Base, Facebook and other popular websites.

The Internet and broader access to it have helped even the playing field between professional real estate agents and homeowners who decide to sell their homes independently. With access to many of the same tools the pros use to market homes, private sellers are able to better weigh the advantages of working with a real estate agent against the ability to retain as much of their selling price as possible.

Regardless of who's doing the selling, a successful online home-selling campaign relies on several factors:

- Placement on the right sites, such as local MLS sites and national sites like Realtor.com and ForSaleByOwner.com.

- Comprehensive and professional-sounding descriptions of the property, including room sizes, overall square footage, selling points and neighborhood assets.

- Multiple, high-quality color images and, if possible, video tours of the home.

- Simple, easy-to-use ways to contact the seller and schedule a showing.

- Competitive pricing based on selling prices of comparable homes in the area.

NAR statistics also show that homeowners who sell their own homes are able to sell for closer to their asking price and four weeks quicker than sellers who hired a real estate agent. To learn more about how to use Internet tools to sell your home, visit www.ForSaleByOwner.com.

What You Should Know When Shopping For A Water Heater

(ARA) - How's your relationship with your household appliances? You open your refrigerator every day and run the dishwasher, clothes washer and dryer several times each week.

But how often do you think about your water heater? You use it every day, usually multiple times a day. When was the last time you thought about how much energy it consumes or how well it's doing its job?

Heating water can account for 14 to 25 percent of the total energy consumed in your home, according to the U.S. Department of Energy. Choosing the right water heater for your home and regularly maintaining it can help reduce your energy bills. What's more, you can actually get a tax break for choosing an energy-efficient water heater.

Under the new American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009, if you install a natural gas or propane water heater with an Energy Factor (EF) rating of at least .82, or 90 percent thermal efficiency, you could qualify for a tax credit of up to 30 percent of the total cost of installing the heater, including labor, up to a maximum of $1,500. In addition to the potential tax savings, many utility companies now offer rebates to homeowners who install new, energy-efficient water heaters.

So how do you choose the right water heater for your home? Here are some tips:

The Department of Energy advises you to consider several factors, including the type of fuel available to your home (gas, oil or electric), the size of your home, the energy efficiency rating of the water heater you're considering, and the annual operating costs of different types of water heaters. The size water heater you need will vary based on the size of your home, how much use you anticipate it will get and the type of heater you're considering.

It's important to know the differences between standard water heaters and high-efficiency models. For example, the Vertex high-efficiency water heater, produced by A. O. Smith, replaces the straight exhaust pipe found in standard gas models with an innovative helical coil inside the tank. Conventional heaters lose roughly 25 percent of their energy through the exhaust.

Tankless heaters don't fare much better, clocking efficiency levels of just 80 to 84 percent. The Vertex's special design boosts efficiency to 96 percent, saving homeowners money on their gas bill and providing more hot water faster than conventional models.

Even if your water heater is currently working, if it's an older, inefficient model, you could reap real cost benefits by replacing it with a more energy-efficient one.

The average lifespan of a water heater is 12 to 14 years. If yours is approaching the end of its usable life, it's a good idea to research your options and decide on a proactive replacement. If you find yourself without a functioning water heater and no plan for replacing it, you'll be more likely to go for the quickest, cheapest option available - which might not be the best choice for your needs.

Five categories of water heater are now Energy Star rated, including high-performance gas storage, whole-home gas tankless, advanced drop-in or integrated heat pump, solar and gas condensing. For each type of water heater, the Energy Star rating can help you determine just how energy efficient a model is.

Finally, be aware that opting for energy efficiency doesn't mean you'll have to sacrifice performance in terms of how much hot water you'll get and how quickly. In fact, modern energy-efficient heaters like the Vertex can produce more hot water, more quickly and for less money than other models of comparable size. The enhanced performance fits well into Americans' busy lifestyles with high demand for hot water.

Repairs That Can't Wait

Q: I know everyone is trying to save money wherever they can these days. But some people are avoiding making home repairs because they are worried about the cost. Please let your readers know that some problems have to be taken care of when they're small, before they become really expensive to fix. Thanks. — Bill in Minneapolis

A: Sure thing! It's essential that certain home repairs (and maintenance items) be tackled right away before they develop into much bigger messes -- even if the repair needs to be done by a professional.

Below are five tasks that should never be put off, provided courtesy of Angie's List (www.angieslist.com).

1. Change your air filters. HVAC experts estimate that 60 percent of all service calls are the result of dirty filters. Changing air filters regularly (every month or so) can save you up to $100 each year in energy costs.

2. Repair leaky faucets and running toilets. Doing so could save hundreds of dollars per year on your water bill. And don't neglect your sump pump. Check the batteries and update the appliance every few years. A flooded basement will cause thousands of dollars in damages.

3. Check the caulking around your tub and shower for moisture penetration, which can lead to mold. Bath fixtures can avoid premature replacement if the tile surface is kept watertight, and the subsurface, usually drywall, remains dry.

4. Inspect electrical cords and outlets for signs of distortion, discoloration or cracks in the insulation, and hire an electrician to replace tired outlets that no longer hold a plug. A defective receptacle, light switch or fixture replaced during a scheduled visit will save you hundreds of dollars over an emergency repair.

5. Weatherproof windows and doors. These are the two areas with the largest amount of air transfer in both cold and hot weather. Use a digital thermometer to check the seal quality and inspect the caulking for areas that have cracked or shrunk, which will allow water to damage siding and floors. Once sealed, use a programmable thermostat to help regulate air temperature, which could save you up to 10 percent on your monthly energy bill. Consider getting a home energy audit.

HOME TIP: When hiring a contractor to make home repairs, always insist on a written estimate before any work begins.

Spending On Your Home Can Save In The Long Run

(ARA) - Now that warmer weather is here, people are gearing up to make some repairs and updates to their homes. From new roofs and siding to adding state-of-art kitchen and other household appliances, people have more options than ever when it comes to making purchases that can help them save money and the environment.

The ENERGY STAR program, a joint effort from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the U.S. Department of Energy, is designed to help people save money on their utility bills while reducing greenhouse gasses. In 2008, more than $19 billion was saved on utility bills through the program. According to the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority, investing $3,000 to $8,000 in your home -- not including rebates -- can result in savings of 10 to 30 percent annually on utility bills.

For people who are looking to sell their homes or simply a good investment, energy-efficient options can make your home more valuable. According to the EPA, a $1 investment in your home can add about $20 in value. In other words, for every $1,000 invested in energy efficiency, you gain about $20,000 in value.

Colby Swanson, a building and construction expert for BASF, a manufacturer of energy-efficient products for the home, offers these recommendations on how you can save yourself money by making improvements on your house.

* Start with improving the envelope of the building (specifically attic air sealing and insulating) before buying things like a high-efficiency furnace, air conditioner or solar-power cells. The money you may save would be wasted if the building can't contain the expensive conditioned air. Swanson says that air leakage from the house through the ceiling is one of the largest contributors for heating and cooling loss with improperly installed attic insulation close behind. Focusing on attic air sealing and properly installed insulation is generally the most cost effective energy and comfort related improvement in an existing home. The U.S. Department of Energy reports that up to 40 percent of the energy cost of heating and cooling a structure is wasted by uncontrolled air leakage.

"The attic has some of the most extreme weather on the planet," Swanson says. "It's extremely hot in the summer and bitterly cold in the winter. Therefore, air sealing and insulating this extremely harsh environment from the house is crucial."

* BASF makes a product that could save homeowners a lot of money; a polyurethane foam spray, Comfort Foam and EnerTite Foam, replaces the conventional, fiberglass or cellulose insulating product on the market because of its ability to air seal and insulate at the same time.

"Professionally installed foam in the attic will far outperform the conventional products both in air sealing and insulating capability resulting in much more comfortable homes and substantially lower heating and cooling bills," says Swanson. "Studies indicate that a thorough job of leak sealing can cut your home's total air leakage by 33 to 46 percent -- reducing your heating and cooling bills up to 20 percent. To help further the energy efficiencies of a home and help homeowners remain environmentally conscious, don't dispose of the attic insulation being replaced, recycle it by placing it on top of the newly placed foam."

* Another simple and less costly way for homeowners to make their homes more energy-efficient: apply a radiant barrier coating that is sprayed on the underside of the roof in the attic, which will lower heating and cooling bills and increase comfort. In the summer, it reflects some of the heat that radiates through the roof deck back outside and, to a lesser degree, in the winter reflects heat back into the house. One option is Radiance, made by BASF, a water-based product that can be sprayed on to the underside of the roof or applied with a paint roller.

* After the ceiling is air tight and insulated correctly, consider appliances. Next time you need to replace your home's water heater, consider this: after the furnace and air conditioner it is the biggest user of energy in a house. As of 2009, you can now purchase a water heater certified as an ENERGY STAR appliance.

* Show me the money. Financial help is available. What many homeowners may not know is that they have the opportunity to leverage many rebates provided by local utility and state programs on top of the federal tax incentives to help finance home energy-efficiency investments. These attractive rebates and incentives vary widely (approximately 5 percent to 50 percent savings) to help off-set a homeowners investment to air seal, insulate or purchase high efficiency appliances. The federal government offers a 30 percent rebate of up to $5,000 on energy investment.

Go to www.dsireusa.org to find out more about rebates and incentives in your area.

Wins Over Weymouth & Holbrook

Morrisette Legion Begins Season at 2-3

By SEAN BRENNAN

The 2009 baseball season for Morrisette American Legion has opened with a flurry of games and, so far this season, Morrisette has won two-out-of-five games.

The team opened the year with consecutive losses to Braintree (6-1) and Milton (8-7 walk-off defeat) before earning its first victory with a 12-3 win over Weymouth Legion.

Last week, Morrisette finished with a 1-1 record, including a 12-7 loss to Jamaica Plain and a 5-4 extra inning victory over Holbrook.

"We are getting stronger as the games pile up and our pitching, which has been good, is finally getting some help from our hitters," said Morrisette's Bill Marchand. "This year we are more of a base-to-base hitting team. Our strengths are in our outfield and infield defense, our speed on the base paths and our solid pitching staff. With plenty of games left in the schedule, we have a legitimate shot at making the playoffs."

In the team's 5-4 extra inning win over Holbrook Legion, starting pitcher Kevin Magoon went 5 1/3 innings allowing seven hits (five singles, two doubles), walked six, struck out eight and allowed four earned runs. Ben Leahy, who closed the game out by throwing 2 1/3 innings, allowing two hits, a walk, two hit batters, four strikeouts and no earned runs, relieved him to pick up the win on the hill.

"Both Kevin and Ben pitched well for us against Holbrook," Marchand added. "We had the lead late, but they came back to force extra innings, but in the eighth inning we finally pushed across the winning run."

The game-winning rally started with a single off the bat of catcher Matt Rodriguez. He advanced to second base on a single by Ricky Salvucci and he scored the winning run on a RBI single to right field from Leahy.

Morrisette got its offense going in the third inning with a three-run outburst. Colin Ryan singled, John Ainsley singled (both runners advanced into scoring position on a passed ball) and Rodriguez drove in Ryan with a RBI sac fly to left field. Salvucci followed Rodriguez's run-producing hit with a RBI single to center, scoring Ainsley and Salvucci would later come around to score on a RBI single off the bat of Alex Tragellis.

In the team's only other victory of the spring, a 12-3 victory over Weymouth, Ryan Louis pitched 5 2/3 innings of eight-hit ball, allowing seven singles and one double. He finished with four walks and four strikeouts and allowed only two earned runs.

With five games scheduled for this week (weather-permitting) against Stoughton (Monday), Cohasset (Tuesday), Quincy Legion (Wednesday night, 8 p.m. at Adams Field), Milton (Friday) and Braintree (Saturday), Morrisette Legion has a chance to get over the .500 mark and set themselves up nicely for a late June run into the American Legion playoffs.

"So far, Ryan Louis has looked good on the mound, as has Magoon and Leahy and the rest of the pitching staff," said Marchand. "And, as I said, our hitters are starting to turn it on and with a great team defense, we should only get better this month. We have a very good team this season."

Notes: This season, in a break from past years, the two Quincy American Legion team rosters (Quincy & Morrisette) have been decided based on proximity to either NQHS or QHS. Therefore, the majority of Quincy Legion's roster is made up of members of the Quincy Presidents and Morrisette's roster consists mainly of members of the North Quincy Red Raiders... Quincy Legion (0-3) has seen a handful of its scheduled games cancelled due to bad weather... Steve Maze has been handling the manager duties for Morrisette Legion this season, replacing longtime manager Ray Cattaneo who is taking time off for personal reasons.

Race Starts at 6:45 p.m.

Race Starts at Squantum YC 23rd Annual Lipton Cup Set For July 11-12

The 23rd Annual Lipton Cup Regatta will be held July 11-12 at the Squantum Yacht Club. The festivities will begin with registration on Friday, July 10 from 7-9 p.m.

Lipton Cup Regatta will host hundreds of sailors and spectators from Canada to Florida. Classes of sailboats expected to race are N10, Optimist, Laser, Laser Radial and Club 420, 29ER, Hustler, Thunderbird, 210 and Vanguard 15. A multi-hull event is scheduled to be run from the Bravo racing line by the New England Multihull Association.

The Lipton Cup Trophy, originally given to the Massachusetts Bay Yacht Club's Association in 1930 by tea magnate Sir Thomas J. Lipton, was first awarded to Herbert Allbright, a victorious skipper of the Indian Class sailboat. After more than 55 years of inactivity, the Lipton Cup Trophy, nearly three-feet tall in its silver Victorian splendor, is once more the object of grand sailboat racing competition in the waters of Massachusetts.

Pre-registration forms are available at the Squantum Yacht Club on Wollaston Beach (617-328-9759) or by calling Don McGilvary at 617-328-5730, or by visiting www.squantumyc.org.

Bill Dunn, Jr. Memorial Road Race June 27

The Bill Dunn, Jr. Memorial Road Race will be held Saturday, June 27 in Houghs Neck. This event is a great time for friends and family of Bill Dunn, Jr. to gather in honor of his life and share memories with each other.

Registration for the annual event will begin at 7 a.m. at the St. Thomas Aquinas Hall on Darrow Street in Quincy. Those interested can participate in a five-mile run or a two-mile walk, beginning at 9 a.m.

Prizes will be awarded for the first place male/female runner and the first Houghs Neck resident (male/female). The first 600 people to register will receive a free race t-shirt.

Following the road race, a barbeque will be held courtesy of local donations. There will be a DJ and a 50/50 raffle, and the race committee will be giving away a scholarship the day of the race.

Proceeds from this year's race will benefit the Bill Dunn, Jr. Memorial Scholarship, which provides scholarships to Quincy High School students, and also other local organizations.

Day-of-race registration is $20, however, for those that sign up before June 15, the registration fee is $15. Registration forms are available at www.RememberB.com and can be mailed to: Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Road Race, 105 Edgewater Drive, Quincy, MA 02169.

For more information contact Margaret Dunn at 617-471-9075.

7th Annual James P. Kenney III Fishing Derby July 10-11

The 7th Annual James P. Kenney III Fishing Derby is scheduled to commence Friday evening, July 10 at 6 p.m. and conclude at noontime the following day, Saturday, July 11 from the Quincy Yacht Club.

The event is in benefit of the James P. Kenney III Trust Fund, a fund that benefits Quincy residents at both high schools and at the college level. Eligible students will be pursuing degrees in maritime or environmental studies.

The fish caught during the derby will be measured by noontime on July 11 and prizes will be awarded for the three longest stripped bass. In addition to the prizes, a raffle will be drawn where half of the proceeds will go to the James P. Kenney III Trust Fund. A cookout will be held at noon on July 11.

The Kenney family began running this annual fishing tournament six years ago in Jim Kenney's name to fund a scholarship for local students pursuing maritime or environmental studies. Kenney worked on the ocean the majority of his life and was an avid fisherman and overall boat enthusiast. Over the years, the family has raised enough money to provide at least two students with sizeable scholarships to help alleviate the cost of increasing tuition.

For more information about the derby, contact Dan Kenney at 617-786-9067.

Registration For SYC's Sailing Program June 20

The Squantum Yacht Club's Sailing Program will be holding registration on Saturday, June 20 from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m.

Children who wish to participate in the sailing program this summer and their parents/guardians should come to the SYC to register. This program teaches children how to sail safely and skillfully and race competitively, always with a respect for the sea.

Participants must be at least eight years old by July 1, 2009.

For more information on registration, call 617-773-0175.

Girls Lacrosse Games To Be Held On Monday Nights

Starting on Monday, June 15, a 'Monday Draw' of girls' lacrosse pick-up games will be held at Veterans Memorial Stadium from 6:30-8:30 p.m. All Quincy girls, ages 13-18, are welcome to attend.

Further details will be given on June 15. All participants are required to wear goggles and mouth guards and no jewelry is allowed. Goalie equipment will be provided.

9-Under Quincy Redstockings Sweep RI Reds

The 9-under Quincy Redstockings AAU baseball team, behind strong pitching, aggressive base running and timely hitting, swept the Rhode Island Reds in a key divisional matchup two Sundays ago.

In Game One, Kevin McDonald and Matt Eagles combined to strike out nine batters while allowing only one walk in a 9-1 victory. AJ Currie, Justin Sullivan, and John McDonald combined for three hits and seven stolen bases to help lead the Quincy offensive attack that scored four runs in the first inning.

In Game Two, Mark Monahan and Ryan Cox shut down the Reds attack in a 9-3 victory. Gregg Selbert, Shawn Kelly and Matt Tomlinson led the offense with two hits apiece.

The 9-Under Redstockings will be playing in the New England AAU tournament later this month.

Quincy Senior Babe Ruth Results

The following are game results from last week for Quincy's two Senior Babe Ruth teams.

Wollaston Blue

Last week, Wollaston Blue won two-of-three games, beating Wollaston Black, 6-3, and Marshfield, 10-4, and losing to Hanover, 5-3.

Rob Yee limited Wollaston Black to five hits and struck out six batters in a complete-game victory. Steve Cahalan (two hits, RBI), Paul Gould (RBI), Rick Long (RBI), Yee (RBI), Dave Griffin (RBI) and Greg Ouellette (RBI) all came up with big hits.

Against Marshfield, Diego Arredondo held his opponent to four hits and struck out seven batters in a complete-game win. Tim Liuzzo (two hits, two runs, RBI) and Robert Ranalli (two hits, run, RBI) paced the offense.

In the loss to Hanover, Chris Doyle and Tony Salas pitched well, combining to strike out ten batters. Dave Griffin finished the game with three hits and a RBI.

Wollaston Black

Last week, Wollaston Black won one game and lost two, beating Marshfield, 6-1, and losing to Wollaston Blue, 6-3, and Hingham, 11-3.

Against Marshfield, Matt Jayne, Lamonte Toombs and DJ Haskins combined to limit their opponent to just four hits. The offensive stars included Will Head (three hits), Joe Alibrandi (two RBIs), Scott Knight (two hits, RBI) and Matt Sheridan (two hits).

In their game versus Wollaston Blue, DJ Haskins pitched three shutout innings and Joe Alibrandi finished with two hits and two runs scored.

Lamonte Toombs and Tim Martin each had a RBI.

Quincy Babe Ruth/Babe Ruth Prep Results

The following are Quincy Babe Ruth and Babe Ruth Prep League game results from earlier this month.

Quincy Babe Ruth

Elks def. Sons of Italy, 8-7
The hitting of Chris and Matt Kerin spurred the Elks to an 8-7 victory over the Sons of Italy. Andrew Rogantino pitched a strong game and Mike Galloto came on in relief to quell a five-run seventh inning rally by Sons of Italy.

Darren McGrath, Jon Schwartz and Adam Cook all pitched well for Sons of Italy.

Elks def. Morrisette, 11-0
Chris Connelly pitched a two-hitter and James Dunn, Mike Galloto and Terrence Rooney played great defense helping to lead the Elks to an 11-0 win.

The Elks' David Joyce finished the game with two hits. Kevin Jackson and George Whitley played well for Morrisette.

Elks def. Steve Barrett Club
Rookie Tim Keenan scored the game winning run on James Dunn's fourth hit of the game, leading the Elks over Steve Barrett Club.

Terrence Rooney, Adam Nazzaro, Paul Mulvey and Mike Galloto all had multiple hit games for the Elks and Chris Connelly picked up the victory in relief.

Connor Doherty, Zach Sterns and Mike Alibrandi all played well for Steve Barrett Club.

Morrisette def.

Houghs Neck, 1-0

In a great pitchers duel, Morrisette edged Houghs Neck, 1-0.

Josue Ordenez (two hits, run) allowed one hit and had ten strikeouts to earn the win, while Luke McDonough allowed four hits with 14 strikeouts in the tough-luck loss.

Brian Gresselli and rookie Ben Martin had hits for Morrisette.

Babe Ruth Prep

Weymouth def. Quincy, 5-3
In a tight game, Weymouth edged Quincy, 5-3, in 13-year old prep play.

Aiden O'Connell, Matt Kerin and Madison Barnwell all pitched well for Quincy.

HEALTH and FITNESS

Keeping Your Head Above Water

Your family's health could sink or swim, depending on where you choose to spend the summer.

But a few very basic precautions can greatly reduce your risk of trouble.

"Bacterial infections and water-borne illnesses are real risks for those who enjoy swimming, water-skiing or many other recreational water activities," said Dr. Dennis Maki, professor of medicine and infectious-disease specialist at the University of Wisconsin School of Medicine and Public Health (SMPH). "Bacteria, viruses and parasites can all make you sick in 'recreational water.'"

And it's not just natural bodies of water. Maki says pools and hot tubs, as well as rivers and lakes, can be sources for gastrointestinal illnesses; skin, ear and eye infections; and respiratory, neurological and viral problems.

According to Maki, who is also an epidemiologist at UW Hospital and Clinics, the safest places to swim are generally municipal and private pools which are monitored for their chlorine content. But he cautions that even pools can pose risks because some pathogens, such as cryptosporidium, can live for days even in properly chlorinated water. The most common health issues associated with pools are gastrointestinal illnesses or pseudomonas folliculitis, a skin rash. You might become infected by swallowing pool water, even a small amount.

"Water parks can be especially troublesome because so many people swim and play in the water that recirculates and can lose chlorine residual quickly," said Maki.

A study by the Wisconsin Division of Health found that cushioned and padded surfaces, designed to reduce water-park injuries, can also harbor bacteria.

Hot tubs probably pose the greatest risk of contracting an infectious illness from water. The warm and stagnant water invites certain heavy contamination by bacteria, fungi and viruses. Hot-tub safety mandates monitoring chlorine and pH levels, as well as draining and cleaning the tub regularly and properly.

Natural bodies of water have their own set of concerns. Lakes and rivers are predictably contaminated by runoff from farm fields following heavy rain. Maki points out that the water can contain very high counts of coliform bacteria and other microorganisms, such as cryptosporidium, that cause gastrointestinal illnesses. With near-drownings, these organisms can cause life-threatening pneumonia.

Finally, there is the risk of skin infections. "Swimmer's itch" (cercarial dermatitis) usually doesn't require medical care but can be extremely uncomfortable with maddening itching. More serious skin infections predictably follow cuts or abrasions, especially major soft-tissue injuries, and pose the greatest risks to people with compromised immune systems.

"Atypical mycobacterium infections can be very difficult to treat," said Maki, and they require many months of antibiotics or combinations of antibiotics.

The Centers for Disease Control recommend safety precautions for prevention of illness related to water recreation:

- Adults and children with diarrhea should not use swimming pools, hot tubs or water parks.
- Shower with soap and tap water before swimming or getting into a hot tub and, again, afterwards.
- Wash your hands thoroughly after using the toilet, before re-entering the water.
- Avoid swallowing water.
- Don't swim in warm, stagnant water or use poorly maintained hot tubs or pools.

tion involved, have the family doctor or an ear, nose and throat doctor put you through the exercises. What these movements do is shift tiny crystals from one part of the inner ear, where they shouldn't be, back to the part where they belong.

Benign positional vertigo is only one kind of vertigo. Epley maneuvers don't do a thing for other causes like viral infections or Meniere's disease. For viral-caused dizziness, medicines like Antivert, Dramamine or Transderm Scop (the patch worn to prevent seasickness) can make dizziness less severe. A low-salt diet is helpful for Meniere's disease.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have white spots and lines on my fingernails. What causes them? Is it a vitamin deficiency? - D.

ANSWER: Those spots and lines indicate a brief pause in nail production. They're not a sign of vitamin deficiency. Trauma to the nail can do this, and the trauma can be so slight that it goes registers on your consciousness. It takes six months for a fingernail to grow from base to tip. Your spots and lines are halfway up the nail, so they should be gone in another three months. Thanks for the photo. It helped me.

Rec. Dept. Testing For Swim/Boating/Sailing Lessons

The Quincy Recreation Department is conducting an advanced testing program in preparation for registration for its summer instructional swimming program at the Lincoln-Hancock Community Pool.

Swim testing is tonight (Thursday) from 6 to 8 p.m.

Children are registered for lessons according to their swimming ability. The testing program is for Quincy residents unfamiliar with the swim program or for a child who may have had additional instruction during the winter.

The Recreation Department's boating and sailing pre-requisite swim test will also be offered during the same time tonight.

Pool lessons are open to Quincy residents over the age of 6 who have a current pool participation card issued by the Quincy Recreation Department.

For more information, call 617-376-1394. Normal

Free Eye Screening At COA July 28

A doctor from the Lambert Nielsen Eye Center will perform free eye screenings for Quincy seniors at the Quincy Council on Aging, July 28 from 11 a.m. to noon.

For an appointment or more information, call the Council on Aging at 617-376-1506.

recreation-swimming schedule will be canceled during these hours of testing.

ARE YOUR TEETH GETTING A SPORTING CHANCE?

Whether or not sports drinks are a healthier choice than soda, the citric acid they contain can prove detrimental to teeth. According to recent research, which involved submerging teeth in top-selling sports drinks for up to 90 minutes (comparable to drinking a sports drink throughout the day), teeth exposed to sports drinks had partially dissolved enamel layers. As a result, the bone-like layer beneath the enamel was exposed, causing teeth to soften and weaken. This effect, known as "erosive tooth wear," can lead to excessive tooth damage and even tooth loss if not treated. Oddly, brushing teeth immediately after drinking a sports drink does not help because the softened teeth are more vulnerable to the abrasiveness of the toothpaste.

To prevent tooth erosion, consume sports drinks in moderation. We urge a routine of periodic professional exams that will help ensure the health and longevity of your teeth. Fillings, extractions, sealants, root canals, cosmetic dentistry, partial or full dentures, crowns and bridges are just some of the services we offer. For exceptional dental care, call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we want to provide your entire family with the best oral health care possible. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. If you drink sports drinks on a regular basis, ask the dentist about using an acid-neutralizing, re-mineralizing toothpaste, which helps remineralize soft enamel.

WHAT IS CAUSING KIDS' BACK PAIN?

While parents of school-aged children have been advised that lightening their backpacks and better distributing their loads can help kids avoid back pain, some research raises other questions. According to one study, children's activity levels and body weights may have more impact on whether they suffer from back pain. The study involved third graders, who carried an average of 57% of their body weight on their backs, and middle-school students who carried backpacks equal to 11-14% of their body weight. Most carried their backpacks on one shoulder. The middle-school children were more likely than younger children (45% vs. 15%) to report back pain, but that was found to be more a function of increased body mass index than backpack factors.

At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we believe that regular chiropractic care should be part of everyone's healthcare routine, including children. It is most advisable to introduce children to chiropractic at a young age. Regular chiropractic treatment can help children maintain their health. Call us at 617-472-4220 and let us help you and your family members feel better, without drugs or surgery, the natural way, the chiropractic way. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy and are currently accepting new patients. No matter where you live in Eastern Mass., we can offer you exceptional chiropractic service.

P.S. With increasing childhood obesity and inactivity rates in mind, parents may want to schedule a consultation with the chiropractor, which may prove instructive for kids who need motivation to lose weight.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19)
Things that usually come easily and quickly for the Aries Lamb might need more of your time and attention during the next several days. Try to be patient as you work things out.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)
A changing situation can create some complications. But if you apply that sensible Bovine mind to what seems to be a hopeless tangle of confusion, you'll soon sort things out.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
Creating a new look for your surroundings is fun. Expect to hear mostly positive comments on your efforts, as well as some well-intended suggestions you might want to note.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
Maybe you'd rather do anything else than what you're "stuck with" right now. But if you stop complaining, you might see how this could lead to something with real potential.

LEO (July 23 to August 22)
Even a proud Leo ultimately recovers from hurt feelings. However, a damaged relationship might never heal unless you're willing to spend more time and effort trying to work things out.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22)
There are lots of changes on the horizon, so be prepared to make some adjustments in your usually fine-tuned life. One change might even impact a personal decision you've been putting off.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22)
Being the dependable person you are could work in your favor for a project that requires both skill and accountability. But check this out carefully. There could be a hidden downside.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21)
A temperamental outburst about a mishandled project causes some fallout. Be sure to couple an apology with an explanation. A new opportunity beckons by week's end.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21)
Changing horses midstream is usually unwise but sometimes necessary. Examine your options carefully before making a decision. A trusted colleague offers good advice.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19)
While much of your time is involved with business matters, fun-time opportunities open up by week's end. Enjoy yourself, but be careful that you don't overspend.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18)
A "revelation" opens your eyes to what is really going on in the workplace. What you learn could make a difference in your career path. Continue to be alert for more news.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20)
Not wanting to make waves might be the safest way to deal with a difficult situation. But no substantive changes can be made unless you share your assessments with others.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of talking to people that makes them want to listen. You could find a successful career in politics.

Managing Director

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Did you ever wonder where, when and by whom Father's Day was initiated? In 1910, Mrs. John Dodd started the custom in Spokane, Washington. A quarter of a century later, in 1936, a national Father's Day Committee was formed with headquarters in New York.

Through the years, Father's Day has come to be a gracious part of American folk-life. . . There are some who feel this observance is primarily a commercial promotion. . . ringing up sales for the time-honored tire, shirt or pajamas, plus a sentimental card. Perhaps it is true in certain cases. . . But it can be more than this. Indeed, it can be and is a form of satisfaction to the man who is a father and has earned the title.

Moreover, on this occasion, the title of father carries a connotation of respect and reverence. It is a day to observe the commandment, "Honor thy father and thy mother" in a special way.

And so, on this special day to all those special, special fathers, we salute you. We wish you a happy, pleasant day. . . You deserve "Your Day." . .

Banave Couture Clothing Shop Marks Store Opening

Owner Jean Innocent recently celebrated the grand opening of his men and women's clothing shop, Banave Couture, located at 1358 Hancock Street in Quincy Center.

On hand to celebrate were Mayor Thomas P. Koch, Quincy 2000 Collaborative Chairman Ed Keohane of Keohane Funeral Homes, Quincy 2000 Collaborative Executive Director Dean Rizzo, and Quincy Business Association President Jeff Bertman of Rogers Jewelry.

Banave Couture offers casual and formal wear - as well as a unique selection of accessories - for both men and women. Upon entering the store you will find men's tailored suits hanging alongside beaded gowns, high heel shoes, and Seven Brand jeans. Expert tailoring and alterations are also provided on the premises.

Innocent said his business because he has a background in design, has performed tailoring and alterations at Neiman Marcus for a number of years, and was seeking the freedom that comes with being an entrepreneur.

"I wanted to start this business so that my three daughters would have something to strive towards," said Innocent. "They have helped select the items that we sell and it is my goal that they will take over the business when they get older."

A resident of Roslindale, Innocent looked to Quincy to start his clothing store because he likes the area and feels that it's a good place to do business.

Banave Couture is located at 1358 Hancock St., Quincy; 617-376-3212.

They are open daily from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Lincoln-Hancock School Plants Abraham Lincoln Lilac

LINCOLN-HANCOCK SCHOOL students show their patriotism by waving American flags at the school's recent planting ceremony of an Abraham Lincoln Lilac Shrub. The lilac was a gift from the Indiana State Parks and Reservoirs for the Indiana Department of Natural Resources. The school also thanked Connie Nass, state auditor and chairperson of the Indiana Abraham Lincoln Bicentennial Commission and Daniel Bortner, director of the Indiana State Parks and Reservoirs.

10th Annual Guide Promotes City Beaches

Fish, sandcastles, surfboards, shovels, pails and the ocean decorate the cover of the 2009 Quincy Beach Guide, which is now available at local stores, libraries, beachfront restaurants and tourist points.

This free 56-page guide offers readers a list and description of the city's 13 public beaches as well as directions by car or public transportation to each site.

"With the gas prices going up, more and more people are using the neighborhood beaches," said Ward 1 City Councillor Leo Kelly, explaining the special importance of this year's guide.

Kelly has headed the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission (QBCC) since its founding 20 years ago. This year, QBCC is celebrating its 20th anniversary of the Quincy Beach Guide. QBCC will be distributing 5,000 copies of the guide.

One of the most popular guide features is the tidal chart which lists the times for high and low tide from June 1 through Sept. 30, according to Kelly.

The guide is, also, packed with information ranging from safety and fishing tips to proper beach manners, and a little history and anecdotes as well as a list of fun activities in the sand and water.

In addition, the QBCC guide outlines not only the Consultant Predicts:

4,000 Jobs, $10M In Taxes With Quincy Center Revival

BY LAURA GRIFFIN

More than 4,600 permanent jobs would be created and property tax revenue would increase by over $10 million annually once the Quincy Center revitalization plan is concluded, according to a consultant's report released Tuesday by Mayor Thomas Koch.

Koch quoted an economic impact study conducted by AKRF of New York City during a press conference attended by state legislators, Sen. Michael Morrissey and Rep. Bruce Ayers, the city and region's business leaders and StreetWorks partner Lucy Wildrick.

The project is likely to take 10 to 12 years to complete but, during those years, over 4,000 construction jobs are expected in Quincy alone and an additional 3,000 in the county and state, according to AKRF.

As for the $10 million in property tax revenues, $8 million of that would pay off bonds needed to redo the city's aged infrastructure, according to Koch.

"This is great stuff," said John Stobierski, vice president of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, of the report and redevelopment plans.

"We all stand to benefit. We're making history today," said Stobierski, adding, "We're all on board. Tell us what we can do to make this happen."

Stobierski called Quincy, "the heart of the South Shore. We all stand to benefit."

"It's Quincy turn," said Ed Keohane, chairman of Quincy 2000 Collaborative, adding the redevelopment plans are "long overdue."

StreetWorks is most likely to be chosen as master developer and the company commissioned the study which was analyzed independently and at City Hall according to Koch.

"It's a treat to be in Quincy," Wildrick said, adding,

City, Architectural Firm Developing Plan For Wollaston Business District

Sasaki Associates — a world-renown architectural firm — has chosen a planning project in the City of Quincy for its summer internship program.

The announcement was made Tuesday by Mayor

Mayor Thomas P. Koch and Planning Director Dennis E. Harrington.

Sasaki's internship team — comprised of graduate students from across the country — will be working with the city's Planning Department to develop a preliminary land use master plan for the Wollaston Business District.

The Internship team will evaluate and assess the zoning issues in the Wollaston Business District, which will serve as the framework for the potential designation of the Wollaston Business District as a "43-D Priority Development Site." An initial meeting was held at Quincy City Hall to discuss

Public Invited To Fireworks Saturday Over Dorchester Bay

Squantum Fourth of July Committee Co-Chairmen Sen. Michael Morrissey, Sheriff Michael Bellotti and John Nickerson invite local residents to a free fireworks display commemorating Squantum's Centennial celebration Saturday, June 27.

Fireworks will light up the sky over Dorchester Bay beginning at 9 p.m.

"The public is invited, the fireworks will be visible from UMass Boston, Marina Bay and Squantum, so come on down and enjoy the festivities," Morrissey said.

"The fireworks are just the beginning," Bellotti said. "There is the Squantum Road Race Saturday morning, Family Fun Day at the Squantum School Field from noon to 5 p.m. and of course the Parade on the Fourth of July will cap off the festivities."

Nickerson added: "The Squantum Fourth of July Parade will be even bigger and better than year's past, and the committee is working hard on a few surprises for the parade."

"The committee has worked hard to really onto themselves and make this parade one that everyone will remember as the best Squantum Fourth of July Parade ever," Nickerson said.

The parade will feature antique cars, floats, motorcycles and bands of all shapes and sizes.

Quincy Police Announce Guidelines For July 3rd Houghs Neck Celebration

As the Independence Day Holiday approaches on July 4, Police Chief Paul Keenan announces guidelines for the Houghs Neck celebration to be held Friday, July 3.

Due to the heavy volume of vehicular and pedestrian traffic on many of the narrow streets, extra parking restrictions will be in effect and certain areas will be posted "No Parking."

In addition to motor vehicle violations, police officers will be out enforcing underage drinking, open container violations as well as using or possessing illegal fireworks.

"These steps are being taken so that all enjoying the holiday safely. Happy 4th of July, Keenan said."

the planning project with the Internship team.

In attendance at the meeting were City Councillors Joe Finn, John Keenan, and Doug Gutro, as well as Dean Rizzo, Executive Director of Quincy 2000 Collaborative, who attended the meeting as the representative of the Wollaston Business Association.

"I believe that obtaining a 43-D Priority Development Site designation from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts will help catalyze economic development in the Wollaston Business District, and help streamline the local permitting process," Harrington said.

"Quincy's neighborhoods are of great importance to the overall fabric and economic vitality of the City and I think everyone looks forward to seeing the internship team's ideas for Wollaston."

Sasaki's Internship Team will be presenting their vision plan and final recommendations to city officials within the next few weeks.

"This Plan for the Wollaston Business District will not sit idle on the shelf; we intend to make this plan a living, breathing document that will help the Wollaston Business District revitalize for the future," said Harrington.

State Legislators Join Coughlin In Bid For Soldiers' Tax Relief

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin recently testified before state legislators, seeking approval of a Home Rule Petition which would allow tax abatements for Quincy's citizen soldiers' serving in Iraq or Afghanistan.

The Home Rule Petition drafted by Coughlin was approved by the City Council in 2008. However, the tax code change must be approved by both state legislative bodies and signed by Governor Deval Patrick before it will be in effect.

Both Coughlin and Rep. Bruce Ayers testified before the Joint Committee on Revenue in favor of the petition which was submitted to the senate by Sen. Michael Morrissey.

"On Sept. 11, 2001, the roles and missions of both the guard and reserves fundamentally changed forever," Coughlin said, adding that the war on terrorism "altered the landscape for citizen soldiers who may have never envisioned long term, frequent deployments with unpredictability of missions and increased duration...."

KEVIN COUGHLIN

Coughlin described the health problems, stress on families, accumulated debt "and the loss of financial assets" as just a few of the many consequences for citizen soldiers.

"Sixty percent of the part-time soldiers called up either worked for themselves, owned a small or medium-sized business or were employed by such a company.

"Some have lost their jobs at small businesses and some small business owners have closed their doors amidst the current economic implosion."

Coughlin concluded his testimony by stating "that these citizen soldiers and their families should not shoulder this burden alone...."

"This legislation can, in some small way, translate verbal recognition into viscerally tangible action."

If approved, the program would allow up to a 100% real property tax abatement for qualified members of the National Guard and Reserves who have been deployed on active duty during fiscal years 2002 to 2010.

Coughlin said he has heard from several spouses of deployed residents since City Council approved the ordinance.

He described their stories of stress as "compelling testimony" that the need exists to provide for those "whose courage and sacrifice" serve democracy.

'Prescription Drug Disposal Day' Saturday At Police Headquarters

The Mayor's Drug Task Force and the Quincy Police Department will host an anonymous 'Prescription Drug Disposal Day' Saturday, June 27th from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the parking lot of the Quincy Police Headquarters on Sea Street.

End Drug Abuse Now (EDAN), a Quincy based substance abuse prevention group and member of the Mayor's Task Force, initiated the effort and will be present to help collect any prescription drugs.

Anyone who has old prescription drugs and would like to anonymously dispose of them in a safe environment is welcome to attend the disposal event June 27.

John Q. Adams Birthday Celebration July 11

The 232nd anniversary of the birthday of John Quincy Adams will be celebrated Saturday, July 11 at noon at the Adams National Historical Park, 135 Adams St., Quincy.

The celebration will feature character actor Jim Cooke who will greet visitors. A slice of birthday cake will be served to all who attend the festivities.

Admission is free.

Robertson Street Tragedy

Firefighters, Police, Emergency Workers Honored By City Council

By LAURA GRIFFIN

In a somber ceremony, City Council recently commended more than three dozen firefighters, police and emergency workers for their courage and swift response to the devastating March 25 fire on Robertson Street, West Quincy.

Speakers recalled both the tragedy and the miracle of that 3 a.m. two-alarm call to Robertson Street where a father and two infants perished, but a mother was found, barely alive, and rescued by alert firefighters.

Thanks to the 29 firefighters, the deadly fire and smoke was contained and extinguished before it could spread and claim more victims and neighborhood structures, councillors recalled.

City Council President Jay Davis read the commendations recognizing the 29 firefighters who battled the smoke and contained the fire despite hazardous conditions endangering their own safety.

Davis then presented commendations for the police and medical response team from Fallon's Ambulance Co.

The firefighters' commendation states:

"When duty called, your vision was clear and with quick decisive action, you professionally handled a very dangerous situation doing everything humanly possible at your own peril."

Acting Fire Chief Joseph Barron said firefighters risked explosive conditions when they entered the building, particularly the basement of the three story wood-framed residence where one victim clung to life.

After entering the darkened basement, three of those firefighters, Daniel Sullivan, Kenneth Lippens and Thomas Bowes, located the victims and heard Terri Knight's weak breathing. Knight was the wife and mother of the victims.

Anthony Lallis of Liberty Mutual Insurance Company said this week that his company will present a special plaque, "The Heroic Firemark Award," to Sullivan, Lippens and Bowes on Friday at North Quincy Fire Station. Lallis said this will be the first such award in the southern district in three years.

Once Knight was rescued, the Fallon's Ambulance 12-member medical team began treatment and transport for the critically injured woman who was subsequently rushed to Massachusetts General Hospital.

Knight who was comatose for several weeks was later transferred to Spaulding Rehabilitation Center. After her release, she returned to Quincy to thank the firefighters for their efforts, then returned to her

Hundreds Honor Young Veteran Killed In Quarry Accident

More than 900 mourners filled St. Agatha Church, Milton, and an overflow of hundreds prayed outside in the mist at Tuesday's funeral Mass for Iraqi veteran and former Marine Lance Cpl. Patrick J. Coughlin, 21.

Coughlin died Friday after slipping on the rocks at Fuller's Quarry during an early morning outing with three friends.

Quincy police, firefighters, State Police and Coast Guard conducted the five-hour search for his body in the quarry waters after the 911 call from his companions.

Before his death, Coughlin had completed a two-year tour of active duty in Iraq and was a sophomore at UMass, Boston.

After reviewing the initial report of the tragedy, District Attorney William Keating called the death an accident and said there was no evidence of excessive drinking. Keating said the Medical Examiner will file a report in the next few weeks.

Coughlin's parents are Joseph M. and Patricia C. (Coppens) Coughlin of Milton. Two brothers and two sisters, Paul (BPD), Kevin, Kellie and Nathalie also survive him.

He was the nephew of Quincy police detective Leo Coppens and of Braintree Deputy Fire Chief Bill Coppens.

Colonial Federal has mortgage money to lend...

In today's market, we are able to especially help...

- First-time homebuyers who want a loan they can live with
- Current homeowners who want to refinance at today's low rates
- Current homeowners who have a lender they're not happy with

At Colonial Federal, we never got involved with sub-prime lending, so we have plenty of mortgage money to lend to responsible homebuyers. Our loan officers are not on commission; their only goal is to help you get the loan that's best for you. We treat people right. And if you have questions after your loan closes, you can call us directly — we actually answer our phones — or you can come in and talk. Sound good? Son Beams

A First-Timer Visits The Old House

Well, I finally did it.

And I am so glad I did.

And I'm a little ashamed to even admit I hadn't done it before.

For the first-time, I recently visited and toured the Adams Mansion at 135 Adams St. in Quincy – also known as the Old House at Peace field – which is part of the Adams National Historical Park.

Yes, for me it's hard to believe it was my first time in this historic site which is really a memorial to four generations of the distinguished Adams family, who lived in it from 1788 until 1927.

I can't even explain why I had never visited the Old House before. I'm a history buff. I've been to other impressive historical homes, notably The White House and Mount Vernon. I've also darkened the doorstep at The Thayer House in Braintree and the Birthplaces of John Adams and John Quincy Adams located on Franklin Street in Quincy.

Heck, I even portrayed Patrick Henry – like John Adams a Founding Father – in my fifth grade play during the Bicentennial way back in 1976. I thought I was Hollywood-bound after my stirring re-enactment of Henry's "Give Me Liberty or Give Me Death" speech at my old elementary school.

But in all seriousness I have to admit that I've taken the rich story of the Adams family and their overwhelming contributions to our nation's history – an integral part of our independence – for granted.

And I'm sure there are others who live or work in this city who have done the same.

I have driven past the Old House thousands of times. And hundreds of times I've said to myself: "I really should tour the house. So much history there."

You really can't comprehend the scope of that history until you walk through the front doors. And allow one of the Adams National Historical Park staffers to interpret that story and bring this unique landmark to life.

My thanks to Marianne Peak, the always gracious and hospitable superintendent of the ANHP, for explaining so many features of this house which dates back to 1731 when it was built as a summer residence by Leonard Vassall. Maj. Leonard Vassall was a wealthy West Indian sugar planter who had come to Massachusetts. He built the oldest part of the building which was a 2 1/2-story frame structure of Georgian design with clapboarded walls and gambrel roof.

One word of advice for those considering a tour: you may not be able to digest all the historical facts in one visit. There are two floors and the original home features a Paneled Room, Older Hall and Dining Room on the first floor as well as a President's Room, Older Hall and Guest Chamber on the second floor.

That's just for starters.

In later years, a Kitchen Wing, East Wing, Hallway and Servants Wing were added. One of the more interesting rooms for me was the Study that is part of the East Wing that John and Abigail Adams added around 1800. That's where Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams worked while they were home from Washington, D.C. as the Old House served as "The Summer White House."

In one of the corners of the study is John Adams's wing chair where just a few days before his death on July 4th, 1826, he gave one last message to the American people: "I give you Independence forever."

Earlier on that day, Thomas Jefferson had died on that same day which happened to be the 50th anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence. The study is also where Adams wrote letters to Jefferson. Over a 10-year period their correspondence produced 329 letters. (Can you imagine what thoughts they could have shared with text messaging and cell phones?)

The other striking aspect of this tour for me was the realization that this structure actually served as a home to four generations of Adamses over the course of nearly 140 years. It's not like someone simply built the home a few decades ago and put period museum pieces in it. People lived in the home, gave birth in the home and died in the home.

You're probably familiar with the fact that two U.S. Presidents and their wives lived in the house: John Adams (No. 2) and his wife Abigail; and their son John Quincy Adams

THE OLD HOUSE at 135 Adams St., Quincy, part of the Adams National Historical Park.

(No. 6) and his wife, Louisa Catherine (who was born in London and is the only First Lady born outside the U.S.).

Other famous occupants include Charles Francis Adams (1907-1886), son of John Quincy. He became a U.S. Congressman, diplomat and author.

And John Quincy II (1833-1894) Charles Francis, Jr. (1835-1915), Henry (1838-1918), and Brooks (1848-1927) all made notable marks in politics, literature and historiography.

The tour includes a visit inside the Stone Library, which measures 38-foot long by 25-foot deep and contains 12,000 books, manuscripts, maps and pamphlets that were collected and read by the Adams men, women and children. The library was built of Quincy granite and brick masonry in 1870 by Charles Francis Adams at the request of his father, John Quincy Adams.

Visitors can also survey the grounds of Peace field which has evolved from a working farm to a country estate to a national park from the early 19th century to today.

And don't be surprised if you find yourself planning another visit after your first.

THIS SUMMER is a perfect time to visit the Adams National Historical Park. Not only will there be exciting events, the Park Service has announced it will offer fee-free weekends this summer to encourage Americans affordable vacations to visit national treasures throughout this nation, including the ANHP.

Supt. Marianne Peak invites everyone to visit the Park this summer and take advantage of the fee-free admission weekends on July 18-19 and Aug. 15-16.

"We have several planned events that we believe will be worthwhile experiences for all, from a Shakespearean play to an outdoor concert and, of course, tours of the Adams homes telling their story from the cradle to the grave."

One special event falls on Independence Day – Saturday, July 4. The program, called Independence Forever, will feature an interactive re-enactment of the Continental Congress debate of the Declaration of Independence. The re-enactments will be held at noon and again at 3 p.m.

Later that evening, at 7 p.m., there will be a production of the acclaimed play "Jefferson and Adams: A Revolutionary Dialogue." The event will be held on the Beale House lawn. Bring your own chair and blanket.

For children, the Junior Ranger program provides an activity book enhancing their park experience with an official Junior Ranger Badge.

For other events, check the calendar listing in The Quincy Sun's Historic Quincy supplement in this week's issue.

The calendar also lists activities at the Thomas Crane Public Library, Quincy Park Department, and other things to do this summer and fall.

While the Adams NHP has had a storied past, Peak believes its future has never looked brighter.

"In 1780, Abigail Adams advised her son, John Quincy Adams, 'These are times in which a genius would wish to live...'"

"Now in the 21st century," Peak says, "in the spirit of Abigail Adams, these are the times for the National Park Service, its many partners, and the community of Quincy to continue to work together promoting Quincy, a Presidential Community."

"The park and its partners believe that 2009 is not only a time for reflection, but also a great time to plan to consider our future with a vision promoting education, culture, science and the arts."

"Together," Peak adds, "We make great things happen."

12. MASONIC TEMPLE, WOLLASTON, MASS.

THIS IS A 1924 postcard view of the old Masonic Temple building at 25 Beale Street in Wollaston Center. It was built on the old William Faxon estate that during the 19th century included most of the land that now comprises Wollaston Center west of Hancock Street. This building served the community in many ways. It was the home of the Wollaston Women's Club, it housed the first Wollaston Theater and Saint Ann's Parish celebrated their first Masses here. It also was home to the Wollaston American Legion Post 295. Demolished several years ago, the site is now occupied by a branch office of Sovereign Bank. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Phelan Says Koch 'Failed' In Firefighter Negotiations

Among the distortions in his opinion piece in last week's edition of The Quincy Sun, the President of the Quincy Firefighters Union falsely stated that I had attacked Quincy's firefighters with "venomous accusations and characterizations..."

The truth — as is evident to anyone who actually read my comments in the same edition of The Sun — is that my criticism was aimed solely at Mayor Koch's mismanagement of the city's negotiations with firefighters which will cost taxpayers millions.

I did not say a word about firefighters.

I have the greatest respect and admiration for their bravery, and I wish that they could all be paid much more. And I also understand that they and their union representatives have a responsibility to negotiate to get as much as they can for themselves, and their families.

But the Mayor of Quincy has a different responsibility: to be fair, while looking out for the interests of struggling taxpayers.

The firefighters and their union representatives did their job.

It was Mayor Koch who failed to do his.

William J. Phelan
Candidate for Mayor

Calls Firefighters Union Defense Of Koch On Contract 'Sad And Disappointing'

I find it sad and disturbing that the Firefighters Union is allowed to defend Mayor Koch in the opinion column regarding former Mayor Phelan's letter to the City Council concerning their contract. Firefighter Ernest Arienti is allowed to offer his opinion on the impact of a contract, which he helped negotiate with Mayor Koch with information that is inaccurate and not factual.

The fact of the matter is that Mr. Phelan has declared his intention to challenge Mayor Koch. He submitted a letter to the City Council with factual information on the impact of the firefighters' contract. Apparently, Mr. Arienti disagrees with Mr. Phelan but as firefighter states, let's look at the facts.

The former mayor tried to negotiate with all unions concerning the City's wish to join the GIC and he was successful with some of those unions. Mr. Arienti claims that Mayor Koch was successful because of his approach in the negotiation process. What he should have said was show us (certain unions) the money and we'll join. Every union employee will receive 300 dollars in base salary as of July 1, 2009 when the City joins the GIC. It will cost the City well over 1 million dollars in additional salary plus additional Medicare and retirement costs for the City to join. It will cost the schools over $542 thousand dollars, which is a substantial portion of their budget deficit for this year because even though Mayor Koch negotiated it, he expects the schools to find it in their budget.

As far as I know, Mr. Phelan's numbers are accurate concerning the fire contract increases. The base increase was 3% but additional salary items move this increase to close to 15% in the first year of the contract. If Mr. Arienti actually disputes this then let's get the last two contracts with the firefighters who it covers and review the information at the Sun's office.

Mr. Arienti makes claims that the Honeywell contract ties up city finances for 20 years on fraudulent repairs. None of this has been proven. In fact Mr. Arienti fails to mention the over $800 thousand in rebates that Honeywell owed to the city last year as well as any energy cost savings that the City benefited from. In fact in fiscal year 2008 there was a balance of $3,959,337 in free cash and $12,834,395 in stabilization funds, which was available to the City. This is a total of over $16 million in reserves that Phelan left for the new administration. There was also over $14 million in excess levy capacity (money that could have been levied as a real estate tax but was not). Mayor Koch managed to spend all of the excess levy capacity in one year because of the financial crisis. What crisis? Look at the numbers.

Firefighter Arienti states that, "the Quincy Firefighters Union was the first to agree to a wage freeze saving the Quincy taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars." What he doesn't say is the first year of the new contract raised most firefighter salaries by almost 15% with all salary increases. Also, the wage freeze does not include step increase for all the unions. So in fact, some employees will see their pay increase. I think Firefighter Arienti should stick to what he knows best and let Mayor Koch defend the actions he took himself.

Uncontested GOP Primary Slate

By FRANK McCAULEY

Massachusetts Republicans picked a slate that is expected to run uncontested in the Sept. 13 primary. The stakes are high because a U.S. Senate seat that has been Leverett Saltonstall's since 1945 will have a new occupant in 1967 and because the state's Constitutional Officers will be elected in November for four-year terms for the first time in the state's history.

This Week
1966
43 Years Ago

The Republican nominees included Governor John Volpe for re-election as governor; for Lt. Governor, Francis W. Sargent; Attorney General Edward W. Brooke for U.S. Senate, and Lt. Governor Elliot L. Richardson for Attorney General. The ticket was rounded out to include Raymond Trudel, Secretary of State, Joseph Fernandes for State Treasurer and John Buckley for State Auditor.

QUINCY HOSPITAL'S NURSING SCHOOL RE-ACCREDITED

The Quincy City Hospital Nursing School was accredited for another six-year period according to Hospital Director Harlan L. Paine, Jr. He said hospital officials have been notified of the accreditation, which has been continued by the National League for Nursing through 1972. The six-year accreditation is the maximum attainable. The League inspected the school's facilities in March. A class of 46 students was scheduled to graduate on July 28 and 56 students were scheduled to enter the school Sept. 14.

COUNCIL, SCHOOL BOARD CLASH OVER DRAIN PROJECT PAYMENT

A drain which crosses Faxon Field near the new Vocational-Technical School is the latest cause for friction between the city council and the school committee. Some $72,000 was spent on the drain project and charged to the School Construction Account when it should have been charged to the city account. The school committee wanted the money back. The council balked at paying back the money.

'Curious Case Of Benjamin Button' Movie At Crane Library Tonight

The 2008 movie "The Curious Case of Benjamin Button" will be shown tonight (Thursday) at 6:30 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The movie, directed by David Fincher, stars Brad Pitt and Cate Blanchett.

"I was born under unusual circumstances." And so begins The Curious Case of Benjamin Button, adapted from the 1920s story by F. Scott Fitzgerald about a man who was born in his 80s and ages backwards: a man, like any of us, who is unable to stop time.

The movie follows his story, set in New Orleans from the end of World War I in 1918, into the 21st century, following his journey that is as unusual as any man's life can be.

Benjamin Button is a grand tale of a not-so-ordinary man and the people and places he discovers along the way, the loves he finds, the joys of life and the sadness of death, and what lasts beyond time.

The film is rated PG-13 for brief war violence, sexual content, language and smoking. Its running time is 2 hours, 39 minutes.

Tonight's showing is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

For more information, call 617-376-1301.

USS Salem Opens For Summer Season

The USS Salem and U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum, in Quincy, begins its summer schedule this week.

The museum is open to the public seven days a week from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The USS Salem is a 716-foot long U.S. Navy Heavy Cruiser Gunship and is the only remaining ship of its type in the world. The ship was built at the former Fore River Shipyard where she is now permanently moored and on display.

"The ship is a terrific family day trip," said Michael Condon, executive director of the floating museum. "We have worked very hard to make the ship a fun opportunity for adults and children alike."

The museum offers a large number of hands-on displays and the ship is set up as though it is currently at port awaiting orders to return to sea. The ship's public address system is even programmed to make announcements during the day to complete the illusion of an active duty naval vessel.

"What makes this such a nice family day trip is the hands-on nature of the museum and the sheer scale of the ship," Condon said.

"This ship is enormous and you can touch all the displays; kids love it," said Frank Campbell, the ship's volunteer coordinator.

Located next to the ship is Kilroy's Mini Golf, a miniature golf course the museum installed two years ago.

The museum has also added a number of interactive opportunities this past winter including a ship's scavenger hunt and a "Where is Kilroy?" contest.

Tours of the ship and its museums can be escorted or self-guided and admission is just $5 per person. Families of four or more are $20 and a combo pass which adds a round of mini golf is $3 more per person, or $10 more per family.

The ship is located at 739 Washington St., Quincy, just off the Fore River Bridge rotary, off of Route 3A.

For more information, call 617-479-7900 or visit www.USS-Salem.org.

Photography Of Former Sun Photographer Charles Flagg Featured At New Exhibit

The Braintree Council on Aging Photography Group announces its summer exhibit will feature the works of former Quincy Sun photographer Charles Flagg.

The exhibit at the Thayer Library, 798 Washington St., Braintree, runs through the end of August.

Part of the exhibit features photos of Mr. Flagg who died in March.

Besides working for The Quincy Sun, Mr. Flagg was a long-time member of the BCOA Photography Group. He was a World War II U.S. Navy veteran and an Associated Press photographer for many years.

Many of his photos were also published in the Quincy Patriot Ledger.

Mr. Flagg retired in 1983

then taught photography for many years at Quincy College. He also continued to do some free-lance photography for several years after his retirement.

The exhibit will consist of 25 framed photographs taken by nine members of the Photography Group. The photographs include landscapes, seascapes, flower and animal photos taken locally and throughout the world.

Another featured photographer is Paul Corkum who also works full-time in a local camera store. He is a long-time member of the South Shore Camera Club in Quincy and has many published photos in magazines, newspapers and books and as postcards and posters.

The BCOA Photography Club meets on the second and fourth Thursdays of each month throughout the year from 10 to 11 a.m. in the BCOA building, 71 Cleveland Ave., Braintree.

For more information, call 781-848-1963 or instructor Paul Corkum at 781-982-4323.

MIKE BURKE of the Quincy Park Department and Peter Horsford of the Wollaston Garden Club work at digging in one of the evergreen shrubs donated to the city by the garden club.

Wollaston Garden Club, Park Department Work Together To Plant Intersection Planters

The Wollaston Garden Club and the Quincy Park Department recently joined forces to plant seven planters at the intersection of Quincy Avenue and South-ern Artery.

Participating in the beau- tification effort were:

Mike Burke from the Park Department and garden club members Pat Artis, Jan Clifford, Jo Costello, Peter Horsford and Ruth Griffin.

The group worked in the rain and mist to plant seven planters which are anchored currently with evergreens, huchera and purple, yellow and white annuals.

All plant material was donated by the Wollaston Garden Club.

Wollaston Garden Club President Pat Artis and its civic beautification chairperson, Jo Costello, identified this site initially because of its significance as an im- portant gateway to the city. Both Mayor Tom Koch and Park Department Director Kristen Powers gave their enthusiastic support.

In a proposal that the garden club presented in April to city officials, the long-range plan would be for the garden club to purchase, design and plant a different set of intersection planters each year, and for the Park Department to water and maintain it.

Quincy's Maple Roasted Chicken With Sweet Spuds

Quincy's famous Delmonico has always received The Quincy Star and every once in a while sends me a recipe or two.

This week's recipe is for a different way to roast chicken made with maple syrup, which I hope you will enjoy as much as I did. The amounts of ingredients can be measured according to how much chicken you want to prepare. Both she and I used chicken legs and thighs, and the best part, it's baked all in one pan.

Maple Roasted Chicken With Sweet Potatoes

2 medium sweet potatoes (peeled and cut into small pieces)

1 small onion, cut in small pieces
6 sprigs of fresh thyme
2 tablespoon olive oil
1 1/2 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 teaspoon pepper
8 pieces of chicken
3 tablespoons maple syrup
Preheat oven to 400 degrees.

In a baking pan, toss the potatoes, onion, thyme, oil, salt and pepper. Pat the chicken dry, and season with additional salt and pepper. Nestle the chicken among the vegetables and drizzle with the maple syrup.

Bake uncovered and stir the vegetables once until the chicken is cooked through. Takes about 55 to 65 minutes.

Fiona Coughlin, Sarah LaPointe Earn Recognition In French Contest Exam

Two Quincy students at Archbishop Williams High School recently earned recognition in the National French Contest Exam, administered by the American Association of Teachers of French.

Fiona Coughlin of Quincy, received a Certificate of Achievement, placing 21st nationally.

Sarah LaPointe, also of Quincy, received a Certificate of Achievement, placing 24th nationally.

"We could not be prouder of these outstanding students for performing so well on this challenging and prestigious exam," said Carmen Mariano, president of Archbishop Williams High School.

Fiona Coughlin of Quincy, received a Certificate of Achievement, placing 21st nationally.

Foot Screening For Seniors

Podiatrist Dr. Jordana Szpizio will be available to seniors for foot screening on the first Monday of every month at the Council on Aging office, 83 Saratoga St.

The doctor will also treat your feet for a fee of $25 per person payable at the time of the visit.

For more information or to make an appointment, call the COA at 617-376-1506.

Quincy's famous Delmonico has always received The Quincy Star and every once in a while sends me a recipe or two.

The actual private construction could begin in 2012, but public works projects and design plans will be scheduled earlier, according to Koch. The entire project is likely to take 10 to 12 years, bringing the completion to 2020-2022.

Before the project gets underway, StreetWorks must be named developer, financing approved, and the city must enter into what is called an LDA, (land disposition agreement) and gain 'site plan approval.'

In addition, the project must gain approval from

Quincy's famous Delmonico has always received The Quincy Star and every once in a while sends me a recipe or two.

"We started many years ago," Morrissey said of renewal plans, adding, "It has plodded along and now it's taking giant steps forward."

Morrissey cautioned that the project will take a number of years, but he and Ayers pledged their support at the state level where the project will undergo the scrutiny of environmental and financial agencies.

Ayers noted he'd had 'a lot of phone calls and a lot of positive feedback' regarding StreetWorks' plan and praised Koch, "The outreach has been great."

Insurance STRATEGIES

by Jim Sullivan

WHIPPED OUT OF SHAPE

The Insurance Institute for Highway Safety reports that approximately two million whiplash claims are filed annually. An estimated 200,000 of these whiplash injuries are serious enough to cause long-term medical problems. Whiplash injuries, in particular, result from the rapid snapping back of a person's head during a collision. These neck-snapping injuries, which can occur at crash speeds as low as ten miles per hour, hyperextend the neck and damage nerves and ligaments. The best way to prevent a whiplash injury is to position the head restraint in your vehicle so that the top of your ear horizontally aligns with a point in the middle of the head restraint, no more than three inches away from the back of your head. Getting into a car accident can be very traumatic on both a physical and emotional level. Whiplash can cause physical symptoms that last for many years after an accident. At JAMES J. SULLIVAN INSURANCE AGENCY, we have the policies and expertise to protect you and your loved ones. We offer insurance for cars, trucks, SUVs, and motorcycles. We can also review the benefits of disability coverage to you and your family. Please call us 617-328-8600 if we can assist you. Our office is located at 151 Hancock Street. Happy Fourth of July!

Note: Neck injuries are the most commonly reported type of crash-related injury.

ALL THAT GLITTERS

Since prehistoric times, men and women have adorned their bodies with jewelry to make personal fashion statements as well as to show their appreciation for the most beautiful of natural creations. Aside from its aesthetic and monetary value, jewelry also symbolizes the love, affection and reverence we have for one another. With all the material and spiritual attachment we may feel for our precious metals and gemstones, it is no wonder they occupy a good deal of our attention and curiosity. To meet this interest, this is the first in a series of columns intended to provide readers with information on jewelry and gemstones. The hope is that these ideas will help guide the wise purchase and appreciation of jewelry.

Few things in life have such power to stir the senses and ignite the imagination the way jewelry does. Welcome to our new column in which we will delve into the fun, luxury, and beauty of gemstones and fine jewelry. We have many things to offer you, including the honesty, trust, and integrity that have been our trademark since 1944. By having the knowledge and expertise to go to the source to buy, no matter where in the world that might be, we bring our customers high quality at reasonable prices. Hancock Park Rehabilitation And Nursing Center 'Goes Green'

Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group is breaking new ground in its skilled rehabilitation and nursing centers.

"The organization is going green!" David Fasano, corporate food services director and purchasing agent, said. "We began to investigate the benefits of initiating a green program about a year ago. We were surprised to learn that we are among the first in our industry to pursue this avenue."

"We have received tremendous positive feedback about our efforts," said Rich Scully, housekeeping and laundry supervisor for Hancock Park Rehabilitation & Nursing Center and Allerton House at Hancock Park.

"When we started using a green floor product to replace the chemical stripper, residents and staff commented on the fact they were no longer detecting a harsh chemical odor and we are very pleased to hear that."

Alan Brown, CEO, Simplex Janitorial Supplies in Sharon, said, "Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group's initiative to enhance the health and well-being of its residents and employees, as well as to preserve the environment, is setting the bar for other skilled nursing and assisted living organizations. They have created a balanced program that is making the environment safer for everybody."

RICH SCULLY, housekeeping and laundry supervisor for Hancock Park Rehabilitation & Nursing Center in Quincy, demonstrates the use of the new dispensing system for the nursing center's green products.

Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group and Simplex Janitorial Supplies are working together to get the program off the ground. Members of Welch Healthcare's housekeeping staffs have participated in several educational sessions hosted by Simplex to learn about the use and benefits of green cleaning products.

"Green cleaning is one of several levels of going green. The Welch Group has already made great strides in their transition to green cleaning products," Brown said.

Research indicates that green cleaning products create cleaner and more sanitary environments. They improve air quality and control the spread of infections, two benefits of particular value in a skilled nursing center where seniors may be more prone to respiratory problems. Studies also show that green cleaning increases employee productivity, and decreases absenteeism by about 20 percent.

Examples of changes the Welch Group has made to date include: installing hands-free soap and hand-sanitizer, and paper towel dispensers; switching from floor wax that contained zinc to a zinc-free wax with no environmental impact; using super-concentrated liquid products to minimize plastic container disposal; adopting odor-free, Green-Seal approved products to decrease the risk of respiratory issues caused by harsh chemicals; and using washable microfiber mopping products. Brown says, "In addition to eliminating a lot of waste, microfiber products do a much better job controlling dust, which is another trigger for people with respiratory issues."

Another aspect of the Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group green initiative entails evaluating every aspect of the facilities to identify ways to spare natural resources.

"We learn something new every day," Fasano said. "Now we are at the stage of switching to energy-efficient lighting and being more conscientious about the use of natural resources such as water. Every step that we take ultimately will improve the environment for our residents, our staff and the community as a whole. That's what it's all about."

Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group, Inc. of Norwell is a retirement housing and healthcare provider, celebrating 60 years of service to seniors in southeastern Massachusetts. The company delivers a fully integrated continuum of services, from senior residential to post-acute care, that is resident- and patient-centered to ensure independence, choice, dignity and continuity of care.

Quincy Farmers' Market Opens For Season

Quincy Farmers' Market recently opened at the John Hancock Municipal Parking Lot in Quincy Center.

Mayor Tom Koch cut the ribbon officially opening the market's summer season. He was assisted by the Discover Quincy Tourism Office and Quincy 2000 Economic Development Office along with fifth graders from the Point Webster Middle School and students from Quincy High School Culinary Arts.

This season, the Farmers'

Market will feature lobsters, strawberries, sugar-snap and English peas, lettuce, herbs, honey, free ranged eggs, home-made all natural soaps, hanging plants and perennials in full bloom, tomato plants in large containers ready to bear fruit.

In addition, Stillman and SOS farms will join Freitas farm along with the bakeries. Each week, additional produce will arrive as the growing season advances.

There is one-hour free parking during market hours on Fridays.

Fontbonne Academy Congratulates Fiona Leung '09

Winner of the 2009 Community Service Award by amassing nearly 1,000 hours of community service, Fiona Leung of Abington is headed to The University of Rhode Island in the fall to study animal science, in a Pre-Veterinary program, and to minor in marine biology. Highlights of her Fontbonne career include being on the volleyball, swim and tennis teams, and a member of the Equestrian Club and Instrumental Ensemble.

"I believe Fontbonne's rigorous academics have prepared me well for college. The supportive and friendly atmosphere helped me to develop into a more confident person. I have learned to branch out and do things that would challenge me. That is one of the reasons why I began to volunteer at The New England Aquarium. I knew it would not be easy, especially since my job there included giving presentations to large groups of people. Going to Fontbonne has not only taught me to think positively about myself and in everything I do, but also has helped me develop leadership skills that I will need in the future."

60 Years of Quality Service

Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group is a family-owned company celebrating 60 years of quality service to older adults.

Koch Says School Budget Prevents Drastic Cuts

A level-funded $81 million school budget plus an influx of $4.3 million in federal stimulus money will prevent drastic education cuts in the upcoming fiscal year, but City schools did not escape the economic crisis entirely unscathed, Mayor Tom Koch said in a statement Tuesday.

The School Committee unanimously approved a series of about $2 million in both cuts and fee increases to cover a money gap between the department's expected $88.8 million actual budget and the greater increase in spending it would need to maintain a full status quo.

Cuts include 16 teaching positions, 20 support staff positions, and an extension of the distance required for free school bus transportation from three-quarters of a mile away from a school to a full mile.

Koch, who also serves as chairman of the School Committee, praised his colleagues for working together and developing creative solutions that forestalled the devastating loss of teachers and programs suffered by many other communities amid the ongoing economic crisis.

"These were honest, tough decisions, and every single school committee member deserves credit for doing everything possible to protect the core classroom services that make our schools among the best in the state," Koch said. "No one sat on the sidelines and complained. Everybody rolled up their sleeves, worked together, and the end result was a plan that made the best out of a challenging situation."

Koch said the decisions were not made in a vacuum, saying the committee listened to the concerns raised by parents, students, and employees during budget talks. For example, a proposal to eliminate foreign language classes in the middle school entirely was instead reduced by six teachers after committee members listened to students and parents.

The series of fees approved by the school committee included a 25-cent increase for school lunches, and increase in high school athletic fees, a new $15 fee for middle school athletics, increases in school rental fees, and a $20 fee for extracurricular activities, officials said.

Koch said the increases in the school budget are triggered by negotiated raises, other fixed increases, and a required increase in special education funding. While city teachers have not accepted a wage freeze this year like most other unions, the mayor still credited them with helping lead the drive to join the state's health insurance program, the GIC.

The new insurance program, which takes effect July 1, will save about $10 million for the city, which the mayor said "without question prevented further cuts in the schools and other departments."

The School Committee's budget talks were led by Budget Subcommittee Chairman Ronald Mariano, a state representative who said he hoped the state's economic picture would improve in coming years, but added that difficult times are still looming for schools and all other city services.

Six Residents Awarded $1,000 Jamie Cochrane Memorial Scholarships

The Officer Jamie Cochrane Memorial Road Race announces it has awarded $1,000 scholarships to six Quincy residents.

The scholarships were awarded in memory of Officer Jamie Cochrane who died Sept. 10, 2006.

Officer Cochrane was an extremely proud and active member of the Quincy community both in his professional and personal life. In that spirit, the scholarships were awarded based on community service and academic record.

The scholarship recipients are:

From North Quincy High School: Lily Man attending Bentley College majoring in marketing; Stephen Markarian attending Boston Conservatory of Music.

From Quincy High School: Renee Murphy attending Framingham State College, major elementary education; Michelle Rizza attending Hofstra University major in theater education;

Sean Gray University of New Hampshire for Health & Human Services

From Archbishop Williams High School: Jacqueline Bradley, University of Massachusetts at Lowell for health.

The Second Annual Officer Jamie Cochrane Memorial Road Race will be held Sunday, Sept. 13 at 10 a.m.

Information and online registration can be found at www.cochranerodrace.com.

A Job Well Done

On Tuesday, June 16, at approximately 7 p.m., Officer Matt Patten and other officers responded to the area of 1056 Sea St. on the report of two vans, one red and the other black, intentionally ramming each other.

The witness/caller said that both vans pulled over in the 1100 block of Sea Street.

Officer Dave Zupkofska, Sergeant Greg Goyette and Officer Patten located the vehicles and noted that the black van, occupied by a male, had heavy front-end damage. A male was sitting in the red van, and there was heavy damage to its rear.

Officer Zupkofska interviewed the driver of the black van while Officer Patten spoke with the driver of the red van. The officers then determined that a deal to sell a boat trailer went bad between the two men and as they were driving towards each other on Rockland Street in Hough's Neck, the driver of the black van yelled something at him. The red van driver looked in his rear view mirror and saw that the black van made U-turn and was now behind him traveling at a high rate of speed.

The red van driver said he pulled over on Sea Street, hoping that the other driver would drive past him. The black van then drove up behind the red van and rammed it, forcing the red van forward several feet. The black van backed up and rammed the van again. The red van driver then drove off a short distance to where he lived, chased by the black van driver.

The victim then parked and as he exited his van, the suspect ran towards him, pulled the door open and punched the victim several times in the face. Based on information from both drivers as well as the caller/witness, the driver of the black van, a 53 year old Quincy resident, was charged with, "Assault and Battery with a Dangerous Weapon" (motor vehicle)

Nice Work!

BWARE: On Thursday, June 11, at approximately 9:50 a.m., Officer Paul Foley interviewed a 92-year-old female victim, who stated that she finished shopping at Roche Brothers Supermarket and wanted the Police to know about a strange incident.

She said that she returned to her car, got in and was approached by two females knocking at her car window. She added that, "Before I knew it, one of the females got in the front passenger seat and the other in the rear seat."

The rear seat suspect told the victim that they had just found a purse containing $300,000 and spoke with an attorney who told them that the cash was from horse racing profits. The suspect asked the victim if she wanted $100,000 worth of the cash.

The victim was very frightened and intimidated by the suspect's behavior, so she asked them to leave her alone. One of the suspects asked the victim for her phone number and she complied. At this point, the suspects exited the vehicle and disappeared.

The victim checked her purse and confirmed that nothing was missing. The victim described one of the suspects as a 55 to 60 year old white female, weighing about 160 pounds.

IN THIS CASE: the victim is 92 years old, but no matter what age, there are safeguards that should be taken to prevent such an incident from occurring.

Firstly, being aware of your surroundings often reduces the chances of becoming a victim. As you near your car, look around for suspicious people in your general area, have your keys ready, with the alarm button accessible, and once inside your car, be sure to lock the doors. Another option would be to sound the horn continuously to draw the attention of other citizens.

Davis Asks City To Take Action On Unfinished Willard St. Building

Ward Four Councillor Jay Davis has asked Mayor Tom Koch and the city to take an aggressive position to compel the owner of 453 Willard St. to either complete construction of the building or sell the building to a motivated buyer who will complete the project.

"For more than a year the building has been an eyesore for neighbors," Davis said. "There is no movement on the construction of the building and it is time for the city be aggressive in it's handling of this project. The owner must be forced to finish the building or sell the building to someone who will finish it."

The building was originally permitted in 2007 for the construction of 20 Condominiums.

Prior to being permitted by the Zoning Board of Appeals, the developer met with neighbors and Davis. The neighbors supported the project because the developer, Beaver Creek Development, was going to demolish two unsightly buildings and construct new condominiums.

However, Davis said, after the unsightly properties were demolished, the site work was completed, and the frame of the building was built, construction on the project stopped in the spring of 2008.

In a letter to Koch, Davis requested a meeting with the city's Solicitor, Director of Inspectional Services and treasurer to establish a plan and timetable to force the developer to complete the building or force a sale of the land by way of a tax taking.

Real estate taxes on the building have not been for more than a year and the City is owed approximately $10,000 in back taxes, Davis said.

"I have been monitoring the progress of the construction and I keep being told different stories about the construction schedule," Davis said. Davis recently reviewed the title on the building through the Registry of Deeds on-line directory and learned that two sub contractors have filed mechanic liens were filed.

Davis said that is an indication that there are issues relative to the payment of contractors.

Davis also said he has met and discussed the project with local trade unions to gage their interest in working with the City and to complete the construction of the project.

"If we work together on this project and provide a united front, we may be able to convince the current mortgage holder to work with us to finish the project and sell the condos to first-time homebuyers in the Quincy.

"We can also look to funds from the City's Affordable Housing trust to make this happen. Regardless of what can be done by the City, we need to have this eyesore removed from be aggressive and get the building finished," Davis added.

Vacationing Tips

Keep this in mind, something that can be easily overlooked when a family is attempting to pack, load the car and exit the home for vacation. Make certain the bathroom ceiling vent fan is off when leaving the home. It's a little known cause of fire while it occurs frequently enough to hit here. We had a rash of them in the recent past when they were left running for extended periods of time, overheating, igniting the plastic contents, structural members and more. So if you make that one last walkthrough to check on closet lights and appliances like I do, check on the bathroom ceiling fan as well and make certain it is turned off before leaving the home.

If traveling out of state, and renting a home, consider bringing along your own carbon monoxide detector. A plug in with a battery backup would be appropriate where it can be easily installed and removed once you leave.

Nicole's Law applies to this state while I cannot speak for the rules and regulations of other states. Massachusetts tends to be pretty strict while I doubt other states are up to our standards where we now require carbon monoxide detectors within residences. Carbon monoxide knows no boundaries and can just as easily occur in a vacation home utilizing fossil fuel appliances, wood stoves and alike. Consider this easy solution.

You might consider doing the same with a smoke detector. When making arrangements, few of us would ever ask whether the home contains smoke detectors. Right? So if you haven't asked, consider bringing along your own to be strategically placed as high as possible, either near the base of a stairwell or outside sleeping areas.

Whenever the family and I arrive for an overnight stay at a hotel, motel or guesthouse, I make a point of scouting out the premise to determine exit locations. My wife is used to me coming back into the room and sharing my prefire evacuation plan. I'm not quite certain she actually listens while I believe she's content knowing emergency arrangements have been made if needed As I have said so often, the time to prepare for an emergency isn't during one. Take the time to examine your evacuation options while lodging at a resort. Remember, elevators must not be used during a fire; consequently, take the time to familiarize yourself with your accommodations and various alternative means of exiting a building.

I write these and sometimes wonder if it appears that I'm always anticipating a tragedy. Don't forget my job is to attempt to minimize as many potentially tragic occurrences as time and energy allow, before they can manifest. The fact is, I'm a true believer in doing what's within your control, and letting the rest happen. We have far less control than we realize.

Prepare for a great safe summer, do your homework, act on it, and leave plenty of lighthearted thought to enjoy it.

Have a great vacation!

THIS IS A HAMMER

By Samantha Mazzotta

Betrayed by the Caulk

Q: I cleaned away some mildew that was around my tub on the old caulking. I rinsed it well and let it dry for 24 hours, then I caulked around the tub. The next day after showering when I was drying the tile and caulking, it started to peel away like a thin strip of vinyl. Could you tell me what I might have done wrong?

— Jan S., Quincy, Mass.

A: My first thought is that the old caulking is a different type than the new. If, for example, the old caulking was silicone-based, and the new caulking is not, then the new caulking will not adhere to the old.

The best way to remove the old caulking is to completely remove the old caulking. This is certainly not easy, but you can purchase silicone caulk remover at your home-improvement store and follow the directions. Scrape away stubborn spots with a putty knife or a box cutter. Sand the area well -- this removes more residual silicone caulk and roughens up the caulking area a bit, which may help new caulk adhere. Then clean the area thoroughly again (including using mildew remover) and let dry 24 hours before applying a new bead of caulk.

If you use silicone caulk, this stuff can be messy, difficult to press into the seam and hard to clean up afterward. Try masking off the area to be caulked with blue painter's tape, wear disposable latex gloves so you can press the stuff in, and clean your fingers frequently. If a blob of caulk falls into the tub, clean it up immediately.

HOME TIP: When recaulking a sink or tub, fill the basin with water first, then drain after the caulk has set. The water's weight will open the seams a bit more to allow the caulk to fill the seam better.

Solutions To Help Homeowners Outsmart Mother Nature

(ARA) - Protecting your home means you're pitted in a constant struggle against the forces of nature. Products and improvements that help you beat the weather are a smart investment.

Look for "weather beater" products that are low maintenance or that provide solutions to harsh climates and moisture. Remember, weather damage can occur in any season, whether it's from hot or freezing temperatures, driving rains or rising flood waters.

First line of defense

Water damage can happen to any home in an instant, ruining valuable electronics or priceless family heirlooms. Even if you're not in a flood zone, it is wise to invest in a main sump and battery backup pump.

"When storms hit or snow melts off, the ground gets over saturated and the water can enter your home," says Tony Ferrante, vice president sales and marketing, Wayne Water Systems. "Sump pump systems are easy to install and provide years of worry-free service." And, he advises, if you're in a water-prone area, the sump pump should have a reliable battery backup pump, since power tends to go out during storms. For removing standing water in an emergency, such as pipes bursting or a sink or washing machine overflowing, utility pumps also come in handy. Many are portable and submersible.

A complete basement protection system is a minor investment compared to the extensive damage water can do to property and sentimental items that can't be replaced. It is your first line of defense to protect your biggest investment: your home. Visit www.waynepumps.com for more information or go to amazon.com and key in Wayne Pumps.

Decks that endure

Moisture can be your deck's worst enemy if it's made of wood or has wood content. Decking and porch materials are available that have the rich looks of wood, but are resistant to moisture, insects and freeze/thaw conditions. The home exterior experts at AZEK Building Products say the latest innovations are cellular PVC deck boards and porch planks that stand up to weather with a durable, natural looking surface.

"It resists any type of food stains you can dish out, including red wine and barbecue sauce," says Brian Kincaid of AZEK Building Products. He cautions to always ask for a code report for any decking product, since many building permits require this.

An outdoor haven with classic looks

Rain or hot sun does not have to limit your outdoor enjoyment. Enhance your entryway or backyard with a beautifully crafted pergola featuring rain-resistant or waterproof canopies in a range of colors and designs to add comfort and protection from weather.

For example, Walpole

Woodworkers features pergolas in natural wood or low-maintenance cellular PVC to withstand the elements. With the added option of a manual or motor-driven retractable canopy, homeowners can enjoy shelter from rain, UV-rays and even add privacy with retractable side panels. The company offers free pergola or canopy design consultations at (800) 343-6948 or www.walpolewoodworkers.com.

Caulk goes above and beyond

Water damage and energy leaks can threaten your home and drain your wallet. Caulk delivers more bang for the buck than expensive technologies like solar, according to a March 6, 2009

Wall Street Journal article. A third of the energy loss in homes could be stopped by simple caulking and insulating, the article says.

One way to head off moisture or beat extreme temperatures is to buy the best caulk you can find.

"Caulk is easy to apply and can result in up to 20 percent savings on utility bills," says Jason Ringling of Red Devil.

Homeowners who want to protect their homes, increase resale value or enjoy low-maintenance exteriors can make sound product choices now, rather than pay big bucks to repair problems later. It is possible to stay one step ahead of Mother Nature.

Bob Curry Presented Frederick Dolgin, M.D. Award

Quincy Medical Center (QMC) recently presented the 2009 Frederick C. Dolgin, MD. Award to Quincy businessman Bob Curry of Weymouth.

The Dolgin Award is presented annually to a QMC physician, clinician or staff person in recognition of exceptional service and a lifelong commitment to improving the health of the community.

Curry is chairman of the QMC Board of Trustees and has been an ardent and long-standing supporter of the hospital.

In presenting the award, QMC Medical Staff President John Cooney, MD, noted Curry's many levels of leadership and commitment to the hospital - from initiating the QMC Cancer Walk 12 years ago to sponsoring the annual Marie Curry

Curry is owner of Curry Ace Hardware stores and has been a member of the QMC Board of Trustees since 1999. He and his wife, Cheryle, recently moved to Weymouth from Quincy.

The Frederick C. Dolgin Award was established in 2004 in recognition of Dr.

Frederick Dolgin, a QMC-affiliated physician who served as Medical Director of Manet Community Health Center for more than 20 years.

Protect Against Lyme Disease When Enjoying The Outdoors

The excitement of summer's arrival has everyone rushing outdoors.

Before heading to campgrounds, hiking trails, or even the back yard Paul Sax, MD, clinical director of the Infectious Disease Department at Brigham and Women's Hospital (BWH), encourages everyone to take precautions to decrease the risk of contracting Lyme disease.

In the U.S., Lyme disease is spread when a person is bitten by a deer tick, which averages about the size of a pinhead. Lyme disease is most effectively treated in its early stages, but the best strategy is prevention, says Dr. Sax, who can provide additional information on Lyme disease and some basic tips on how to prevent contraction.

To prevent tick bites Dr. Sax suggests considering these tips before heading outdoors to wooded areas and locations with high grass:

Wear long-sleeved shirts and long pants when possible.

Carefully follow safety instructions to use an insect repellent containing DEET on exposed skin and Permethrin, a pesticide, on clothing.

Keep grass cut short and consider hiring a licensed professional to spray a pesticide in the yard.

Be sure to thoroughly check for ticks when returning indoors; enlisting the help of another is most effective.

Pay close attention to check children and pets for ticks whenever they return from the outdoors.

If you do find a tick, remove it with tweezers, being sure to remove the insect entirely, including the head and mouth. In addition, see a doctor immediately if symptoms of Lyme disease appear. If the tick was en-gorged, or likely attached for more than 24 hours, your doctor can prescribe a single dose of antibiotics to prevent Lyme disease.

Symptoms of Lyme disease occur in three stages and include:

Early localized infection: A rash which spreads from the site of the tick bite, flu-like symptoms, fever, chills, fatigue, and muscle aches are initial signs of the disease.

The most common sites for the rash are areas where ticks like to attach: armpit, groin, behind the knee, hairline, and top of the socks.

Early disseminated infection: Exhaustion, the inability to control the muscles of the face, pain and weakness of the arms and legs, recurring headaches and fainting spells, additional rashes, and poor memory and ability to concentrate can develop in any combination.

Late persistent infections: Severe fatigue, numbness of the hands, feet, or back, problems with memory and speech, irregular moods and sleep patterns, and severe arthritis, especially of the knees, characterize the spread of Lyme disease and potential for severe damage to the joints, nerves, and brain.

Dr. Sax recommends seeing a doctor if any symptoms occur, and even if the symptoms subside, because it is common for those infected with Lyme disease to be symptom-free for months, even years after being bitten.

Brigham and Women's Hospital (BWH) is a 777-bed nonprofit teaching affiliate of Harvard Medical School and a founding member of Partners HealthCare, an integrated health care delivery network.

Manage Stress For Summer Sanity

(ARA) - The summer season brings about visions of relaxing vacations, backyard barbecues and kids riding bicycles. These scenes hardly invoke tension, yet summer always arrives with its share of stress.

Dr. John Roncone, chair of the Allied Health department at Brown Mackie College-North Canton in North Canton, Ohio, offers advice for creating a smooth transition between seasons.

Exercise

Physical activity is especially easy to do during the summer when warmer weather expands options. "It doesn't matter if you choose to walk, jog, bike, hike or swim," says Roncone. "Physical activity is conducive to good health."

Eat a healthy diet

Stay away from high fat foods. Roncone suggests eating fruit instead of ice cream, and celery and carrots instead of a chocolate bar.

Manage time well

Watching TV, sleeping and even shopping can be time killers, especially if done to excess. "Use time wisely," says Roncone.

"Within your daily structure, find time to relax and evaluate the day's activities."

Release anger a healthy way

Roncone advises to recognize anger for what it is. "Don't be afraid of it. Think things through before you speak or act with an angry response. Counting to 10 can help you calm down," he says.

Be more optimistic

"Look at the glass as half full, not half empty," Roncone says. "When we're not expecting the worst, we tend to feel better."

Smile

It's contagious. When someone smiles at you, it's nearly impossible not to smile back.

It can also be helpful to post emergency phone numbers on the refrigerator. Make sure family members know where the first aid kit is, and include instructions on what to do for common maladies like bee stings or scuffed knees. By addressing the changes in schedule, you and your family will be more likely to see a healthy and productive summer.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

A SMILE AS YOUTHFUL AS YOUR FACE

Interestingly, the American Dental Association notes that teeth were "designed" to last only about 30 years, which means they may need help in keeping up appearances. Aside from the usual problems of decay and discoloration, older adults face other potential problems that can undercut the youthfulness of their smiles. For instance, the incisors (or canines) wear down as the years pass, leaving less enamel exposed below the upper lip when a person smiles. Moreover, teeth drift toward the center of the mouth as the bone and tissues that hold them in place weaken with age. As a result, teeth can appear crowded and unevenly distributed. Fortunately, there are cosmetic procedures available that can help restore a smile's youthfulness.

One of the first things people notice is your smile. If chipped, stained, or crooked teeth are "hid-

STEMMING FROM THE NECK

When any of the seven cervical vertebrae that comprise the neck experience misalignment (called "subluxation"), one might expect the pain to be localized. Yet, misalignment of the cervical vertebrae may also cause organic disorders such as headache, migraine, dizziness, deafness, sinus trouble, and other problems involving the head, neck, shoulders, and the tissues and organs contained therein. This is due to the fact that nerve roots emerge through spaces in the cervical vertebrae, providing the nerve energy that controls blood supply to the brain, function of the ears, and the working of various other organs and processes in the head and upper body. If this nerve energy were to be impeded, it might result in the organic disorders listed above.

Let us at FAMILY PRAC-

TICE OF CHIROPRACTIC suggest some types of chiropractic care to improve your pain. We are specially trained to determine the best treatment for your needs. Chiropractic is a natural method of health care that addresses the causes of physical problems rather than just the symptoms. Professional chiropractic care is one of the best ways to manage, or prevent spinal problems and maintain a healthier life. We are located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we will only accept you as a patient if we feel we can help you. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment.

P.S.: Because nerve energy controls a wide variety of the body's organs and systems, the chiropractor may be able to successfully treat problems that involve the extremities and other areas than simply the spine.

Morrisette Finished Week at 3-1

Quincy Post 95 Knocks Off Morrisette 10-1 Last Wednesday at Adams Field

By SEAN BRENNAN

District 6 East American Legion baseball in Quincy, with no real help from Mother Nature, has been plugging along at an almost daily pace since the second week of June.

Last Wednesday night, the two Quincy teams, Morrisette and Quincy Legion Post 95, matched up at Adams Field for the first of two games this season, and Quincy came away with an impressive 10-1 victory. The win was the first of the year for Quincy Legion (1-7 overall).

Morrisette (5-4 overall) finished last week with a 7-5 win over Stoughton, an 8-4 win over Cohasset, the 10-1 loss to Quincy and a 9-6 victory over Braintree.

The star of the Morrisette-Quincy Post 95 showdown was Quincy's starting pitcher Scott Warwick. Warwick went the distance on the hill (seven innings), striking out 12 batters. His performance earned his team its first victory of 2009 and it handed Morrisette its worst loss of the season.

Keith Morreale (3-for-4, three doubles, two RBI) and Matt Jay (3-for-5) were the offensive stars of the game for Quincy Post 95.

The loss to Quincy Post 95 was the only blemish on the schedule last week for Morrisette Legion as the team rebounded later in the week with an impressive 9-6 win over Braintree Legion.

Starting pitcher Ryan Louis is picked up his second win of the week (he was the winning pitcher in the 7-5 victory over Stoughton), pitching five innings, allowing six hits and striking out one batter. He allowed two earned runs. Pat Joyce and Jimmy Vialpando came in as relief and closed out Braintree over the final two innings.

Morrisette got off to a fast start, scoring four runs in the first, three runs in the second and two runs in the fourth inning. In the first, Colin Ryan singled, John Ainsley walked and Matt Rodriguez (four RBI) drove them both in with a triple. Ricky Salvucci (four RBI) scored Rodriguez with an RBI groundout, reaching base on a throwing error and Kevin Magoon plated Salvucci with a RBI hit later in the frame.

The three-run second got started with a walk to lead-off hitter Danny Russell. Russell stole second and after Ryan singled both advanced into scoring position on a groundout by Ainsley. Rodriguez scored both runners with a double and Salvucci plated Rodriguez with a RBI triple.

Morrisette finished up the scoring in the fourth. Russell walked; Ryan singled; and Salvucci drove them both in with a two-out hit.

"It was a good win, especially coming off that tough loss to Quincy," said Morrisette's Bill Marchand. "We had them down, so we let Joyce and Vialpando pitch those last two innings, but again, Ryan Louis was great for us."

"We are playing some good ball right now and our hitting has started to come around. With the pitching we have been getting and with our bats heating up, things are looking good."

Morrisette received six strong innings from Joe Edgerly against Cohasset as the team won 8-4. Edgerly finished with five strikeouts and allowed four earned runs.

Notes: Morrisette was scheduled to play against Weymouth, Jamaica Plain, Holbrook and Hyde Park Legion this week. Any games that are rained-out will be made up at a later date.

SUN SPORTS

THE QUINCY RED STOCKINGS 9U AAU baseball team finished second in the New England AAU tournament on June 21 in Swansea. Quincy defeated teams from Hartford and Providence before advancing to the semifinals where they defeated the top-ranked Blackstone Valley Spinners (RI). In the championship game, Quincy battled back from an early six-run deficit but lost to Swansea, 10-9. Team members are, front row from left, Matt Eagles, Matt Fox, Ryan Cox, Kevin McDonald, Austin Lee and Max Storch. Second row: Justin Sullivan, Shawn Kelly, AJ Currie, Conner McDonald and Matt Tomlinson. Third row: Gregg Selbert, Griffin Lynch, Mark Monahan, John MacDonald and Sean Healy. Back row: Coaches Jeff Currie, Kevin Kelly and Mike Lynch.

7th Annual James P. Kenney III Fishing Derby

The 7th Annual James P. Kenney III Fishing Derby is scheduled to commence Friday evening, July 10 at 6 p.m. and conclude at noontime the following day, Saturday, July 11 from the Quincy Yacht Club.

The event is in benefit of the James P. Kenney III Trust Fund, a fund that benefits Quincy residents at both high schools and at the college level. Eligible students will be pursuing degrees in maritime or environmental studies.

The fish caught during the derby will be measured by noontime on July 11 and prizes will be awarded for the three longest stripped bass. In addition to the prizes, a raffle will be drawn where half of the proceeds will go to the James P. Kenney III Trust Fund. A cook-out will be held at noon on July 11.

The Kenney family began running this annual fishing tournament six years ago in Jim Kenney's name to fund a scholarship for local students pursuing maritime or environmental studies. Kenney worked on the ocean the majority of his life and was an avid fisherman and overall boat enthusiast. Over the years, the family has raised enough money to provide at least two students with sizeable scholarships to help alleviate the cost of increasing tuition.

For more information about the derby, contact Dan Kenney at 617-786-9067.

QRD Pool Closing & Summer Schedule

The Quincy Recreation Department announced last week that the Lincoln Hancock Community School Pool will be closed for maintenance prior to the summer season and will reopen for its summer recreational swim programs Wednesday, July 1.

The schedule:

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A change of season reinvigorates the Lamb, helping to overcome the effects of a recent slower-paced period. This is a good time to restate your feelings for that certain someone.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You might not like using your authority to correct a workplace situation, but that's what being placed in charge is all about. Besides, you have people ready to lend support if need be.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your creativity continues to run high and helps guide you to make some fine choices in the work you're doing. Keep the weekend free for those special people in your life.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Don't be surprised if you experience a sudden spurt of energy strong enough to pull you out of that recent period of indecision and put you back in charge of your own goals.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) This is a good time for Leos and Leonas to set new goals regarding health, educational choices and possible career moves. The plans you make now could be a blueprint for your future.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You might have much to offer a potential employer, but it can all be overwhelmed by too many details. Let the facts about you speak for themselves without any embellishments.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) This is a good week to balance your responsibilities to your work-a-day world with your obligations to the people in your private life. Expect news that could lead to a change in plans.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A changing attitude on the part of a once determined adversary could cause changes down the line. Be prepared to take advantage of an unexpected new opportunity.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You'd be a truly wise Sagittarius to be skeptical about an offer that doesn't answer all your questions. Even a colleague's testimonial doesn't replace facts that aren't there.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) It's a good idea to avoid spending on unnecessary purchases this week in order to keep a money reserve against a possible upcoming (but, fortunately, temporary) shortfall.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) More information is what you should demand regarding that workplace situation that recently came to light. Don't be surprised at who might turn up as one of your supporters.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You might still be in a "treading water" mode, but by midweek, a shift in your aspect favors taking a more active role in pushing for the changes you feel are necessary. Good luck.

BORN THIS WEEK: You exude a warm, caring attitude that comforts everyone who comes into your life.

A THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

Courtesy indicates good manners. It involves equal consideration for all people alike, regardless of status or importance...or area or location. And this certainly holds true on streets and highways. Quite often, good manners are shelved and ignored in the driving habits of people who otherwise are fairly well-mannered... You see this in drivers squealing cars past slower motorists... You see this in the blasting of horns the second the light turns green... You see it in gestures and words of retaliation when bad manners of one induces bad manners in another. Bad manners probably cause as many accidents in driving as any other cause.

On holiday week-ends, especially when traffic is heavy, good driving manners are really needed... Giving the other fellow a break by means of common courtesy can definitely reduce traffic accidents which cause so much human misery - and property damage. Courtesy on the road has NEVER - nor will it ever degrade a driver...

How courteous a driver are you? ...

★ ★ ★ On The Campaign Trail - City Election 2009 ★ ★ ★

With the campaign season underway for this fall's city election, The Quincy Sun will publish, from time to time and when space is available, press releases submitted from candidates and their committees.

The Sun retains the right to edit releases for space purposes.

Lockwood Mullaney Announces 'Key Milestones' In His Campaign

School Committee candidate Matt Lockwood Mullaney announced key milestones in his campaign Tuesday, less than two months after announcing his candidacy in April.

In a statement to The Quincy Sun, Lockwood Mullaney said:

"My papers are filed and I have a good start on fundraising with $3,500 in the bank.

"I'm going door to door, visiting PTOs and senior residences, and reaching out to parents, teachers, principals, and voters of all stripes."

Lockwood Mullaney also said he is very happy with the response his campaign is getting from voters.

"I'm very happy with the response so far to the Schools fit for Presidents message," he stated. "People like my focus on education quality and my independence. With my education and business background, voters know I'll be a quick study and will manage the finances of the district responsibly.

"I'm going to keep campaigning hard all summer, with a break in August when Jenny and I are expecting our third child. With a mayor's race, many voters will come to the polls. I'm working to earn one of their three votes on Sept. 22 and Nov. 3."

If there is a primary election for School Committee, it would be held Tuesday, Sept. 22. At least seven candidates are needed for a primary election.

The city's general election is Tuesday, Nov. 3.

Lockwood Mullaney said he was disappointed with program cuts and fee increases approved by the school committee recently. "School committee had some tough decisions to make. People spoke passionately about the benefits of middle school foreign language and the safety concerns associated with raising the limit for free bus transport from three-quarters to 1 mile.

"Looking ahead, the big question is what happens next year," he said. "That's when we'll need new ideas to save money and improve quality, which is why I pledged $4,500 of my salary if I win to make sure QPS leadership has access to the input of superintendents around the state through MASS (Mass. Association of School Superintendents)."

Lockwood Mullaney is a Market Manager for Harvard Pilgrim Health Care's Massachusetts business. He earned his B.A. from Harvard and MBA from MIT. He lives at 180 Glendale Rd. near Quincy Center with his wife Jenny and their two young children.

Roos: 'It Is Critical To Have The Best People We Can On The School Committee'

Editor's Note: Karl Roos, a candidate for Quincy School Committee, submitted the following letter for publication:

The Quincy Public Schools are important to all the people of Quincy. To the parents who send their children to the schools; to home owners, the better the schools, the better the property values, and to people who live in Quincy, good schools help attract and retain good neighbors.

It is critical that we have good candidates running for School Committee. We need candidates who can face the challenges that will be confronting our schools. The fiscal situation does not look bright in the coming years. We are facing the prospect of cuts; difficult decisions are going to have to be made. It won't be easy.

Given the environment that we are in, it is critical to have the best people we can on the School Committee.

We need people who are vested in the schools and in the community. We need people with a history of accomplishing things for the community. We need people with roots in the city. We need smart, honest hard working people with experience, who are willing to make the commitment, do the work and solve the problems that the School Committee will face.

I encourage people willing to make the commitment and the sacrifices to join the race. I believe in competition, it fosters discussion and provokes thought; it forces all of us to work harder and produce better results.

Running a citywide campaign is not an easy undertaking and is not something that should be taken lightly but it is important that we have the best field of candidates for the three seats that are up for School Committee. Everyone benefits from strong candidates running.

laws affecting recreational fishing, dogs on public beaches and the new No-Discharge regulations for boaters, but, also, the "No Line Left Behind" campaign aimed at eliminating monofilament fishing lines left in the ocean.

A special memorial page remembers the late Quincy Sun publisher Henry W. Bosworth, Jr., and salutes Bosworth, the late Quincy Harbormaster Bernard Reisberg, and two QBCC members Paul Zamburino and Robert Leiscinskas, Sr.

Montclair School fifth grader Alan Chen, winner of a citywide contest, created the bright and cheerful cover on this year's guide for the guide's cover design.

"This is the first year we've had the contest," Kelly said of the citywide competition by schoolchildren to illustrate the guide's cover. Kelly said Alan won free sailing lessons and the other students won beach towels.

QBCC invited the city's 1,838 public school students enrolled in Grades 3, 4 and 5 to compete for first place in the contest. Each of the 12 schools selected a winner and the public voted at Quincy Environmental Network's Earth day event.

Henry Bosworth Memorial Benches Dedicated

THE SALVATION ARMY in Quincy recently dedicated two benches in memory of Henry Bosworth, founder and former publisher of The Quincy Sun. Mr. Bosworth, who was a long-time member of the Salvation Army's Advisory Board, died in February. Participants of the Adult Day Health program who attended the dedication are (standing) Eleanor Barry and (seated, from left) Helen Shinkwin, Grace Smith, Wayne Pohly and Carolyn Vining. With them are Majors Doug and Linda Jones who will be leaving the Quincy Temple Corps at the end of the month after eight years. They are being transferred to Manchester, CT.

Granite Railway 'Quarry-To-Wharf' Guided Tours

Massachusetts Bay Railroad Enthusiasts, Inc. (Mass Bay RRE) announces its 2009 schedule of 'Quarry-to-Wharf' tours through the cal sites in East Milton and West Quincy.

The 3 1/2-hour, fully guided van tours will operate June 27-28, July 25-26, Aug. 29-30; September and October dates to be announced later.

The tour explores the remnants of the first chartered U.S. commercial railroad, including the preserved Bunker Hill Ledge terminal; the 1830 double-track incline; parts of the abandoned right-of-way; several quarries; the stone Neponset River wharf; and several buildings with connections to the railroading and quarrying industries.

All tours meet in the rear parking lot at the Quincy Historical Society, 8 Adams St., Quincy Center. Saturday tours leave at 9 a.m. and 1 p.m.; Sunday tours leave at 1 p.m. (Sunday 9 a.m. tours run only by appointment.)

Advance telephone reservations are advised for a Granite Railway tour. For reservations, call Victor Campbell at 617-822-4046.

Mass Bay RRE requests a donation of $10 from each tour participant.

The Quincy Sun

A Special Supplement

Thursday, June 25, 2009

City of Quincy, Massachusetts Office of the Mayor

Welcome to Historic Quincy!

It is an honor to introduce The Quincy Sun's "Historic Quincy" supplement as a guide to all things historic about our proud City of Presidents, especially in a year when our community will celebrate the renewal of some of our most important treasures.

I know you will find "Historic Quincy" helpful as you discover all of our City's history -- The Adams National Historic Park and presidential homestead; the United First Parish Church, the final resting place for John, John Quincy, Abigail and Louisa Catherine Adams; the Hancock Cemetery; the Adams Academy and Quincy Historical Society; our granite and shipbuilding heritage, and so much more.

This summer, we will rededicate the Abigail Adams Cairn, a 113-year-old monument recently re-constructed with its original stones that marks the location where Abigail and young John Quincy Adams watched the Battle of Bunker Hill across Boston Harbor in 1775.

Construction will also finish on the long-awaited formal garden at Merrymount Park, a park originally envisioned by Charles Francis Adams II, a grandson of John Q. Adams and the donor of the land to the City, as a peaceful and beautiful place for the entire community to enjoy. I am proud to say that vision will become reality this summer.

Beyond our wonderful history, I hope you will enjoy all Quincy has to offer. Our miles of scenic beaches. Our acres of beautiful parkland. Our world-class golf courses and restaurants.

We are all proud of our great City, and I wholeheartedly encourage you to discover Quincy.

Sincerely,

'Like Magnet And Steel'

John And Abigail A Unique Historic Team

By TOM HENSHAW

The note from the young housewife, struggling to survive with her four children on the farm in the North Precinct of Braintree (now Quincy), to her husband participating in momentous events so far away, was both playful and serious.

"In the new code of laws which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make," she wrote, "I desire you would remember the ladies and be more generous and favourable to them than your ancestors.

"Do not put such unlimited power into the hands of husbands. Remember, all men would be tyrants if they could.

"If particular care and attention is not paid to the ladies, we are determined to foment a rebellion, and will not hold ourselves bound by any laws in which we have no voice, no representation."

The husband, of course, could not fulfill his wife's desires for it was the nature of the times that the woman was destined to be subordinate to the man. Nor did his feisty wife foment any rebellion.

But, on a personal level, the husband and his young wife were to be caught up as equal partners in one of history's most significant turning points — the American Revolution and the founding of the first great and lasting republic.

They seemed to be mismatched at first, the lady and her would-be tyrant.

Abigail Smith, known to friends as "Nabby," the unschooled but well-read minister's daughter from nearby Weymouth, granddaughter of Col. John Quincy, selectman, speaker of the Massachusetts House and commander of the local militia.

John Adams, the son of a Braintree farmer and shoemaker, grandson of the affluent Boylston family of Boston, Harvard-educated, sometime school teacher and a rising attorney at law.

Yet together they formed a team, each supplying something lacking in the other, a union that propelled John into the role of second president of the United States and produced a son, John Quincy Adams, who became the sixth.

The couple came together, John once said, "like magnet and steel."

They married in 1764 when Abigail was 19 and John was ten years older and just beginning to earn a reputation as a colonial malcontent by arguing against taxation without representation in court before the royal governor.

Later, John, who placed justice above expediency, disappointed the firebrands among them, including his cousin, Samuel Adams, by defending in court Capt. Thomas Preston and the British soldiers charged in what came to be known as the Boston Massacre. All but two of them were acquitted.

John was called to Philadelphia in 1774 as a Massachusetts delegate to the First Continental Congress and Abigail and her four children, Susannah, John Quincy, Thomas and Charles, were left to run the 100-acre farm at the foot of Penn's Hill. It turned out to be a long job.

For most of the Revolutionary War, John was in Philadelphia helping to found a new nation — it was he who recommended George Washington as commander-in-chief and Jefferson to write the Declaration of Independence — or in France and Holland, seeking loans and recognition from foreign governments.

Once, during a prolonged absence in the darkest days of the fighting, the long-suffering Abigail wrote to her husband:

"Difficult as the day is, cruel as this war has been, separated as I am, on account of it, from my dearest connection in life, I would not exchange my country for the wealth of the Indies, or be any other than an American."

At one point in their marriage — after the war was won and John was in Paris seeking to cement relations between the fledgling United States and French court of Louis XVI, he sent for Abigail and she made the exhausting Trans-Atlantic trip to meet her husband.

They hadn't seen each other in five years.

Even when he was home briefly on the farm, John had things to do and people to see that took him away from Abigail's side. He joined with his cousin Samuel and James Bowdoin in 1779 to write the Massachusetts constitution, a model for the American document, in his home in Braintree. Then it was off again to Europe.

John returned home, for good, he thought, in 1788 after serving a term as the first American ambassador to Great Britain only to find that his country still had need for his talents. He was chosen as the new nation's first vice president, a poor choice on his part.

"My own situation is almost the only one in the world today in which firmness and patience are useless," he poured out his restlessness to Abigail. "(It is) the most insignificant office that ever the invention of man contrived or his imagination conceived."

When the first president, George Washington, decided two terms were enough, John was elected the second president by three electoral votes over Jefferson, who became vice president of a country that was dividing into two political parties, Federalist and Democratic Republican.

John and Abigail were the first presidential couple to live in the yet unfinished White House, which was known then as the Presidential Palace, and Abigail won a special spot in White House folklore by hanging her laundry in the East Room, where warmth gave it a better chance of drying.

The Adams administration was marked by the threat of war with France, whose bloody revolution had helped divide the nation into pro-French Democratic Republicans and pro-British Federalists, and passage of the unfortunate Alien and Sedition Acts, drastically curtailing free speech and immigration.

JOHN ADAMS

Jefferson, the Democratic Republican, defeated Adams, the Federalist, the second time around in 1800, and the political rivalry between the two Founding Fathers was so bitter that John refused to stay in Washington for Jefferson's inaugural.

Finally, John's service to his country, came to an end and he and Abigail were able to return to a new and larger home, which they named "Peacefield" in the North Precinct, which had now broken away from Braintree to become the town of Quincy (population 1,081) named for Abigail's grandfather.

When Jefferson left the presidency, after two terms, Abigail assumed the role of peacemaker between the two old friends and, thanks to her efforts, the two former presidents were reconciled in their later years.

Abigail died of a stroke in 1818 after 54 years married, and it was not long before she had departed with her.

The bitterness of death is past," she wrote. "That spirit which is the life of human nature has no struggle for me."

Both John and Thomas left their own followings. John's father and son, John Adams, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, followed a few years later by Adams.

John and Abigail were both members of the United East Parish Church.

Abigail's statue, Abigail Adams, stands in the North Precinct, at 100 North Main Street, in Quincy, Massachusetts, at the corner of the street.

The story of Abigail Adams, the first woman to be featured in an HBO television miniseries in the spring of 2008. The miniseries, based on the book "John Adams" by David M.ervin, starred Paul Giamatti as John Adams and Abigail Adams (Abigail) played by Jennifer Garner. It won 13 Emmys and 4 Golden Globes.

First Father And Son Presidents Birthplaces Of John And John Quincy Adams

They could be called two of the oldest houses in America, although no one knows exactly when they were built and they have been restored and patched so many times in the past 300 or so years that it's doubtful how much of the original material remains.

When the cottage at 133 Franklin St. was restored by the Daughters of the Revolution in 1897, a brick bearing the date 1661 was discovered under the southeast corner and the house was known to have been occupied by one Joseph Penniman in that year.

And a man named Samuel Belcher was living in the one at 141 Franklin St. as early as 1663 when it was little more than a one room shack with a fireplace. It was built to its present size in 1716, as evidenced by a date brick found in the new fireplace.

Together, the modest buildings are the birthplaces of John Adams, the Second President of the United States, and John Quincy Adams, his son, the Sixth President of the United States.

It was the North Precinct of Braintree then, a sprawling tract of woods and farmlands some 10 miles south of the Boston Stone along the winding Coast Road to Plymouth.

Something less than 1,500 people lived in the North, Middle and South Precincts of Braintree in the year 1735 and two of them were Deacon John Adams, 44, farmer and shoemaker, and his wife, Susanna, 26, residents of what is now 133 Franklin St.

THE ADAMS BIRTHPLACES, where John Adams and his son, John Quincy Adams, the Second and Sixth Presidents of the United States, were born, is the only location in the country where two Presidential birthplaces stand side-by-side. It is a National Historical Site under the supervision of the U.S. National Park Service.

He was a pillar of his rural community, a deacon in First Parish Church, a lieutenant in the Braintree militia, a town constable and hard-working farmer who worked in leather in the wintertime and was acknowledged as the maker of the best cider in town.

Susanna Adams was a Boylston of Brookline, socially a cut above her husband, and perhaps there were moments in the simple house at the foot of Penn's Hill when she thought of the home of her uncle, the noted Dr. Zabiel Boylston, whose furniture came all the way from London.

Their first child, a son who was named John for his father, was born in the southeast bedroom of the farmhouse on Oct. 19, 1735 (Old Style). He would become the second president of the United States.

Deacon John purchased the house next door, now 141 Franklin St., along with its 9 1/2 acres of farmland from the Billings brothers, for 500 pounds in 1744 and it was ready 20 years later when young John moved in with his brand new bride, the former Abigail Smith, the preacher's sparkling daughter from the next town of Weymouth.

Their second child, a son who was named John Quincy Adams after his great-grandfather, Col. John Quincy, was born there on July 11, 1767. He would become the Sixth President of the United States.

Until George W. Bush was sworn in as the 43rd president in 2001, John and John Quincy Adams were the only father and son combination to achieve that of fice. George H. W. Bush was the 41st The Harrisons, William Henry and Benjamin, were grandfather and grandson.

According to Henry Adams, grandson of President John Quincy Adams, no member of the family lived in the cottages after 1818, although ownership remained in the Adams family until 1940.

Both houses were restored by the Adams Realty Trust, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace in 1896 at a cost of $1,650 and the John Adams Birthplace a year later at an expense of $515.49.

They were presented to the city of Quincy in 1940 and supervised by the Quincy Historical Society until they were turned over to the U. S. National Park Service on May 1, 1979.

For more than 80 years they were the little red farmhouses at the foot of Penn's Hill but research launched by the National Park Service turned up the fact that Abigail wanted them "stone" and white in color and what Abigail wanted Abigail got.

In the summer of 1980, during a six year $175,000 reconstruction project the John Quincy Adams Birthplace was repainted to Abigail's taste, the "stone" color determined to be a sort of off-white, mixed especially from a late 18th century formula.

The John Adams Birthplace was painted white, but later research indicated it was unpainted.

The houses are furnished with precise reproductions of those that were in the them when the second president lived there. The originals are at the Old House the Adams National Historical Site, from which they cannot be removed under the ownership agreement with the Adams family.

The most interesting room in the John Quincy Adams Birthplace is John Adams old law office, in which the elder Adams James Bowdoin and Samuel Adams drafted the Massachusetts State Constitution on which the U. S. Constitution was modeled.

It is a privilege to serve as President of the Quincy City Council, sharing the burdens and rewards of public service at this exciting time in Quincy's history with colleagues whom I respect and admire.

There can be no finer community in all of the U.S.A. in which to live, work and raise a family than our historic city of Quincy. From all-day kindergarten through college, our schools provide excellence in education and are responsive to the needs of all students. Our neighborhoods are safe, and our police and fire departments have received national recognition. We also have an abundance of natural resources not the least of which is a 27 mile coastline.

With much gratitude to Pulitzer Prize winning author David McCullough, we are seeing a big lift in our tourism industry. There is mega interest in the birthplaces of John Adams and John Quincy Adams as well as the Adams Mansion. First time visitors to Quincy will delight in the many treasures our city holds. Our residents are revisiting the historic sites in Quincy, and many are enjoying summer activities at beautifully renovated waterfront parks. Our restaurants are some of the finest found anywhere. There are excellent hotels.

Our city is thriving with hope and optimism. Our residents are proud of our rich past, and full of promise for the future. I am an exciting blend of the old and the new in Quincy. I am a resident of many neighborhoods, and diverse backgrounds, and I am proud to lead in new commercial development which will contribute to our tax base.

Don't miss out this summer. Discover Quincy. Take a tour of its magnificent historic sites and enjoy other exciting attractions such as the Granite Lakes Golf Course, with a breathtaking panoramic view, or the Boardwalk at Marina Bay. Just to name a few. Relish in the beauty of Quincy, so much so, Bostonians are disappointed.

Sincerely,
Jay Davis

'The Old House' At Peace Field Summer White House And Home Of 2 Presidents

Josiah Quincy, the one who built railroads around New England and founded the cooperative bank movement in Massachusetts, was in his boyhood a frequent visitor to the mansion where John Adams, the second president of the United States, lived in retirement.

Later, he wrote with wry amusement about Sunday dinner with the aging patriarch of the Adams clan and his wife, Abigail, a dinner that inevitably began with a thick pudding made from boiled corn meal.

"...it being thought desirable to take the edge off one's hunger before reaching the joint," wrote Quincy.

"Indeed, it was considered wise to stimulate the young to fill themselves with pudding, by the assurance that the boy who managed to eat the most of it should be helped most abundantly to the meat, which was to follow.

"It need not be said that neither the winner nor his competitors found much room for meat at the close of their contest; and so the domestic economy of the arrangement was very apparent."

Quincy, as a young Harvard law student, stopped by several times a week in summer to talk and read to the former President. He found the visits delightful. Indeed, the Adams of the cold and austere public mien was never more relaxed than he was at his country home in Quincy.

The original house, a small part of the present building, was built probably in 1731 by Major Leonard Vassall, a wealthy West Indian sugar planter who lived in Cambridge and apparently used it for a summer place.

His daughter, Mrs. Anna Borland, who was a Loyalist during the Revolution, abandoned the house to leave with the British forces when they evacuated Boston in 1776. For a while it was used as a haven for rebel refugees fleeing the war zones.

Mrs. Borland returned to reclaim the house after the Revolution and John Adams, then in Europe as the first American ambassador to London, purchased it for 600 pounds through the good offices of the Cotton Tufts of Weymouth, his wife Abigail's cousin.

The Adamses were about to return to the United States after seven years abroad and Abigail was concerned that John's books and papers and the furnishings they had acquired in Europe would not fit into their old farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill where they lived before.

The deal was closed on Sept. 26, 1787, and the deed is still on file in the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds in which the Adams purchase is specified as a house, barn and other buildings on seven acres of land with some 76 acres more scattered around the North Precinct of Braintree.

There are indications that Abigail was first disappointed with her purchase. It was a lot smaller than she remembered it.

"In height and breadth it feels like a wren's house," she wrote to her daughter, Abigail, the wife of Col. William S. Smith, "Let Col. Smith come without heels to his shoes or he will not be able to walk upright."

Abigail and John Adams moved into the house, which they named "Peacefield," after his retirement from the presidency in 1801 and lived there until they died.

It was from the "Old House," as the family called it, that John Adams carried on his long and increasingly warm correspondence with his old rival, Thomas Jefferson of Virginia, who had succeeded him in the presidency. In retirement, they became firm friends as they outlasted their contemporaries.

"Thomas Jefferson lives," whispered John Adams as he lay dying in the Old House. He was wrong. Jefferson, in far away Monticello, Va., had preceded him in death by a few hours on the same day.

It was July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

The Old House which served as summer White House for two presidents, was home to four generations of the Adams family, the last, Brooks Adams, dying in February, 1927. It was taken over by the U.S. National Park Service in 1946 to become the Adams Mansion National Historical Site.

The Old House at Peace Field, 135 Adams St. is open from April 19 to Nov. 10 daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The last full tour is at 4 p.m. Admission is $5 for adults and youth 16 and over, and includes admission to the Adams Birthplaces within seven days. Tours must be arranged at the Visitors' Center, 1250 Hancock St. The last full tour of the park leaves the Visitors' Center at 3:15 p.m. Tours are on a first come, first serve basis.

John Quincy Adams: 6th President And A Lot More

By TOM HENSHAW

When he was 14 years old, John Quincy Adams was dispatched to St. Petersburg, Russia, to translate the official French spoken at the court of Czarina Catherine the Great for the American ambassador, Francis Dana.

In a way, the eldest son of John Adams was already a veteran diplomat, having served two tours of France and Holland with his father and Benjamin Franklin as they sought European aid for the American colonies in rebellion.

The Revolution was won by the time he returned home to old Braintree and the fractured education he received in France, Holland, Russia and England allowed him to enter Harvard as a junior and graduate in 18 months.

He was named minister to the Netherlands by President George Washington in 1794, beginning a long career in public service that carried him through the presidency in 1825-29 to his death on the floor of Congress in 1848.

Like his father before him, John Quincy Adams was defeated for a second term as president, each having the misfortune to represent the Old Guard at a time when American democracy was embracing the new.

One of John Adams' first moves as president was to name his son to the more important post as minister to Prussia amid cries of nepotism that embarrassed the 30-year-old John Quincy dreadfully but he took the post anyway.

And he took a bride, too, Louisa Catherine Johnson, the vivacious and highly educated daughter of an American father and an English mother, his second choice, after his mother, Abigail, had torpedoed his first love, Mary Frazier of Newburyport.

His father fired him as minister to Prussia to spare him another embarrassment of being fired by his successor, Thomas Jefferson, and John Quincy was able to return home to a new town named for his great grandfather.

He ran for and won a seat in the state legislature as a Federalist, his father's old party, but he showed such a strong streak of independence that his fellow Federalists urged him to stand for the US Senate to be rid of him.

Since it was the legislators themselves who voted for senators in those days, John Quincy was elected and promptly alienated both Federalists and Democrat-Republicans by speaking up for the Louisiana Purchase and voting against creation of the Louisiana Territory.

He finally emerged as a Democrat-Republican in 1808 after the British frigate Leopard attacked the American frigate Chesapeake in search of what the Brits thought were deserters from his majesty's navy and the Federalists sought to appease them.

Federalists were outraged and even John and Abigail, living in retirement in Peace Field, their estate in Quincy, found the words to chastise their son, who responded, "I could wish to please my parents — but my duty must do."

Rather than face dismissal by his home state, John Quincy resigned his Senate seat but the ink was hardly dry before President James Madison nominated him to be minister to Russia and he liked it so well that he turned down a Supreme Court appointment to keep it.

In fact, he and Tsar Alexander I, the one who halted Napoleon's march on Moscow, hit it off so well that the Russian ruler offered to be godfather to John Quincy's first daughter, Louisa Catherine, but the offer was refused.

Always available, Adams the ultimate negotiator was next called on to chair the American delegation to Ghent in Belgium where the final peace treaty with Britain was drawn up ending the War of 1812, what some call the second American Revolution.

A new president, James Monroe, meant a new job for John Quincy, who was named secretary of state in 1817 at a time when their colonies in Latin America were declaring independence from Spain and Portugal.

When President Monroe delivered to Congress on Dec. 2, 1823, the message that those Latin colonies can no longer "be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European Power" he was speaking Adams' words and it became the Monroe Doctrine.

The Americans' ace negotiator also worked out the so-called Adams-Onís Treaty, under which Gen. Andrew Jackson's attacks on the Seminole Indians in Spanish Florida were justified and the whole peninsula ceded to the United States in exchange for a settlement of the boundary between Mexico and the Louisiana Purchase.

Five strong candidates — all Democrat-Republicans — emerged for the 1824 presidential race.

There was Henry Clay, the speaker of the House; William Crawford, the secre-

Hancock Cemetery

Where Patriots, Early Settlers, Intrigue Rest

Henry, the first Adams in Quincy, is buried there. So is the Rev. John Hancock, father of the first signer of the Declaration of Independence. And Colonel John Quincy, for whom the city is named.

But of all the 800 graves in the Hancock Cemetery, the Old Burying Ground of Colonial Quincy, most intriguing is one marked by a tombstone bearing this cryptic epitaph:

"Erected to the memory of John R. Grieve: Died Nov. 12, 1850, age 22 years, and Hannah Banks, his wife, died Nov. 12, 1850, age 15 years. Both of Zanesville, Ohio. Deluded by the writings of A.J. Davis."

The mystery of John and Hannah has never been fully solved.

They came to Quincy in 1850, not as man and wife, but as male cousins. John Green and George Sands. They obtained work in a shoe factory but rarely left their lodgings on Elm St., spending long hours reading books on spiritualism.

Co-Workers thought that George Sands looked frail, almost effeminate. It was widely suspected that "he" was a girl. A scheme was devised to test the theory.

One day at lunch one of the shoe workers tossed George an apple. A man would catch it by closing his legs; a woman by spreading her skirt. Guess what "George" did!

HANCOCK CEMETERY

Humiliated, John and Hannah never went back to the factory. Nor did they ever return to the house on Elm St. Their frozen bodies were found next spring by rabbit hunters on Penn's Hill, locked in a loving embrace.

Several months later, the father of John Grieve arrived from Ohio to bury the young couple. It was he who directed the words to be chiselled on the headstone. He explained no further.

A.J. Davis was never identified for sure. But Andrew Jackson Davis, a spiritualist, hypnotist and faith healer, was then practicing in Boston.

Among the belongings found in the Elm St. lodgings were these words, written by 15-year-old Hannah Banks:

"To the oppressed and downtrodden, to the suffering and afflicted, I would cry out...Death is only an event, only a circumstance in the eternal life experience of the human soul. Death is simply a birth into a new and perfect state of existence."

Not far from the grave of John and Hannah is a tomb bearing words that cry out of an earlier injustice:

"Three precious friends under this tombstone lie

"Patterns to aged, youth and infancy.

"A great mother, her learned son, with child.

"The first and least went free. He was exiled.

"In love to Christ, this country, and dear friends.

"He left his own, cross'd seas and for amends

"Was here extoll'd, and envy'd all in a breath.

"His noble consort leaves, is drawn to death.

"Stranger changes may befall us ere we die.

"Blest they who will arrive eternity.

"God grant some names. O thou New England's friend.

"Don't sooner fade than thine, if times don't mend."

The tomb with its hidden message contains the family of the Rev. Leonard Hoar, third president of Harvard College, a man too liberal for his times.

He was forced by the General Court of the Massachusetts Bay Colony to resign at the instigation of religious opponents and jealous colleagues for permitting Harvard to "languish and decay." Eight months later, in November 1675, he was dead at 45.

In 1975, the same General Court, now of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, righted the 300-year-old wrong done to the Rev. Mr. Hoar by "proclaiming and confirming his innocence of any misdeeds while president of Harvard College."

The cemetery, on Hancock St., Quincy Square, next to City Hall, is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

United First Parish

Only Church Where Two Presidents Entombed

In 1949, when the present First Parish Church building, the Old Stone Temple, was 121 years old, it was ruled officially that the church is older than the city itself and the town before it.

It was then that the late historian William Churchill Edwards was called upon to resolve a minor dispute that involved the rounding of the corners of the church lot in downtown Quincy.

"Almost the first subject to which the minds of the early settlers of our country were turned after they landed here was the formation of a church," said Edwards.

The first church in these parts was established as a branch of the Church of Boston in 1636. It became a church in its own right in 1639. The Mount Wollaston section of Boston was incorporated as the town of Braintree on May 23, 1640. Ergo, the church came first!

Quincy's first house of worship, the branch of the Church of Boston, was called the "Chapel of Ease," and if it was neglected by early historians it was because its first pastor, the Rev. John Wheelwright, his sister-in-law, Anne Hutchinson, and others were banished from the Massachusetts Bay Colony for heresy.

The new church, the one that lasted, was gathered by covenant on Sept. 26, 1639, and it was holding services in its third meeting house in 1732 when its pastor was the Rev. John Hancock, father of the bold first signer of the Declaration of Independence. Son John also was a member.

The affairs of the church and the town of Quincy were one and the same until 1824 when church and state were separated in Massachusetts and the Congregational Society was established to handle parochial matters.

The old Hancock meeting house was still standing, although a little run down, on the south lawn of the present church lot in 1822 when former President John Adams deeded the interest from certain of his lands and granite from his pastures to build a stone temple.

It was completed in Greek revival style at a cost of $30,488.56 which was some $3,000 less than architect Alexander Parrish's estimate and dedicated Nov. 12, 1828, with John Quincy Adams, the sixth President of the United States holding Pew No. 1.

Even before the church was dedicated, the mortal remains of his benefactors, John and Abigail Adams, were transferred to tombs in the crypt of the church and, in 1852, the bodies of John Quincy Adams and his wife, Louisa, joined them.

It is the only church in the United States in which two Presidents are buried. The only other church in which a President is buried is the Episcopal Cathedral in Washington, D.C., where President Woodrow Wilson is entombed.

The church is open to the public for tours daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday, noon to 5 p.m. mid-April to mid-November. Admission is $4 for adults, $3 for students and senior citizens, and free for children 12 and under. For further information, call 617-773-0062.

Starting our 104th year as a proud part of Quincy's history

QUINCY LODGE OF ELKS
No. 943

254 Quarry Street, Quincy

Why We Pronounce It 'Quin-zee'

Why do we pronounce Quincy "Quin-zee" when just about everyone else in the country refers to it as "Quin-see?"

There are 19 other Quincys in the U.S., but they pronounce it "Quin-see."

Can they be right and we be wrong?

Not according to Quincy's late city historian, William C. Edwards, who never budged an inch whenever the argument ever came up. And it still comes up.

The reason we pronounce it "Quin-zee" is very simple.

"That's the way the Quincy family pronounced it," he used to explain.

"The original Quincy family which settled here at Mount Wollaston pronounced it "Quin-zee," including Col John Quincy after whom Quincy, Mass.—the first Quincy—was named in 1792."

Colonel Quincy was the great grandfather of sixth President John Quincy Adams.

Apparently, all 19 other Quincys in the U.S. were named after John Quincy Adams.

And, apparently the early settlers of those communities thought John Quincy pronounced it John "Quin-see."

Anyway, that is how Edwards explained it.

Seems like a sound argument.

Designed By Henry Hobson Richardson Thomas Crane Library Architectural Beauty

He came to Quincy as a boy of 7, grew to young manhood on a farm in Quincy Point, learned the granite cutters' trade, and left at the age of 26 to win fame and fortune in stone in New York City.

That was the last Quincy heard of Thomas Crane for half a century until one February day in 1880, five years after his death, when his son, Albert, appeared with $20,000 with which to build a memorial — preferably a library — to his father.

"My father always retained a strong feeling for the town of Quincy," was his only explanation.

Albert Crane himself chose the man to design the building, Henry Hobson Richardson, grandson of the English scientist Dr. Joseph Priestly and the foremost architect of the day.

His reputation was so formidable that he was able to tell Crane, "I cannot guarantee that the building, when completed, shall conform to (your) ideas of beauty and taste, — and still get the job."

Richardson's Romanesque building, which now houses the reference section of the library, was dedicated on May 30, 1882, with the principal oration delivered by Charles Francis Adams, Jr., chairman of the Board of Trustees.

It was Adams who gave the library its name. Albert Crane wanted it to be "The Quincy Free Public Library." Adams insisted on "The Thomas Crane Public Library."

"Who's giving the building?" asked Albert Crane.

"You are, but you wouldn't have if it hadn't been for me," said Adams, who was used to having his way around Quincy, and that was that.

President John Adams' modest collection of books was housed in the library until 1893, when it was discovered that in 11 years only two persons, one of them Charles Francis Adams, Jr., had asked to see them. They were then transferred to the Boston Public Library.

At the start, Richardson's magnificent building was all but hidden behind a grain store, a hotel, an office building and four homes that lined Washington St.

Albert Crane, however, was a persistent man and, by the time he died in 1917, he had purchased and torn down all the buildings, leaving a broad expanse of open space to enhance the library.

But before the lawn could be seeded World War I intervened and, in a burst of patriotism — "Food will win the war," they said — the area was planted with potatoes, tended by an expert brought in from Maine. The experiment failed.

"There wasn't a potato in the lot that was anywhere near as large as a golf ball," said Mayor Joseph L. White Jr. The harvest was donated to the poor.

Albert Crane also put up $64,000 to build the Spear St. wing of the library in 1907-08 and the Crane family gave out another $164,000 to complete the building in 1938.

After a $18 million, 100,000-sq-ft renovation of the library, the project was completed in the summer of 2001, only seven months after the September 11 attacks. The renovation was a testament to the library's resilience and commitment to the community.

The Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., is open to the public, free of charge, Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Fridays and Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

First To Sign Declaration Of Independence

John Hancock's Bold Signature Symbol For Liberty

He was the least likely of all the Founding Fathers to revolt against the status quo of the late 18th century, the last man expected to affix a bold signature to a declaration of independence that has become a symbol for defiance to totalitarian rule everywhere.

His folks were certain he would be a minister following in the footsteps of his grandfather, who was called "the Bishop of Lexington," and his father, the gentle minister of the First Parish Church in the North Precinct of Braintree (now Quincy).

When Patrick Henry's call for "liberty or death" went out, he was said to be the wealthiest man in the wealthiest town (Boston) in the 13 colonies, a man who owned a Beacon Hill crowned by his mansion, whose merchant ships plied the seas, whose warehouses bulged with the world's treasures.

John Hancock was born in Quincy on Jan. 12, 1737, on the site of what became the Adams Academy, now the headquarters of the Quincy Historical Society, little more than a stone's throw from the church served by his father, the Rev. John Hancock.

When he was 7, his father died, leaving his mother, Mary, with three children under 10 to raise, a formidable task in those days. Fortunately, his uncle, Thomas Hancock, the Merchant King of Boston, childless and yearning for a son, adopted John as his own and his future was secure.

When Thomas died in 1764, young John Hancock, then 27, became head of the House of Hancock, a colonial conglomerate of real estate, shipping, warehousing, banking and anything else that could be converted into cash to fill the Hancock coffers.

John was living the good life of a merchant prince when taxes imposed by a far away parliament began cutting into his profits, the Hancock sloop Liberty was seized when most of its cargo of wine from Madeira slipped in untaxed and Hancock was accused of smuggling.

With the aid of his attorney, John Adams, Hancock was able to beat the smuggling rap but the court ordered Liberty forfeited and a short time later her former owner emerged as a member of the Sons of Liberty.

A newspaper of the time, The Massachusetts Spy, in its report of the Boston Tea Party, suggested that John Hancock "was the first man that went aboard the vessel to destroy the tea," but the claim is doubtful and the men who, disguised as Indians, threw the tea into the sea have never been identified.

was signed and that created the United States and there was no other president at the time, some say Hancock can be referred to as the first president of the United States.

In his one display of military prowess, Major General John Hancock and his Massachusetts Militiamen, 3,000 strong suffered an humiliating defeat in their attempt to capture Newport, R.I., from the British and Hancock went back to doing what he did best.

And he was at his best in January 1788, as president of the Massachusetts state convention called to ratify the U.S. Constitution, a process that was stalled in several states for want of adequate protections for the individuals, which the Revolution was all about.

By 1775, Hancock was so deeply involved in the spirit of revolution that the British attempt to arrest him and Samuel Adams in Lexington and confiscate the rebel arms and munitions in Concord erupted into the first battles of the American Revolution at Lexington green and Concord bridge.

He was chosen one of five delegates from Massachusetts to the first Continental Congress in Philadelphia but he preferred to stay behind in Boston to lead the local patriots and, not incidentally, mend his political fences while his rivals were away.

He did attend the second Continental Congress, however, and with the support of George Washington himself, he was chosen its president, a role he filled when he signed the Declaration of Independence first in script so large that King George "can read my name without his spectacles."

Since he was president of the Continental Congress when the Declaration

Hancock, suffering from the gout and carried into the hall by servants, proposed and guided to a 187 to 168 victory a series of nine "conciliatory amendments" which later evolved into the Bill of Rights and assured ratification of the Constitution by all.

Hancock was elected the first governor of Massachusetts in 1780 but he resigned five years later. He was elected again in 1787 and was still in office when he died in 1793 at the age of 57, the end of his line.

Unlike the Adams and Quincy clans, he left no direct descendants. His marriage to Dorothy Quincy, produced two children, a daughter, Lydia, who died in her first year, and a son, John George Washington Hancock, who was killed in a skating accident when he was 9.

He had spent most of his fortune financing the Revolution.

Historic Quincy Supplement Staff

This special Historic Quincy supplement was produced by the following members of The Quincy Sun staff:

Robert Bosworth, Tom Henshaw, Sean Brennan, Kelly Bognanno, Robert Noble, Donna Gray, Michelle Collins, Noreen O'Shea, Laura Griffin and Dolly Newman.

We also acknowledge with fondness the work of the late Henry Bosworth, former Quincy Sun publisher. Mr. Bosworth, a strong proponent of the city's history, was the visionary behind this supplement.

We also wish to thank the City of Quincy, the Quincy Historical Society, the Thomas Crane Public Library and the Quincy Park Department for their cooperation and assistance.

Quincy Historical Society At Adams Academy

Birthplace Site Of John Hancock

By modern standards, the boarding house at the corner of Hancock and Depot Sts. had all the aspects of a genteel prison.

Residents were forbidden to leave between 7 p.m. and 7 a.m. They could not enter or leave at any time except by the hall door. They were banned from pool halls and bars. Smoking materials also were forbidden to them.

In exchange for good behavior, plus tuition ranging from $75 to $150 a year, they were given the best prep school education of the day, for they were students at Adams Academy, which flourished from 1872 to 1907 in Quincy.

The academy was a gift of John Adams, the second President of the United States, who always had his checkbook ready to fill the spiritual and educational needs of the citizens of his beloved Quincy.

The trust fund, nourished by "rents, profits and emoluments" from certain Adams-owned properties, was set up in the Adams will of 1822, but it was not until 1869 that the fund was deemed large enough to start construction.

The location was specified by Adams himself as the corner of Adams and Hancock Streets, site of the birthplace of his childhood friend, John Hancock, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

The doors opened to the first students, 24 of them, on Sept. 4, 1872. Five years later, the academy reached a peak enrollment of 154 with an international student body—25 from Quincy, four from Washington, D.C., 125 from 14 states, two from England and one from Chile.

It had one of the earliest prep school football teams, too, recording a tie with the Resolutes of Boston on Oct. 21, 1876, a scant seven years after Princeton and Rutgers played the first college game. It whipped Andover three times from 1877-79.

The admissions catalogue specified that applicants be "well prepared in the usual studies of good grammar school" and warned that "no pupils are desired to give them a collegiate education."

The best known headmaster was Dr. William Everett, once acclaimed as one of the seven smartest men in the world. He ran the academy with a firm hand from 1878 to 1893 and again from 1897 to 1907. From 1893 to 1897, he was a U.S.

ADAMS ACADEMY is at John Hancock Square, and now home of the Quincy Historical Society.

congressman from Lynn.

Dr. Everett, an amiable if sometimes waspish eccentric, was widely known as the man who hated Abraham Lincoln. He had reason. His father was Edward Everett, whose masterful oration at Gettysburg was over-shadowed by Lincoln's notes scribbled on the back of an envelope.

It was Dr. Everett, who signaled the passage of a vote to remove the name of the 19th Century from the schools—not that the president did so when he said that "masses of people forward and planks" (Aug. 27, 1863). The academy will be sold.

Nobody, after Oct. 1, 2012, 1907, the Adams Academy will have closed its doors.

The building today is occupied by the Quincy Historical Society, which maintains a museum and research library in the old classrooms as well as an expanded gift shop.

The museum and gift shop are open all year, Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The library is open Monday and Wednesday from 9 a.m. to noon. Other times by appointment. Call 617-773-1144 for more information.

QUINCY - TODAY

Population: City Census 90,352
Land Area: 16.77 square miles
Shoreline: 27 miles

Ancestry Traced To Magna Carta

The first member of the Quincy family, for whom the city is named, came to Boston from England in 1633, claiming descent from Baron de Quincy, one of the noblemen who forced King John to sign the Magna Carta at Runnymede in 1215.

City Hall

Seat Of Government For 165 Years

Daniel and Hannah French deeded the land to the town of Quincy for $1,000 with the stipulation that it "shall not be used for any other purpose than as a place for a Town House and for the said Inhabitants."

And, with a few minor transgressions of that vow, the solid structure of Quincy granite on Quincy Square has been just that for the past 165 years, the nerve center of government for the town and then the city.

It was the great hall on the second floor that the popular John Quincy Adams II, grandson of a President of the United States, held forth as town moderator for many years and, with his brother, Charles Francis Adams Jr., gave informal direction to town affairs.

One of the earliest ordinances passed by the first City Council on March 8, 1889 was the adoption of the City Seal emblazoned with the four most significant dates in Quincy's history:

1625, for the first settlement on Mount Wollaston; 1640, for its separation from Boston as the town of Braintree; 1792, for its separation from Braintree as the town of Quincy; and 1888, for its incorporation as a city.

CITY HALL

Designed by the architect Solomon Willard — who received $280 for drawing up the plans and superintending construction for five months — the City Hall was completed and occupied for the first time on Nov. 1, 1844.

It cost exactly $19,115.93 to build, including 88 cents to John Briesler for lead to seal the chimney.

In 1979, when a three and a half story reflective glass addition was built behind the old City Hall, the cost was $1.9 million.

THE WOODWARD SCHOOL

Dr. Ebenezer Woodward, cousin of President John Adams, founded the Woodward School in 1869 as a sister school to The Adams Academy. While the Adams Academy closed in 1909, Woodward has maintained its enduring mission of preparing motivated and promising young women in grades 6 – 12 for college, engaged citizenship and service to others.

Welcome To Quincy

'THE GAZING BALL,' a shining sphere of Quincy granite in Constitution Common outside City Hall, is a reminder that the famous Quincy stone was once one of the world's most cherished building materials. The Bunker Hill Monument is among the many structures built of it. For 69 years the ball was half-hidden in the shrubbery at the Fore River Rotary but was returned to its original site in 2007.

Abigail Adams Cairn

The Smoke Could Be Seen Over Bunker Hill

Abigail Adams was awakened at dawn in the farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill by the sound of far-off guns. All through the sweltering morning of June 17, 1775, as she hustled about with the chores, the dull boom of cannon intruded on her consciousness.

Riders on the Coast Road to Plymouth, stopping at the farmhouse for a drink of water, told her of a great battle underway on Breed's Hill in Charlestown.

One of them brought word that Dr. Joseph Warren had been killed in the fighting and little Abby, age 10, burst into tears, and John Quincy, nearly 8, felt bewildered and sad, for Dr. Warren was the Adams family doctor in Boston.

In the afternoon, Abigail could stand it no longer. Taking Abby and John Quincy by the hand, she walked up the Coast Road to the top of Penn's Hill and climbed up on the rocks for a better view.

The panorama of the Bay, a shimmering blue in the sunshine, spread out before them, the tiny houses on the three hills of Boston and, beyond, the black smoke rising in billows.

"Good God," exclaimed Abigail, "they are burning Charlestown!"

The scene etched itself forever in John Quincy's memory.

The early days of the Revolution were times of turmoil in Old Braintree and its North Precinct, which was later called Quincy.

Abigail's husband, John, was away most of the time at the Continental Congress in Philadelphia, leaving 31 year-old Abigail to manage the farm and look to the needs of four small children: Abigail, John Quincy, Charles, 5, and Thomas Boylston, 3.

There were days of alarm as the British, penned up in Boston by the brand new Continental Army, foraged up and down the coast for supplies. Refugees from occupied Boston and the inner towns of Dorchester and Roxbury sometimes slept in the kitchen and in the fields.

As the wife of a member of Congress, Abigail was a center of attention. The house on the Coast Road was a favorite stopping place for travelers to Plymouth. Politicians up from Philadelphia made it a point to stop by for a visit with John Adams' wife.

Abigail was invited to visit Gen. George Washington's headquarters at Winter Hill. The aristocratic Washington was suspect among New Englanders. He was a Virginian; he was an Anglican; and, it was said, he held slaves. But John Adams liked him and Abigail was soon charmed.

One day, young John Quincy came home to find his Uncle Elihu melting down Abigail's pewter spoons in the kitchen to make bullet molds. He looked at his mother and she looked back at him and something indefinable passed between them.

"Do you wonder," wrote the sixth

President of the United States some 68 years later, "that a boy of 7 who witnesses this scene should be a patriot?"

In 1896, where the old Coast Road (now Franklin Street) meets Viden Road atop Penn's Hill, a stone cairn was built to mark the spot where Abigail and young John Quincy watched the Battle of Bunker Hill. It is open to the public and free of charge.

John Adams 'Father'

U.S., State Constitution Both Born Here

By TOM HENSHAW

Quincy, birthplace of John Adams. John Quincy Adams and John Hancock, also has claim to the birth of the U.S. Constitution.

The seed for this precious document was planted here.

The U.S. Constitution was modeled after the Massachusetts Constitution which was written by John Adams, Samuel Adams and James Bowdoin in Adams' law office of the John Quincy Adams birthplace in Quincy.

There is every reason to believe that John Adams did not want to go the Massachusetts Constitution Convention in Cambridge in 1779.

He missed his wife, Abigail, terribly, and she him.

The American colonies, newly reborn as the United States of America, were going through the most dismal period of the War for Independence. Inflation was rampant: butcher's meat, a dollar to eight shillings a pound; flour, fifty dollars a hundredweight. The news from the fighting front was of death, privation and horror.

Like many Braintree wives whose husbands were away at war, Abigail Adams was forced into the unaccustomed role of head of the household, a function she filled with determination.

John Adams attended the opening session of the Constitutional Convention in Cambridge on Wednesday, June 1, 1779. On Saturday, he was named to a committee of 30 to prepare the declaration of rights and the constitution. On Monday, the committee delegated the task to a subcommittee of three, John and Samuel Adams; and James Bowdoin.

Thus it was that John Adams wound up in the law office of his home at the foot of Penn's Hill, paired with his firebrand cousin, Sam, and his ailing friend, James Bowdoin, to write a Constitution for Massachusetts.

The patient, hard-working John Adams, of course, did most of the work.

"I was by the Convention put upon the Committee—by the Committee upon the subcommittee—and by the subcommittee appointed a sub subcommittee—so that I had the honor to be principal Engineer." he wrote to his friend, Edmund Jennings. Payroll records indicate that he was paid 90 pounds for his work.

The so-called "Adams draft" of the Massachusetts Constitution was accepted by the Convention with a few alterations but by that time John Adams was long gone back to Europe, this time to help negotiate a treaty of peace with Britain and serve as America's first minister to London. He did not see the farm at the foot of Penn's Hill again for another eight years.

But he was immensely heartened by these words from the pen of his ever-loving Abigail, written on Oct. 15, 1780:

"Our Massachusetts Constitution is read with admission in New York and pronounced by the Royal Governor as the best republican form he ever saw."

Josiah Quincy House

Lookout For Spying On British Ships

Abigail Adams stood with her great uncle, Col. Josiah Quincy, in a window of his mansion overlooking Wollaston Beach and watched the tall masts of 170 ships stand slowly out to sea. It was March 17, 1776. The British were evacuating Boston.

But even in triumph there was tragedy.

Aboard the departing ships were more than 1,000 Loyalists, Americans who had chosen King above country, and one of them was Abigail's cousin, Samuel Quincy, the Colonel's only remaining son, an avowed Tory.

"I take a long farewell," his sister, Hannah, wrote to him for one last time. "Let it not be published that a brother of such brothers fled from his country. Can you expect to walk uprightly now? Can you take fire in your bosom and not be burned?"

Two of Col. Josiah Quincy's sons had died young. Now he had no more.

But there was no time for regrets. The work of revolution had begun. The second floor of the house at what is now 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, was a lookout from which the 66-year-old Colonel spied on British ship movements for his friend, Gen. George Washington.

A few months before, Col. Quincy watched the Royal Governor, Gen. Thomas Gage depart and he scratched on a pane of window glass the reminder: "Oct. 10, 1775. General Gage sailed for England with a fair wind."

This time he remained in the window for three days as the British tall ships moved restlessly about the Harbor as if reluctant to leave. Finally, on March 20, the last of them passed through the roadstead and out to sea.

The mansion in Wollaston reached full social flower under the aegis of the Colonel's grandson, the third Josiah, the "Great Mayor" of Boston, president of Harvard and Congressman, who called it "Tranquillia" and used it as his summer home.

It was there that the Marquis de Lafayette visited one Sunday afternoon after dinner with his friend, ex-President John Adams at the Adams Mansion. He carried flowers from the Adams garden for Mrs. Eliza Susan Quincy and her five attractive daughters.

The house was built in 1770 by the old Colonel himself, the first in a line of six Josiahs. It was said that, while most families passed their line from sire to son, the Quincys went from "Siah" to "Siah."

But, while there were six Josiahs and innumerable Edmunds, the city was named for yet another member of the prolific family — Col. John Quincy Adams, sixth president of the United States.

The house, which was painted yellow for many years, recently underwent a con-

Eliza Susan kept journals, inventories of the contents of the house and persisted in refreshing them. Her journals, spanning from 1800 to 1880, were a precious legacy to her husband. Her work is now being used by the preservation of the house, which is now the site of the Quincy House, a National Historic Landmark.

Dorothy Quincy Homestead Hancock's Other Declaration: 'I Love You And You Alone'

An aura of romance surrounds the stately old house that is set back in the trees from the corner of Hancock Street and Butler Road on the banks of Furnace Brook.

There is the wallpaper with the blue cupids and pink flowers that was imported from France for the wedding of Dorothy Quincy, the vivacious daughter of the house, to Quincy-born John Hancock, a patriot on the run with a price on his head.

There are the words "You I Love and You Alone," addressed by Hancock to his beloved Dorothy and scratched on a window pane with his diamond ring just before he fled to Lexington on the eve of the Revolution.

And there are the secret chambers and passageways, used, it was said, to hide fugitive patriots during the Revolution and at an earlier date, even certain Englishmen fleeing a charge of regicide in the death of King Charles I.

It is for those reasons, and its combined Colonial, Georgian and Victorian style, that the old house was elevated in 2005 to the status of a National Historic Landmark possessing "national significance in commemorating the history of the United States."

Parts of the house were built in 1685 by Col. Edmund Quincy, the second of the name, on land that was granted to an earlier Edmund in 1638. The major part was built in 1706 by Edmund the third.

(There were six Edmunds in all, four in a direct line, two nephews).

The house was the social center of old Braintree during the regime of the fourth Edmund, largely because he sired five beautiful daughters around whom swirled a whole future generation of judges, generals and merchant kings.

The undisputed belle of the household was Dorothy, the coquettish youngest of the eight Quincy children, whose troth was soon plighted to John Hancock, the wealthy young businessman from Boston who was already becoming known as a leader of the rebels.

Tradition has it that they were to have been married in the north parlor of the Quincy Homestead with its French cupid wallpaper when Revolution intervened and John had to flee with the British regulars on his heels.

Eventually, they were wed Aug. 28, 1775, at the home of Thaddeus Burr, uncle of Aaron Burr (later vice president of the United States and slayer of Alexander Hamilton in a duel) in Fairfield, Conn.

After the Revolution and the death of Edmund the fourth in 1788 the old house passed from the Quincy family. The Hancocks wanted nothing to do with it. Their only son, John George Washington Hancock, was killed in a skating accident at age 9 while on a visit in 1787.

The house was acquired in 1904 by the Massachusetts Society of Colonial Dames, who restored it with vintage furniture, utensils and clothing, and gave it to the state with the proviso that the Dames continue to run it.

Now that it is a National Historic Landmark, the next step for the Dorothy Quincy Homestead will be acceptance by the National Park Service as part of the Adams National Historical Park alongside the Adams Birthplaces and the Adams Mansion.

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead at the corner of Hancock St. and Butler Rd. will be open for tours of the house and gardens to the public from 1 to 4 p.m. on Saturdays, July 11, Aug. 1, Aug. 22, Sept. 12 and Oct. 3. Tours start every hour and half hour with the last tour beginning at 3:30 p.m. Special arrangements can be made for group tours. Contact the Colonial Dames at 617-742-3190 or visit www.nscda.org/ma/quincy_homestead. Admission is free but voluntary contributions may be made.

A Third Generation Continues Our Traditions.

Quincy has changed a great deal since Sweeney Funeral Home was established in 1917. But, it's nice to know some things will never change. Like the observance of traditional values and customs.

At Sweeney Funeral Homes, older residents are quick to notice the subtle reminders of yesteryear, such as the grey gloves our funeral director still wears. Like the characteristic top hat and tails that our founder, Dennis Sweeney, wore over 30 years ago, they reflect our Tradition. One that has been built on a dignified and instinctive concern for the city's bereaved families for three generations.

Today, our founder's grand-nephew, Dennis S. Sweeney has continued the family's philosophy of maintaining a beautiful, home-like atmosphere.

And like his namesake, who started pre-arrangements in the 1940s, Dennis believes in helping residents to plan for the future. Pre-planning means that this financial decision is not left for a family to decide while they are attempting to cope with a major personal loss. It's a difficult time, a time when family members are least able to make the wisest choice.

Sweeney Funeral Homes has been helping South Shore residents with difficult decisions for over 70 years. Call Dennis Sweeney at (617) 773-2728 for a free consultation. There's no time like the present.

John Adams' July 4th Toast: 'I Will Give You Independence Forever'

The centerpiece of the display in the second floor study at the Old House is John Adams' favorite armchair in which he was stricken with his final illness and offered his last testament as a Founding Father.

On June 30, 1826, four days before the nation was to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, the Rev. George Whitney and his Quincy Committee of Arrangements called on Adams.

The 90-year-old former president, who played such a vital role in the composition and passage of the Declaration, was asked to join the committee at dinner. Regretfully, the ailing old patriot declined.

Then he was asked to propose a toast for the dinner:

"I will give you 'Independence Forever!'" he said.

"Would he like to add to that?"

"Not a syllable," said the old man.

Four days later, at 6:20 in the afternoon, as cannon roared and bells rang out to celebrate a half century of independence, John Adams was dead.

On the morning of July 4, a letter went off to John Quincy Adams in Washington that his father was at death's door but, due to the slow communications of the day, he did not get the message for several days.

The Sixth President of the United States was en route home to Quincy July 9 when he got word of his father's death.

Quincy 'Capital' Of The United States

For eight months during the presidency of John Adams, Quincy could have been called the capital of the United States.

Adams spent that time running the country from his sickbed in the Old House, the Adams Mansion, while a collective epidemic raged in Philadelphia, more than 100 miles away.

Hancock's Father A Rebel Leader

The Rev. John Hancock, grandfather of the future first signer of the Declaration of Independence, was a rebel leader in his own right.

He was the minister of the Congregational Church in Cambridge's North Precinct in 1713 at a time when church and state were one in the Massachusetts Bay Colony.

The Rev. Hancock was a theocrat. When the North Precinct's successors revolted against the taxes levied by the Northbridge town, 10 miles away.

The North Precinct eventually became the town of Lexington and the good reverend inherited the community with such an iron hand that he became known as "the Bishop of Lexington."

Free Trolley Service

A free trolley service is available from the Visitors Center, 1250 Hancock St., Quincy Sq., to the Presidents John and John Quincy Adams Birthplaces.

133 and 141 Franklin St. and the "Old House", Adams National Historic Site, 135 Adams St., from 9:15 to 3:15 p.m. when the last tour is conducted.

John Hancock Richest Man?

At the start of the Revolution, Quincy-born John Hancock may have been the richest man in the Massachusetts Bay colony, having built his fortune on a 400,000-pound estate left to him by his uncle, Thomas, when he died in 1764.

First Competitive Aeromeet Here In 1910

Amelia Earhart, Harriet Quimby Pioneers

By SHARRON BEALS

Quincy plunged into the new and challenging world of aviation less than seven years after the Wright brothers proved, on a windy Carolina beach, that heavier-than-air craft could fly.

The site was a 500-acre tract of former farmland called "New Squantum," leased by the Harvard-Boston Aero Association and opened Aug. 8, 1910, as the Harvard Aviation Field.

Most of the great ones of the early days of flying showed up at Squantum at one time or another, including the Wright brothers themselves, Claude Graham-White, Richard E. Byrd and the First Ladies of the Air, Harriet Quimby and Amelia Earhart.

Quimby was the first American woman to qualify for a pilot's license in 1911 and the second in the world (Helene Dutrieu of France was the first) and the first woman to fly across the English Channel.

Earhart, who once had a financial interest in a private airport at Squantum, was the first woman to solo across the Atlantic and was trying to be the first around the world when she vanished over the Pacific in 1937.

The first competitive air show in the United States was organized by the Harvard Aero Society Sept. 3-10, 1910, and it drew 22 flyers and 17 aircraft as competitors and President William Howard Taft as one of 150,000 spectators.

Star of the meet was the Brit, Graham-White, who brought two airplanes, a Bleriot monoplane and a Farman biplane, and won $10,000 offered by the Boston Globe for a hazardous double round trip to Boston Light. He also sweetened the pot by taking passengers on short flights for $500 each.

The 1913 Harvard Meet was to have featured a competition between Quimby and Blanche Scott, the first American woman to fly a plane, for the honor of flying the first air mail flight to New York. Instead, it ended tragically.

Quimby, showing off her new two-seat Bleriot monoplane, took Meet Director William A.F. Willard for a flight around Boston Light. Returning, the plane suddenly nosed over and Quimby and Willard fell out, dropping to their deaths in Dorchester Bay 1,000 feet below.

Only then was it revealed that Quimby had already been chosen to fly the mail to New York for the first time.

The Navy took over the field in Squantum in 1917 and established the US Naval Training School, with Lt. (jg) Earl Spencer in command, to train young men in the fast developing art of flying airplanes.

Spencer and his wife, the former Wallis Warfield, the Belle of Baltimore, lived on Davis Street in Wollaston, where neighbors thought she was a bit stuck up and snobbish and nicknamed her "the

HARRIET QUIMBY

AMELIA EARHART

Duchess.

Twenty years later, twice divorced, she gained a real title, the Duchess of Windsor, when she married the former King Edward VIII of England, who gave up his throne "for the woman I love."

Squantum's first reign as a training field didn't last long once the Navy discovered that the best use of the land was as a shipyard for the building of destroyers to break the German U-Boat blockade of the Atlantic during World War I.

It wasn't until 1923 that the Squantum Naval Reserve Station was established, commanded by Lt. Richard E. Byrd, with one old weather-beaten hangar and one ancient seaplane, held together, they said "by wire, curses and prayers."

Thus, Naval Reserve Aviation was born.

Used For Bunker Hill Monument, King's Chapel, Other Landmarks Quincy's Granite Was Famed The World Over

They're just holes in the ground now, attractive and perilous nuisances that, over the years, have filled with water and lured swimmers to their dooms, unaware of the dangers that lie in the cool green depths.

But there was a time, more than 100 years ago, when the Quincy granite quarries swarmed with workmen hacking out stone that was sought as prime building material around the world.

Like Topsy, the granite industry in Quincy "just grewed."

The earliest settlers used the surface boulders found on the North and South Commons to build the foundations of their homes and the fences that separated them from their neighbors.

At the industry's height in the late 1800s, there were more than 30 operating quarries.

The first known use of Quincy granite as a building material was the town's second meeting house in 1666, a scant 41 years after the first settlement at Mount Wollaston.

The stone building served a dual purposes. Sometimes it was a church where the community worshipped; other times it served as a fort in case of an Indian attack.

Quarrying in general was in its infancy, an inexact science in those days.

The process of cutting a rock to size was simple — build a fire around it, then drop an iron ball or cold water on the rock, which would break at approximately the desired spot.

GRANITE WORKERS, many of them immigrants who learned their craft in Italy and the Scandinavian countries, are memorialized with a statue of Quincy granite in the Granite Workers Park on Copeland St., West Quincy. There were as many as 4,000 working in the Quincy quarries during the "Stone Age" of American architecture.

Later, the quarrymen used wooden wedges which expanded when wet to split the stone, then sledges and hammers introduced by German immigrants, finally iron wedges.

These were the methods used to obtain granite to build King's Chapel in Boston (1753), the State Prison in Charlestown (1815), the Dedham jail (1817) and St. Paul's Church in Boston (1820).

That was the situation when Solomon Willard decided to commemorate the Battle of Bunker Hill (actually, Breed's Hill) by building a monument out of Quincy granite.

The problem was that no one had ever built with such large pieces of stone before and no one knew how to quarry it or work it or transport it to the building location.

Willard, who quit his job as an architect and moved to Quincy to direct quarrying operations for the Bunker Hill Monument, had to devise new methods for quarrying and transporting the stone.

The plan was to use a horse-drawn derrick to move the granite blocks from the quarry to the railroad station in Quincy, then to the stone yard in Boston, and finally to the monument site.

Willard's derrick was built and was inaugurated in 1825. The Stone Age of American architecture and the Quincy granite industry were ushered along with it.

Quincy granite, famous for its durability and its ability to take a fine polish, was shipped all over the world under the trademarks "Quincy Granite," "Quincy Dark" and "Quincy Light Dark."

The demise of the granite industry started after World War I, when lighter and more malleable building materials were developed with which to construct stronger and less costly buildings.

The last operating quarry, Sargent's, went out of business in 1963.

Adams' Crucial Nominations

John Adams, the farmer's son from Old Braintree, not only had a hand in writing the U.S. Constitution but he made two nominations to posts that proved to be critical to the future of the new republic.

As a member of the Continental Congress, he eschewed intercolonial rivalries and nominated George Washington as Virginia planter as Commander in Chief of the Continental army.

As president, he nominated John Marshall as Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court. He served 34 years and established the basic principle that the Supreme Court can invalidate laws of Congress.

John Quincy Adams: 6th President And More

tary of the treasury; John Calhoun, the secretary of war; Adams; and Jackson, the Tennessean hero of the Battle of New Orleans and the spokesman of the great unwashed.

Jackson won the popular vote, 155,872 to 105,321 for Adams and the electoral vote with 99 to 84 for Adams, 41 for Crawford and 39 for Clay but, since no one had a majority, the election was thrown into the Congress which selected Adams.

Reaction to his first message to Congress, a bid to expand the presidential powers far beyond what some saw as their Constitutional limits, showed clearly that the so-called Era of Good Feeling in the Madison and Monroe Administrations was over.

His most virulent opposition came from the South whenever one of his proposals was thought to impinge upon the "peculiar institution" of slavery and his early opposition to the removal of the Creek Indians to land west of the Mississippi.

By the time the four years of his administration had passed, the Democrat-Republicans had split into Democrats and National Republicans and Jackson, "the people's president," had trounced Adams in the electoral college 178 to 83.

Although Adams tried to steer clear of the worst parts, the 1828 campaign was so dirty, chiefly in its attacks on Jackson's wife, Rachel, that the president-elect refused to meet with the outgoing president before his inauguration.

Consequently, Adams's like his father before him, refused to attend his successor's inauguration, the only two presidents to do so.

He took a year to rest, then ran for the House from the South Shore District. Now running as a Whig, he easily defeated a Democrat and a Federalist for the post, which rejuvenated his interest in public service.

Some say John Quincy's best work was done in the interests of human rights after he left the White House in 1829. It included a vote of censure in the House of Representatives, which was defeated by a vote of 105 to 80.

At the age of 74, he took on the case of 35 Africans, kidnapped in their homeland and bound for slavery in Cuba, and waxed so eloquent before the Supreme Court that they were freed and sent home over the protests of the new president.

His particular target was known as the Gag Rule which said that "all petitions, memorials, resolutions, propositions or papers relating . . . to the subject of slavery shall be laid upon the table and that no further action whatever shall be had thereon."

It was passed in 1836 and he fought it tooth and nail until it was rescinded in 1844.

On Feb. 21, 1848, as he rose to his feet to speak against a commendation for those who had won the war with Mexico, which he opposed, 80-year-old John Quincy Adams suffered a massive stroke. He died two days later in the Capitol.

Battlefields Of Quincy

Although it furnished fighting men and leaders in the Revolution, Quincy (Old Braintree then) escaped without a pitched battle being fought on its shores.

The Minutemen of Quincy, however, did take part in a number of local skirmishes, harassing the Redcoats even after most of them had left Boston March 17, 1775.

On Sunday morning, May 21, 1775, three British sloops dropped anchor in the Fore River not far off Germantown.

The Quincy company, under the command of Elihu Adams, John Adams' brother, drove them off as they raided Sheep Island in nearby Weymouth.

On the night of July 9, 1775, a

Quincy company of 300 men put out in whale-boats from Germantown and seized cattle, sheep and enemy soldiers from Long Island, under the noses of the British troops.

A few days later, another company of men, leaving Moon Island off Squantum in whale-boats, set fire to a house and barn on Long Island under fire from the British fleet.

On Sunday evening, July 29, 1775, a group of men left Squantum in whale-boats, overpowered a guard and burned Boston Light, the beacon that guided ships into Boston Harbor.

The British fleet left Boston Harbor Oct. 10, 1775.

WWII Famed Figure 'Kilroy Was Here' At Quincy Shipyard

"Kilroy was here!"

It seemed like the words were everywhere 62 years ago.

They greeted the first American GIs to arrive at the Imperial Palace in war-torn Tokyo in the late summer of 1945 and they mystified Stalin in the men's room at Yalta.

"Kilroy was here!"

He really wasn't but in a way he was.

It all began in 1942 in Bethlehem Steel's Fore River Shipyard in Quincy where James J. Kilroy was employed as a checker whose job it was to count the number of holes filled by a riveter.

Kilroy's job was important to the riveters since they were paid by the number of rivets they drove. Kilroy would go around and count them and check each with a chalk mark.

Some riveters would wait until the checker had gone and then erase the last chalk mark. Another checker would count the rivet a second time and the riveter would get paid twice for the same work.

One day, Kilroy overheard his boss ask a riveter if Kilroy had checked a certain rivet. No, said the riveter. That made Kilroy mad because he knew he had checked that particular rivet.

He grabbed a piece of chalk, went over to where the two men were standing and scribbled "Kilroy was here!" in large, bold letters right next to the check mark. It soon became his standard practice.

Ordinarily, the chalk mark would be covered up by paint. But this was wartime and some ships left the Yard too fast to be fully painted.

The enigmatic "Kilroy was here!" began appearing all over the world, most by a drawing of a man's head peering over a wall.

The mysterious message fascinated GIs. Soon they began writing it themselves on walls in the most unlikely places like the Imperial Palace in Tokyo and the men's room at Yalta.

When the war ended, the message disappeared. But it was not until the 1960s that it was rediscovered. In 1962, a man named John J. Kilroy, who was not related to James J. Kilroy, was working at the Imperial Palace in Tokyo. He found the message and wrote it down. He then wrote a book about it, "Kilroy Was Here: The Story of the Man Who Discovered the Message." The book was a best-seller and the message became a popular cultural reference.

Moswetuset Hummock

'Birthplace Of Massachusetts'

It was only a tiny spot of land no bigger than a football field on the Quincy shore but it gave its name to the state of Massachusetts.

As the historian Neal recalled it in his History of New England, published a hundred years after the Pilgrims landed in 1721...

"The Sachem or Sagamore who governed the Indians in this part of the country, when the English first came hither, had his seat on a small hill, or hummock, containing perhaps an acre and a half, about two leagues to the southward of Boston, which hill or hummock lies in the shape of an Indians' arrow-head, which arrow-heads are called in their language Mos, or Mons, with the O nasal, and hill in their language is Wetuset; hence, this great Sachem's seat was called Moswetuset, which signifies a hill in the shape of an arrow-head, and his subjects, the Moswetuset Indians, from whence with small variation of the word, the Province received the name Massachusetts."

The little wooded hillock near the junction of East Squantum Street and Quincy Shore Drive was once the seat of the sachem Chickatabot, who comes down through the pages of Quincy history as a rather pathetic figure.

He was the chief of the Moswetuset Indians, once a great tribe that occupied the coast north of Plymouth.

(Robert Bosworth Photo)

A few years before, under the great sachem Nanepashemet, the Moswetuset had been able to field some 3,000 warriors for a war with a neighboring tribe. Nanepashemet was killed.

Then came the plague.

In two years the mighty Moswetuset were all but wiped out. No more than 60 of them were left to till their fields on the banks of the Neponset River. Sachem Chickatabot fled his home on a hill in Wollaston and took refuge on Moswetuset

Hummock.

That was the situation in 1621 when Capt. Myles Standish landed from a shallop with an exploring party of Pilgrims from Plymouth that included the Indian guide Squanto (or Tsquantum) whose name was given to the peninsula that stuck out in the bay. They called it Squantum.

The tragic Chickatabot died not long after the Pilgrims' visit and he was succeeded as sachem by his son, Josiah Wampatuck, a boy who knew a good deal when he saw one.

Wampatuck sold what was left of his virtually deserted tribal lands to a group of whites for 12 pounds, 10 shillings. The land included most of what is today the city of Quincy and the towns of Braintree, Randolph and Holbrook.

Moswetuset Hummock, identified by a marker stone and maintained in its natural state, is open to the public.

There is no admission charge.

The Granite Railway

First Commerical Railroad In U.S.

It was the darndest looking contraption that many among the distinguished gathering had ever seen.

Each of the three wagons had four wheels, six and one half feet in diameter, surmounted by a smaller gear wheel which was used to raise and lower the cargo platform that was slung low between the wheels.

It rode on foot-high wooden rails, topped by iron plate, which rested on stone sleepers or cross ties, placed eight feet apart and firmly supported on crushed granite to a depth beyond the frost line.

On Saturday, Oct. 7, 1826, the wagons were laden with 16 tons of the finest Quincy granite and the opening day guests were properly amazed when a single horse moved the whole thing with ease more than three miles to a special wharf on the Neponset River.

The granite blocks, a particularly hard and weather-resistant stone capable of taking a brilliant polish, were en route to Charlestown, where they were building a monument to the Battle of Bunker Hill.

The Granite Railway, the first such commercial venture in the United States, was built specifically to transport stone for the Bunker Hill Monument.

That it became successful, and a model for others around the country, is a tribute to three vastly dissimilar men, the engineer Gridley Bryant, the architect Solomon Willard and the financier, Colonel Thomas Handasyd Perkins.

Bryant was 27 at the time but already an engineer of note. He invented the eight wheeled railroad car and, when a fellow named Ross Winans of Baltimore sued to establish a patent on it, Bryant was able to prove his claim to the satisfaction of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Willard, then 43, was a great bear of a man, gentle, obliging, industrious. Frivolity, it was said, was alien to him and he was never known to run. He could be crotchety, too. He was a carpenter turned wood-carver, turned stone-carver and, finally, architect.

Perkins was the autocratic, 52-year-old merchant king of Boston who was said to have been offered the post of Secretary of the Navy by President Washington and turned it down with the observation that he owned more ships than the Navy.

It was Perkins who lobbied the Railway's charter through a puzzled and obstinate State Legislature, which had never been called upon to incorporate a commercial railroad before. It was Perkins who financed it, too, largely with his own money.

THE GRANITE RAILWAY

Even in its early days, the Granite Railway was a tourist attraction of some magnitude.

Daniel Webster, who used to stop off for a pick-me-up in Quincy en route from Boston and Washington to his home in Marshfield, viewed it and decided that it would never succeed because of the frost that would form on the rails in the winter.

The President of the United States, a local boy named John Quincy Adams, visited in August, 1827, got caught in a thunderstorm and took shelter in a shed where Willard's stone-cutters were hacking away at monument granite.

A group of visitors were riding up the Railway's incline in an empty car on July 25, 1832, when the chain broke and catapulted them over a 40-foot cliff. One was killed in what may have been the first railroad fatality in the United States.

The Granite Railway Co. survived until 1870, some 27 years after the Bunker Hill Monument was finished, when most of its track was taken over by the Old Colony Railroad, which in turn became a division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford.

Today much of the roadbed, over which freight moved commercially on rails for the first time in America, is buried under the macadam of the Southeast Expressway.

The incline of the old Railway has been restored and is located at the dead end of Mullin Ave. in West Quincy. It is open to the public year around, 24 hours a day. There is no admission charge.

Dunkin' Donuts Got Quincy Start

Ruth Gordon, Howard Johnson, Lee Remick, Billy DeWolfe Born Here

Teachers dubbed the Class of 1914 the "worst class" ever at Quincy High School because no one made the honor roll. Too bad they couldn't have looked ahead to the future of Ruth G. Jones.

A year later, armed with a new name, Ruth Gordon, she was on a train bound for New York with a year's tuition to the American Academy of Dramatic Arts and $50 in spending money pinned to her corset.

Ruth Gordon went on to fame and fortune as an actress on the Broadway stage and the Hollywood movie studios and as a writer of short stories and plays with her husband, Garson Kanin.

She won an Academy Award as best supporting actress in 1969 for her role as a Satanist in "Rosemary's Baby," and an Emmy in 1979 for her one-time role in the sitcom "Taxi."

Ruth Gordon never forgot her roots in Quincy, returning frequently to attend class reunions. Her last visit was in 1984 for the dedication of the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater in Merrymount Park.

She died in 1985 at the age of 88.

His name too was Jones, William Andrew Jones, and, as a teen-aged usher in the old Quincy Theater, where vaudeville persisted into the 1920s, he used to dream of performing himself.

But Billy Jones was such a common name, he thought, so he borrowed the name of the Quincy Theater manager and as Billy DeWolfe he became a dancer and comic in movies on TV.

He visited his old home town almost yearly and when he died in 1974 at the age of 67, he was buried in the Jones family plot in Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

The year was 1925 when 27-year-old Howard Johnson, a failure as a cigar salesman, took over a rundown drug store with a newspaper franchise and a marble soda fountain on Beale Street in Wollaston.

Soon he began making his own ice cream — 28 flavors eventually — and then he had a seaside snack shack on Wollaston Beach Boulevard and a restaurant in the tallest building in downtown Quincy.

Just then, by coincidence, Eugene O'Neill's latest play, "Strange Interlude," was banned in Boston so the producers moved it to the Quincy Theater, just up Hancock Street from the Howard Johnson restaurant in the then Granite Trust Bank.

It was a long play, so the sellout audiences were given an hour and a half dinner break at intermission so the place to go was Johnson's restaurant where the special, chicken pies, were $1 apiece.

Eventually, Howard Johnson franchised restaurants and motels, with their familiar orange roofs, spanned the continent, truly, in their own words, "a landmark for hungry Americans."

Bill Rosenberg was just shy of his 30th birthday when he bought a used delivery truck, invested $5,000 in a modest kitchen in an old butcher shop and opened the Industrial Luncheon Service.

He stocked the truck with coffee, sandwiches and doughnuts and made his first stop at the Boston Gear Works in North Quincy, where he sold his first cup of coffee for a nickel.

He had 144 canteen trucks by 1950 when he decided a retail store would be more profitable so he started a shop called the "Open Kettle" on Southern Artery in Quincy.

That name didn't stick on so Rosenberg called a brainstorming session "What do you do with a doughnut?" asked the architect Bernard Healy, rhetorically. "You dunk it."

And the name "Dunkin' Donuts" was born.

RUTH GORDON

BILLY DeWOLFE

HOWARD JOHNSON

LEE REMICK

For years, another Quincy native, upscale diner, Howard Johnson and State St. Quincy, but not to be confused with Lee Remick, the actor, the artist, the model, the actor, and the actor.

She burst into Quincy as the movie queen, married Andy Griffith in "A Face in the Crowd," and followed him up as the alcoholic wife with Jack Lemmon, in "Days of Wine and Roses."

She died in 1991 at the age of 55.

His real name was William Szathmar, but he changed it to an easier-to-remember Bill Dana when he appeared on the screen as a writer and sometime port actor on the old Steve Allen Show.

The 1942 graduate of Quincy High School, Dana moved to New York, where he became a writer and actor, and then a comedian in the entertainment world as the comic with the "Duke" and "Duke" comedy duo, Jimmie.

John Adams And Sons

Politics, war and sons were on John Adams' mind in a letter written to his wife, Abigail Adams, in 1780.

"I must study politics and war, that my sons may have liberty to study mathematics and philosophy."

"My sons ought to study mathematics and philosophy, geography, natural history and naval architecture, navigation, commerce and agriculture in order to give their sons the right to study painting, poetry, music, architecture, statuary, tapestry and porcelain."

Quincy Adams Yacht Yard

The Fore River Shipyard was not the only shipbuilding facility in Quincy that helped to win World War II.

There was also the Quincy Adams Yacht Yard on the Town River in Germantown, which turned from building private yachts when war broke out to constructing wooden-hulled submarine chasers.

At one time, the yacht yard was turning out SC-boats at the rate of two a month to help destroy the German U-boat menace and win the Battle of the North Atlantic and preserve the supply line to Britain.

The yard won the coveted Navy "E" for excellence six times.

Adams

Last Survivor

John Adams, who died only a few hours after Thomas Jefferson on July 4, 1825, outlived all but one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

The last survivor of the signers was Charles Carroll of Carrollton, Maryland, who died in 1832 at the age of 95. Adams died at 90.

Captain Who?

The original settlement of Quincy was made as a trading post in 1625 by an all male company led by a Captain Wollaston, who was so obscure that his first name has been lost to history.

A few years ago, the historian Hobart Holly, after exhaustive research, concluded that his first name was probably Richard — but, still, nobody knows for sure.

Newly Weds Pass Up Quincy

Dennis Airport had a plane ready to take Charles Lamborgh and his bride, Ann Morrow, to Maine on their honeymoon in 1929.

But the newlyweds, who were on their way to Cape Cod, passed up Quincy.

Clipper Ships From Quincy

Some of the finest specimen of the famed clipper ships — sailing vessels that carried cargoes to and from China at high speeds, were launched and fitted in Quincy.

The first was the "Red Cloud," launched Nov. 24, 1877, named the shipyard of Deane, Mearns & Co. on Granite Wharf in Quincy. It was built for the Rivers Trading Co. of New York.

Final Toast

On July 1, 1825, four days before the nation was to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, the chairman of the Committee of Arrangements in Quincy, called on John Adams.

The 90-year-old former president who played such a vital role in the formation and passage of the declaration was asked to join the committee at dinner. Regretfully, the ailing old patriot declined.

Then he was asked to propose a toast for the dinner.

"I will give 'Independence Forever!'" he said.

Would he like to add to that? "Not a syllable," said the old man. Four days later, he was dead.

Hotbed Of Revoution

The meeting place of the Sons of Liberty in Quincy, during the revolution, was Brackett's Tavern, where the Liberty Tree was planted at the corner of Hancock and Elm Streets.

It is a monument to the American Revolution.

Fog Halts Mail

An attempt to deliver mail by air from the Squantum NASF, the SS Levant, nearly 400 miles out to sea, failed in 1927 when the others couldn't find the ship in the fog.

Lt. Clarence H. Schildhauer and his crew of three searched for three hours before giving up.

Amelia Earhart, Harriet Quimby Pioneers

Later, as Admiral Byrd, the young lieutenant became renowned for his flights over the North and South Poles and the establishment of the Little America research station on the Antarctic continent.

Of the many officers who served at Squantum, none stand out more than Commander John J. Shea, executive officer from 1931 to 1940, when he went to war as air operations officer aboard the aircraft carrier Wasp.

Wasp was sunk Sept. 15, 1942, and Jack Shea was last seen "fighting the fire on the flight deck displaying great courage and devotion to duty, and disregarding the danger of exploding ammunition and debris filling the air and rapidly spreading the fire."

His last letter to his 5-year-old son, Jack Jr., written just before he was lost, became a classic in wartime literature, read in part:

"When you are a little bigger you will know why your daddy is not home so much anymore. You know we have a big country and we have ideals as to how people should live and enjoy the riches of it and how each is born with equal rights to life, freedom and the pursuit of happiness.

"Unfortunately, there are some countries in this world where they do not have these ideals, where a boy cannot grow up to be what he wants to be with no limit on his opportunities to be a great man such as a great priest, statesman, doctor, soldier, business man, etc.

"Because there are people in countries who want to change our nation, its ideals, its form of government and way of life we must leave our homes and families to fight. Fighting for the defense of our country, ideals, homes and honor is an honor and a duty which your daddy has to do before he can come home and settle down with you and mother.

"When it is done he is coming home to be with you always and forever. So wait just a little while longer. I'm afraid it will be more than the two weeks you told me on the phone.

"... Last of all don't ever forget your daddy. Pray for him to come back and if it is God's will that he does not, be the kind of a boy and man your daddy wants you to be."

Shea received the Navy Cross for his action aboard the dying Wasp. The field at Squantum NAS was named Shea Field. And his name is memorialized in the Quincy street called Commander Shea Boulevard.

Even while the Navy was training its reserve flyers, it leased a portion of its property to Quincy architect Harold T. Dennison to open a commercial airport in 1927 with Amelia Earhart as one of his five backers.

Earhart was one of the passengers on the first official flight out of Dennison Airport and, as a resident of Medford and a social worker in Boston, she visited the field in Squantum frequently to hone her own flying skills for aviation feats yet to come.

Instructors at Dennison taught flying during the week and took passengers joy riding on Sundays. It wasn't unusual for 1,000 persons to show up for a short hop at 50 cents and a longer one at $2.50 to $5 on a good weekend. But even that wasn't enough.

Dennison, as president of the Dennison Airport Kennel Club Inc., tried to open a dog track on the site in 1935 but it was turned down. Said City Councillor John R. Shaughnessy: "There is nothing lower than a dog track. Three of the six operated in Illinois were controlled by Al Capone."

The coming of World War II meant a revival of training at the Squantum Naval Air Station and the demise of commercial aviation at Dennison Airport as the Navy cancelled its lease and added a concrete surface to the runways and extended them until they were a half a mile long.

After the war, on July 1, 1946, the Squantum Naval Air Station became a Naval Reserve Training Base where for the next seven years thousands of officers and enlisted men and women - the Weekend Warriors - came each weekend for training.

Squantum's glorious aviation history came to an end in 1953 due to the rapid expansion of Logan Airport which placed Quincy in the path of jetliners approaching the East Boston field for a landing. Clearly, one of them had to go and, just as clearly, it was Squantum.

Today, Squantum's pioneer flying days of Harriet Quimby, Amelia Earhart, Commander John J. Shea and Captain Harry Sartoris live on in the Aviation History Information Center at the Beechwood Community Life Center where the old Dennison Airport once held sway.

USS SALEM
(Quincy Sun Photo Robert Noble)

Centerpiece Of U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum

USS Salem Flagship Of The Sixth Fleet

Although she never fired a shot in anger, the heavy cruiser USS Salem at the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum stands for all the ships that were built at Bethlehem Steel's Fore River Shipyard, a mighty armada that helped beat Hitler and Tojo.

Salem was ordered during World War II but launched in 1947 after hostilities had ceased and commissioned in 1949 to become the flagship of the U. S. Navy's Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean during the Cold War years in the 1950s.

At 716 feet, six inches in length and 17,000 tons displacement with a crew of 109 officers and 1,690 enlisted men and eight-inch/55 caliber guns in three triple turrets, she was the bulwark of democracy in the Mediterranean and Caribbean Seas.

Salem and her crew earned the praise of the king and queen of Greece for their work in providing relief supplies and humanitarian aid for four days as the first ship on the scene after an earthquake ravaged the Greek islands in 1953.

She was at sea bound for a new billet in Villafrance on the French Riviera in 1956 when fighting broke out between Israel and Egypt and she was diverted to the islands of Rhodes to assure safe passage of American and other ships through the Suez Canal.

Salem was on active duty for 10 years, decommissioned in 1959 and berthed in the Atlantic Reserve Fleet in Philadelphia; then brought back to its birthplace in Quincy and recommissioned in 1995 as a member of the Historic Naval Ships Association.

She features tours of the main deck, the number three turret, the admiral's and captain's bridges, the quarters on the second deck where the crew lived and worked, an extensive model ship collection and the region's only Navy SEAL display.

The ship is also home to the Cruiser Sailor Museum as well as museums dedicated to the USS St. Paul and USS Newport News, sister ships of Salem. The museum's archives are open for research and viewing an extensive collection of armaments, uniforms and memorabilia.

The USS Salem at the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum is located at 739 Washington St., at the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy Point. Hours of escorted and self-guided tours include: Summer - Daily June through September, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Winter - Saturday and Sunday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Kilroy's mini-golf, June through September, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission: $5 per person. Active military adults with ID cards are admitted free of charge. Flat-heeled shoes or sneakers are recommended.

Rx Medicine Drop-off Day

Clean-out your medicine cabinet and bring the contents to the Quincy Police Station

Studies show that children can begin a lifetime of drug addiction by simply opening the medicine cabinet at home. Drugs such as OxyContin, oxycodone, hydrocodone, morphine, codeine, Percocet, Darvocet, Vicodin and Lortab have all been linked to opiate addiction. Also there is concern about medications in the water supply not being adequately cleared by water treatment plants. Never flush medicine of any type down the toilet or drain.

What to Bring: In original container, all pharmaceuticals (prescription and over-the-counter) will be accepted. This includes pills, liquids, capsules, inhalers, patches, etc. Pet meds accepted.

Include all expired prescription medicines and any non-prescription medicines more than 2 years old.

Antibiotics should be disposed of regardless of expiration date.

Old skin care products can become tainted with bacteria and harm your skin—some experts suggest disposing of anything you haven't used in three months.

Throw out sunscreen that is more than 2 years old.

Black-out personal information from all prescription bottles. Please preserve the part of the label that identifies the medication if at all possible.

What Not to Bring: No sharps (needles), or aerosols.

A Police Officer and pharmacist will be onsite to answer any questions and accept your unused medication.

Trash in Quincy is down 2,300 tons for fiscal year 2009.

Recycling is up to 4,500 tons for the same period.

Quincy's recycling rate is currently 15%.

We can do it.
